WALES

Rough Sleepers

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the amounts of funding allocated by the Welsh Office for rough sleepers' initiatives in Wales for winter (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99. [62641]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: £314,000 was paid in grant for projects to help rough sleepers in 1997–98. Of this £32,000 was for schemes to provide support over the winter period. All eligible bids were met.

£350,000 has been allocated for rough sleeping projects in the current year. Local authorities, working with the voluntary sector, have been invited to submit bids by 14 December for grants to provide further assistance over this winter.

European Forum Report

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if it is his intention to publish the report drawn up by the European Forum on Wales and the European Union; and if he will make a statement. [62394]

Mr. Michael: I shall arrange for the Report to be published as soon as possible.

National Assembly

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what quality control measures he plans to put in place for the design and construction of the National Assembly. [62260]

Mr. Michael: The building and material performance criteria were specified in the Design Concept Brief used for the design competition. The selected Architect will now proceed to produce a building specification working in partnership with a Management Contractor to be appointed under EU procurement rules. This will establish the quality of materials and workmanship to be provided. Ensuring those standards are met will be the responsibility of the Project Manager in conjunction with the Management Contractor. Welsh Office officials will continue to maintain overall control of the project by means of regular progress meetings and site inspections.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Schools

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will publish (a) details of those schools presently under consideration as major capital expenditure projects by the Department of Education for Northern Ireland, (b) the estimated cost at each school and (c) the date on which DENI accepted that each school satisfied the criteria for category 1, 2 or 3 status. [61837]

Mr. McFall: There are over 200 major works projects on the Schools Capital Priorities Planning List and I will write to the hon. Gentleman giving details of these schemes and place a copy in the Library of the House. Estimated costs are not available for many of the schemes which are at a very early stage of planning or where planning has been suspended.

There are 125 projects in priority categories 1, 2 and 3. All projects in these categories have received approval to take forward detailed planning. Information is not readily available about the dates each project entered the Planning List and this could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

ME

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what level of funding will be made available by the Department of Health and Social Services in 1999 to provide a regional support office in Northern Ireland for myalgic encephalomyelitis sufferers and their carers. [61836]

Mr. McFall: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Belfast, South (Rev. Martin Smyth) on 2 December 1998, Official Report, column 200.

Petroleum Products

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the terms of the contract established by the Western Education and Library Board in 1998 for the purchase of petroleum products in the Irish Republic. [61919]

Mr. McFall: A contract for the provision of fuel products was awarded by the Western Education and Library Board to Diesel Card Ireland Limited following open competitive tendering procedure. The contract is for the period 1 September 1998 to 31 August 1999; and its total value is £46,500 (Irish) for the provision of some 117,500 litres of fuel.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the policy of the Government on the purchase by Government departments and agencies in Northern Ireland of petroleum products in the Republic of Ireland. [61920]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Government Departments and their Agencies in Northern Ireland buy fuel under EC compliant contractual arrangements which have been established by the Buying Agency in Great Britain in collaboration with the Government Purchasing Agency, Northern Ireland.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many representations she has received in 1998 about the smuggling of petroleum products into Northern Ireland from the Irish Republic; and if she will make a statement. [61923]

Mr. Ingram: The Secretary of State has received several representations about this matter and these have been referred to the various agencies concerned.

It is recognised that is a serious problem in revenue terms and disadvantages legitimate traders, and my Department together with the RUC and HM Customs and Excise are developing a co-ordinated and intelligence driven strategy to address this issue.

Punishment Shootings and Beatings

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) punishment beatings and (b) punishment shootings took place in Northern Ireland in the weeks ending (i) 14 November, (ii) 21 November and (iii) 28 November; and how many in each category in each period were committed by (1) Loyalists and (2) Republicans. [61838]

Mr. Ingram: The table shows the number of casualties as a result of paramilitary style attacks for the three-week period 8 November to 28 November 1998:

	Shootings		Assaults
Date	By Loyalist	By Republican	By Loyalist	By Republican
8 November-14 November	0	0	2	1
15 November-21 November	1	0	0	0
22 November-28 November	1	1	2	2
Totals	2	1	4	3

Finbarr Ross

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made to date in respect of the application to the United States authorities for the extradition of Finbarr Ross to Northern Ireland to answer charges related to the collapse of International Investments Ltd. (Gibraltar). [62105]

Marjorie Mowlam: Mr. Ross was arrested in the United States in March this year. His extraditions was ordered on 14 April. Mr. Ross appealed to the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals, which heard his case on 19 November.

Peace Process

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the current state of the Peace Process; and if she will make a statement. [62196]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 3 December 1998]: Considerable progress has been made in implementing the Belfast Agreement including elections to the new Assembly and the election of a First Minister and Deputy First Minister. Reviews of policing and criminal justice are also underway. New initiatives for victims have been announced. The Northern Ireland Act 1998 is now law and work on establishing the Human Rights Commission and Equality Commission has commenced. Security measures are being reduced appropriately and the early release scheme is operational. In addition a wide range of related preparatory work is also under way both within Government and the Assembly to prepare for the formal transfer of power to the Assembly next year. An important element of this is the present consultations on the number of Ministerial offices and on areas for North/South co-operation. I look forward to agreement on these and the full implementation of all aspects of the Agreement together with the launch of the various new institutions early in 1999.

CABINET OFFICE

Information Warfare

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will place in the Library copies of the speeches to be made by Cabinet Office officials David Fisher and Edna Chivers to the conference on information warfare to be held at the Royal United Services Institute on 2 December. [61672]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I am pleased to confirm that copies of these speeches will be placed in the Library of the House.

Meetings (Liberal Democrats)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many meetings he has had since 11 November with the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith) in connection with the statement made on that date by the Prime Minister and the Leader of the Liberal Democrats; how long each meeting lasted; and how many are planned to be held. [61644]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I have had one meeting with the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed to discuss our review of the work of the Joint Consultative Committee. It took place on 12 November and lasted approximately one hour. We plan to have at least one further meeting.

Cabinet Joint Consultative Committee

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what role he has in the determination of the Liberal Democrat membership of the Cabinet Joint Consultative Committee. [61645]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: None.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Growth Promoters

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes the European Commission is proposing to the authorisations currently in force concerning the use of low-level antibiotics as growth promoters in animal feed; and if he will make a statement. [62294]

Mr. Rooker: The Commission has proposed the suspension of four antibiotic growth promoters, bacitracin zinc, spiramycin, virginiamycin and tylosin phosphate, with effect from 1 January 1999. There would be provision allowing Member States not to operate the suspension until 30 June 1999. The suspension would be re-examined before 31 December 2000 following the results of monitoring for antibiotic resistance in farm animals.

The proposal failed to achieve a qualified majority in favour at the Commission's Standing Committee on Animal Nutrition on 2 December. It is therefore likely to be presented to the Agriculture Council on 14/15 December.

Marketing Co-operatives

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to encourage the establishment of marketing co-operatives in the agricultural sector. [62190]

Mr. Rooker: I wish to encourage all forms of collaborative marketing, not just co-operatives.

My noble Friend, Lord Donoughue, and Ben Gill, President of the National Farmers' Union, launched a major MAFF and NFU initiative to stimulate interest in collaborative marketing on 29 November, at the Royal Smithfield Show.

The benefits of collaboration for our primary producers include increased scale, of the kind demanded by today's big customers; access to professional marketing, technical and administrative support; cohesive negotiating ability; improved supply chain communication; and the many other benefits that come through bigger businesses.

Over the coming months the NFU will hold some 36 focus group discussions around the country both to highlight these benefits to producers and to identify barriers to producer involvement. Key issues identified will, if appropriate, be addressed through the MAFF seminar programme. There will also be a number of open days at successful farmer controlled businesses, next Spring. We aim to report progress at next year's Royal Show.

Over-30-months Scheme

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to review the over thirty months scheme; and if he will make a statement. [62189]

Mr. Rooker: The Over Thirty Months Scheme is an EU scheme, the rules of which are set by the European Commission. The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee have identified criteria against which the controls on beef over thirty months of age can be reviewed in the future and hope to begin to address this at the meeting planned for March 1999. The Committee recognises that this will require careful study and will almost certainly need to be considered over several meetings. In the light of the Committee's conclusions, and after consultation with all interested parties, the Government will consider what changes to the scheme (if any) could be made consistent with the continued protection of public health and which they might then recommend to the Commission for its consideration.

Milk Quota

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many holders of milk quota were not using that quota for their own production in (a) 1998–99, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1996–97. [62191]

Mr. Rooker: According to the quota register maintained by the Intervention Board Executive Agency, in 1996–97 4,685 quota holders out of a total of 38,185 milk quota holders leased out all their milk quota rather than producing against it. Similarly in 1997–98, 5,284 out of 37,087 quota holders leased out all their quota. There are no figures available, as yet, for the 1998–99 quota year.

Veterinary Research

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the financial support given by the Government for veterinary research for each of the last five years. [62112]

Mr. Rooker: We have provided financial support for veterinary research over the last five financial years as follows:

£ million

Year	Amount
1994–95	23.9
1997–98	27.9

The research has underpinned our policies on animal welfare and protection, diseases of animals, meat hygiene and public health, transmissible spongiform encephalopathies, veterinary medicines and brucellosis and TB eradication.

Slaughterhouse Owners

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans the Government have to give financial assistance to slaughterhouse owners. [62320]

Mr. Rooker: None.

Animal Foodstuffs Advisory Committee

Ms Shipley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Advisory Committee on Animal Foodstuffs (a) was set up and (b) plans to meet. [61193]

Mr. Rooker: The Ministry has now completed an extensive consultation exercise on the remit of the Committee and sought nominations for its membership.

We are moving ahead as quickly as possible, whilst at the same time working to the Nolan principles. Accordingly, the selection and appointment of chairman and members will be based on merit, openness and equal opportunity. The Committee is likely to have its first meeting by the middle of next year, considerably in advance of the Food Standards Agency being established.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Women Prisoners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women held in prisons in England and Wales on 1 November had a child or children with them. [62022]

Mr. George Howarth: On 1 November 1998, 53 women had their babies with them in the four mother and baby units in the female prison estate.

Mr. Farrakhan

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make a final decision on the application of Mr. Farrakhan to visit the United Kingdom. [62285]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Earlier this year, my right hon. Friend carried out a full review of Mr. Farrakhan's exclusion from the United Kingdom. My right hon. Friend was minded to continue the exclusion, but invited representations to be made. Those representations are being given careful consideration and we expect to take a final decision shortly.

Asylum and Immigration

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many asylum seekers have been convicted of offences punishable with imprisonment in the last year for which figures are available; [62212]

(2) how many asylum seekers have been (a) excluded and (b) deported from the United Kingdom as a result of the commission of crime in another country in the last year for which figures are available; [62206]

(3) how many asylum applicants have been ordered to be deported as a result of the commission of criminal offences in the United Kingdom in the last year for which figures are available. [62205]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 3 December 1998]: Information is not held centrally on the number of asylum seekers who have committed offences in another country or on the number of asylum seekers convicted of offences punishable with imprisonment and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

During 1997, 366 persons were recommended for deportation by a court and 89 were served with deportation notices on the basis that their continued presence in the United Kingdom was not conducive to the public good. These figures include asylum and non-asylum cases.

The system we inherited for identifying asylum seekers who have offended requires the police and prison service to inform the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) when someone subject to immigration control is convicted of any offence against the person, any drugs offence or any immigration offence or any other offence where a sentence of imprisonment of 12 months or more is imposed. In addition IND is notified where a court recommends that an offender should be deported. Other offences may be reported but there is no requirement for this to be done.

This system produced records which showed that, in 1997, 14 persons who applied for asylum at some stage were recommended for deportation by a court and a further four were issued with notices of intention to deport on grounds conducive to the public good following conviction for a criminal offence. The current records are likely to under-estimate the numbers involved but it is difficult to assess by precisely how much. I have asked officials to re-examine and recommend improvements to the inherited process of collecting this data as part of our process of modernising the information systems in IND.

Prison Population

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current prison population; and what it was in each of the last five years. [62380]

Mr. George Howarth: The information requested is given in the table.

Information on the average prison population in England and Wales is published in "Prison Statistics England and Wales" (table 1.4 of the 1997 edition, cm 4017) a copy of which is in the Library.

Population in Prisons in England and Wales 1993–98

Date/Year	Number
4 December 1998[1]	66,273
Annual averages
1997	61,114
1996	55,281
1995	51,047
1993	44,566

[1] Provisional figure

Prison Costs

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the present annual cost of keeping an inmate in a prison in England and Wales. [62379]

Mr. George Howarth: The average cost per prisoner in 1997–98 (based on the final outturn) was £23,006.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total budget for the Animal Procedures Committee in each of the last five years; and what proportion of the budget in each year was allocated to sponsor research on alternatives to animal experimentation. [62389]

Mr. George Howarth: The Animal Procedures Committee does not have a budget. It advises on how the Home Office budget for sponsoring research into alternatives should be used. The Home Office also has a budget to reimburse the expenses of Committee members and, from this year, has a budget to remunerate the Chairman.

In each of the last five years, these budgets have totalled:

Year	Research	Expenses	Chairman's remuneration
1998–99	259	20	10
1996–97	242	17	—
1995–96	253	[1]—	—
1994–95	272	[1]—	—

[1] These figures are not available

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many animal procedures inspectors were (a) budgeted for and (b) in post in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [62487]

Mr. George Howarth: The number of inspectors in post and the total number of posts at 31 December in each of the last five years are as follows:

Year	Inspectors in post	Inspectorate posts
1995	18	18

[1] Additional funding was secured during 1997 to increase the complement of the Inspectorate to 21 during financial year 1998–99.

There are currently 21 inspectors in post.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to implement each of the recommendations made in the Animal Procedures Committee interim report on the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. [62486]

Mr. George Howarth: I refer the hon. Member to pages 40–42 of the Report of the Animal Procedures Committee for 1997, which was published and laid in the Library on 26 November 1998.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that animals are used in scientific procedures only where justified; and what additional restrictions have been introduced since 1 May 1997. [62388]

Mr. George Howarth: In addition to the progress outlined by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, in a reply to the hon. Member for Cheltenham (Mr. Jones) on 3 November 1998, Official Report, columns 473–74, we recently announced that we had secured an end to the use of animals in the United Kingdom for the testing of cosmetics ingredients.

Project licence applications and ongoing work will continue to be carefully scrutinised by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate to ensure that programmes of work are justified, in the sense that:

the potential benefits outweigh the likely costs to the animals involved; non-animal alternatives are used wherever possible; and where animals have to be used, the least suffering is caused to the fewest number of animals of the lowest sentience.

The ethical review processes that will be required in all designated establishments from April 1999 will also have an important role to play in ensuring that animals can be used only when it is absolutely justified.

While the use of animals in many areas, especially medical research and testing, will continue to be necessary for the foreseeable future, we will continue to look for opportunities to eliminate types of animal use where suitable alternatives become available or where that use is no longer justified by the benefits that might accrue.

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many project licences issued under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 that are currently in force and involve the use of drugs have (a) mild, (b) moderate, (c) substantial and (d) unclassified security banding. [62374]

Mr. George Howarth: Aggregate information on whether project licences authorise the use of drugs—either research on drugs (including pharmaceuticals) or research involving drugs including those where analgesics or anaesthetics are used to reduce pain and suffering—could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

OECD Safety Tests

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to delete the LD50 test from the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's list of regulatory safety tests. [62488]

Mr. George Howarth: Along with other member states of the European Union, we have pressed the European Commission to pursue this issue with the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD). We understand that the OECD will consider this once guidelines on the use of the alternatives to the LD50 test have been finalised.

Police National Computer

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each of the last three years (a) the number of accesses to each index of the police national computer and (b) the maximum and minimum number of entries in each index; and what is the current number of entries. [62319]

Mr. Boateng: I am advised that the number of transactions carried out in the last three years and the current number of entries on each application of the Police National Computer are shown in the following table. The maximum and minimum number of entries on each application is not recorded.

Forgery

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were (a) arrested for and (b) charged with offences contrary to section 1 of the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 or section 3 of the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 at (i) Heathrow Airport and (ii) Gatwick Airport in each financial year since 1993–94. [62390]

Mr. Boateng: This information is not normally collected centrally. However, the Metropolitan police have been able to provide information on persons accused—that is, a count of persons arrested and subsequently proceeded against—and persons charged. The information relates to persons accused in the Heathrow division of attempting to commit a notifiable offence and those accused under section 3 and 4 of the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981. The information is shown in the table.

The information for Gatwick airport is not available as this would incur disproportionate cost since manual searches through individual records would be required.

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made over the last five years (a) within his Department, (b) in conjunction with other Government departments and (c) in conjunction with European bodies towards developing systems involving the use of new technology for safety-related road traffic law enforcement and the administration of penalties. [62543]

Mr. Boateng: Since 1 January 1994, we have type approved for police use 10 speed measuring devices which operate using the various technologies of radar, lasers or sensors across the road. The most recent available figures show that 34 per cent. of the speed offences dealt with by the police were detected by automatic cameras. For drink drive law enforcement we have also type approved 1 alcohol screening device for roadside use and 3 evidential breath alcohol testing instruments. Research is underway into possible devices to enable the police to screen for drugs driving offences at the roadside.

In 1996, the Police Research Group published a cost benefit study of police enforcement cameras, the findings of which encouraged the wider use of camera technology to reduce road casualties. Home Office scientists have published a number of technical specifications and standards for various technologies to assist manufacturers to meet the needs of law enforcement. A new technical specification for police vehicle livery has been designed to provide greater safety by improving the visibility of police vehicles.

Scientists at the Police Scientific Development Branch and Forensic Science Service continue to test systems developed by manufacturers with a view to their being type approved for police use. The Department is also supporting a project on the possible use of simulation technology for police driver training.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of road traffic offenders were sentenced to (a) a re-test and (b) an extended re-test for the offences of (i) causing death by dangerous driving and (ii) dangerous driving in each of the last three years. [62551]

Mr. Boateng: The readily available information relates to the percentage of findings of guilt for offences of causing death by dangerous driving (including causing death by careless driving under the influence of drink or drugs and causing death by aggravated vehicle taking) and dangerous driving, which resulted in a requirement to undertake a driving test in England and Wales in the years 1995 to 1997, and is as follows:

Findings of guilt for dangerous driving and causing death by dangerous driving etc. that resulted in a driving test requirement in England and Wales

No information is available centrally to distinguish between re-tests and extended re-tests.

Illegal Tipping

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have been prosecuted and convicted of illegal tipping in each year since 1995. [62534]

Mr. Boateng: The information available from the Home Office court appearance database is given in the table. The offences shown are related to, but do not necessarily involve, illegal tipping.

Defendants proceeded against at magistrates' courts and found guilty at all courts for offences related to, but not necessarily involving, illegal tipping England and Wales 1995–97

Senator Pinochet

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 1 December 1998, Official Report, columns 132–33, if he will define the general principles of fairness which will guide his handling of representations and the exercise of his discretion in deciding the question of whether or not to issue an authority to proceed in the case of Senator Pinochet. [62644]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 7 December 1998]: The general principles of fairness, which I shall be following, are those laid down by law. Moreover, I shall explain the reasons for my decision.

Prisoner Suicides

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison inmates in England and Wales have committed suicide since 1 January. [62595]

Mr. George Howarth: As at 7 December 1998, there have been 74 self-inflicted deaths of prisoners in establishments in England and Wales since 1 January 1998. Of the 23 inquests held, 18 verdicts of suicide have been recorded.

Channel Islands (Taxation)

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the powers of Her Majesty's Government to seek to impose taxes on the Channel Islands, with particular reference to the proposed EU withholding tax. [62515]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 7 December 1998]: The Channel Islands are not subject to European Union instruments on taxation, such as the proposed Directive on the taxation of savings. The Explanatory Memorandum to the proposed Directive, however, encourages member states to apply the measures contained in the Directive to their dependent territories within the framework of their constitutional arrangements. Legislation on taxation matters has always taken the form of laws enacted by the Island legislatures.

Xenotransplantation

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the code of practice on the welfare of xenotransplantation source animals; what groups, companies and individuals he has consulted on this code; and if he will make a statement. [62427]

Mr. George Howarth: I cannot give a date for publication at this time. Work on the code is progressing, but it can be finalised only once we have received confirmation—from the United Kingdom Xenotransplantation Interim Regulatory Authority (UKXIRA)—of the health status requirements for animals intended for clinical use. Home Office officials met members of the UKXIRA biosecurity steering group on 26 November to discuss these matters.

Officials have also consulted with the Department of Health, the British Laboratory Animal Veterinary Association, the Laboratory Animal Science Association, the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the Universities Federation for Animal Welfare, the British Veterinary Association, the Pig Veterinary Society and Imutran. The code must be submitted to the Animal Procedures Committee for its consideration before it is published.

Manslaughter and Murder

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the average penalty applied to a person convicted of (a) manslaughter and (b) murder in each of the last five years. [62421]

Mr. Boateng: The information available from the Home Office court appearance database is given in the table.

Average sentence lengths[1] for people convicted of murder or manslaughter at the Crown Court, 1993–97
England and Wales

Months

Offence	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997
Murder[2]	All convicted people were sentenced to life
Attempted murder	99.3	98.7	111.5	115.8	98.0
Manslaughter	62.2	57.6	58.0	60.9	62.0
Manslaughter due to diminished responsibility	57.3	57.4	56.0	61.0	74.4

[1] Based on custodial sentences excluding life. Covers unsuspended imprisonment, imprisonment in a young offender institution and detention under the Children and Young Persons Act 1933, sec. 53(2)

[2] Murder has a mandatory sentence of life

Jury Trials

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to reform the system of trial by jury. [61249]

Mr. Boateng: We have published two consultation papers this year about jury trials. The first paper, on use of juries in serious fraud trials, invited views on the principle of whether the system is likely to operate better and with a greater degree of public confidence if, in a small number of complex fraud trials, a traditional jury were to be replaced by another method of determining the facts. The consultation paper on determining the mode of trial considered whether defendants should be able to choose to be tried by a jury in cases which magistrates have indicated that they would be content to hear. We are currently considering the responses to these two consultation exercises.

Criminal Prosecutions

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to reform the law relating to the mounting of private criminal prosecutions. [61261]

Mr. Boateng: I have no such plans, although the issue will fall to be considered in the context of the Law Commission's recommendations in its recent report on Consents to Prosecution.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure that police stations' computers are millennium compliant; how much money has been allocated to this; what percentage of this has been given to Taskforce 2000; and if he will make a statement. [62410]

Mr. Boateng: It is for each police force to assess the likely impact of the Millennium Bug on its information technology systems. All forces have conducted audits of their Information Technology and communications systems, and will have contingency plans to ensure the continuation of critical business areas. Forces are expected to meet the costs of this exercise from within existing budgets.

Taskforce 2000 receives no funding from central Government. However, the Government have funded Action 2000, established last year to advise United Kingdom industry and the public on tackling the Millennium Bug.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are currently being detained in Scotland; and how many in each place of detention. [62903]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: As at 30 November 1998, 24 people were held under Immigration Act powers in Scottish penal establishments. All of them had claimed asylum at some stage.

The number in each place of detention is as follows:

Her Majesty's Prison, Inverness: 2

Her Majesty's Prison, Aberdeen: 10

Her Majesty's Prison, Edinburgh: 6

Her Majesty's Prison, Gateside: 5

Her Majesty's Prison, Perth: 1.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimate he has made of the number of pre-July 1993 asylum applicants with a criminal conviction resulting in a sentence of less than 12 months' imprisonment who will benefit from the backlog procedure; [63057]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 3 December 1998, Official Report, column 249, if every case involving the commission of a criminal offence by an asylum seeker is notified to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. [63098]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Information is not held centrally on the number of asylum seekers who have been convicted of offences punishable with imprisonment and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

As outlined in the White Paper, "Fairer, Faster and Firmer—A Modern Approach to Immigration and Asylum", where an asylum application was made before the coming into force on 1 July 1993 of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993, delay in itself will normally be considered so serious as to justify, as a matter of fairness, the grant of indefinite leave to remain.

This will not apply, however, to applicants whose presence here is not conducive to the public good, for example on the basis of their conviction for a serious criminal offence. In general, any offender receiving a custodial sentence of 12 months or more will be excluded from benefiting from the backlog procedure. Other offenders may be excluded if their record is serious enough. Nor will it apply to any application for asylum made after the commencement of removal or deportation action against the applicant.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Electoral Boundaries

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he plans to implement the Local Government Commission recommendations for electoral boundaries for Amber Valley and Derbyshire Dales before the local elections in May 1999. [62226]

Mr. Raynsford: No. Our policy is to make electoral change orders by no later than the October before the May election date on which the changes come into effect so as to allow sufficient preparatory time including compiling the Electoral Register. The final reports on the Derbyshire Districts were not presented to the Department until 24 November 1998.

Electric Cars

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many grants the Energy Savings Trust has approved for conversion to electric cars; [62387]

(2) how many of the grants awarded by the Energy Savings Trust for conversion to electric cars have been to (a) UK-based and (b) overseas-based companies. [62385]

Mr. Meacher: The Energy Savings Trust has received no applications for grants for conversion to electric cars, but has provided grant funding to two UK-based companies for the conversion of 4 minibuses to run on electricity. The Trust has also provided grant funding to 10 local authorities, 1 charity, 1 public organisation, 4 private organisations and 1 private individual, all UK-based, for the purchase of 64 electric vehicles, as part of its Powershift programme.

Millennium (Emergency Cover)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans his Department has to contract with the armed services to provide emergency cover over the millennium period; and what estimate he has made of the cost of that cover. [62575]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Knowsley, North and Sefton, East (Mr. Howarth), on 7 December 1998, Official Report, column 20.

EC Transport Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the outcome of the Transport Council held in Brussels on 30 November; and if he will make a statement. [62328]

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of the EC Transport Council of 30 November to 1 December. [62943]

Dr. Reid: The Transport Council met in Brussels on 30 November and 1 December. I and my hon. Friend the Minister for Transport in London represented the United Kingdom.

The Council agreed a common position on one legislative proposal and reached agreement on transport negotiations with Switzerland. It also agreed a report to the Vienna European Council on integration of environmental requirements into transport policy, and held useful discussions in several other important areas of land, air and maritime transport policy.

In land transport, the Council agreed a common position on a directive on heavy goods vehicle taxation and charges (known as the "Eurovignette" directive). This was a difficult dossier, to which successive Presidencies, including our own, had contributed. The Council also reached agreement on the outcome of the European Commission's transport negotiations with Switzerland on behalf of the European Community. The complete package of negotiations with Switzerland, on transport and other items, will be finalised by the General Affairs Council.

There was a debate on two directives amending the rules promoting combined transport. Although there was general support for the underlying aim, there were concerns about the proposals as drafted. Among these were the UK's concern that, at least in the UK, the proposals would not have the desired effect of encouraging a shift of freight from road to rail, and would be likely to have perverse effects. In the absence of sufficient support the Presidency asked for further work to be done by the Committee of Permanent Representatives (COREPER).

There was further discussion of the Commission's legislative proposals to establish a regulatory framework for the Community's railways. The UK strongly supports the proposals and referred to the Treaty requirement for progressive abolition of barriers to freedom to provide services. Following the discussion, the Presidency asked for further work to be done on the proposals.

Two measures were discussed relating to inland waterways, neither of which applies to the UK. Broad agreement was reached on a measure to extend a fleet capacity management programme, and the Council discussed a draft amending directive on technical standards for inland waterways vessels.

On air transport, the Presidency concluded that there was insufficient support for the draft conclusions which it had tabled on a full Community negotiating mandate for air transport negotiations with the US, and asked for further work to be carried out.

Disagreement between Spain and the UK over application to Gibraltar Airport prevented the Council agreeing a draft amending Regulation which would improve compensation arrangements for air passengers who are denied boarding on overbooked flights. The UK reaffirmed its strong support for the measure and rejected Spanish claims that Gibraltar Airport should be suspended from its application, pointing out that this would remove rights conferred on users of Gibraltar Airport by the original Regulation. The Presidency noted the Commission's request for further work on a Regulation on aviation statistics which has not progressed since 1996 when disagreement on application to Gibraltar Airport prevented its adoption. The Council also discussed a draft Directive providing for ramp checks on third country aircraft using EU airports which had previously been agreed, because Spain had now requested suspension of the application of the measure to Gibraltar Airport. The UK confirmed its support for the text agreed by the Council, regretting that Spain had objected to this important safety measure at such a late stage.

The Council noted the Commission's reports on the progress of negotiations to establish a European Aviation Safety Authority, for Community membership of Eurocontrol, and on extending the single aviation market to ten central and eastern European countries. The Council also noted progress on the draft Directive on airport charging, and received a report on the outcome of the 32nd meeting of the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO) Assembly in Montreal.

In maritime transport, there was a debate on the draft directive on ferry manning conditions. The UK made clear its strong support for the proposal, which would protect Community seafarer employment. Some Member States thought that more information was needed about the impact of the proposal. At the Presidency's request, the Commission agreed to produce a report on the directive's likely impact and inform a future Council of progress.

The Council agreed a report on integrating environmental requirements into transport policy, to go to the European Council in Vienna on 11–12 December. The report outlines progress to date and indicates that the Council will draw up an ambitious phased work programme, a first report on which will be discussed by the end of 1999.

Under other business, the Commission presented its proposal for new working time rules in the road and maritime sectors, and presented its report on the development of transport Trans-European Networks.

Trains (Disabled Access)

Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions his Department has had with rail operating companies concerning the provision of toilets with disabled access on trains. [62362]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Under the Rail Accessibility Regulations 1998, which will apply to all new types of rolling stock coming into service after 31 December this year, trains fitted with toilets for passengers will have to provide wheelchair accessible toilet facilities, as well as a wide range of other features to improve accessibility. The regulations have been drawn up in close consultation with train operating companies.

Taxis (Disabled Access)

Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with hackney carriage operators concerning the higher fares charged for the use of taxis with disabled access in many parts of the country. [62382]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The fixing of taxi fares outside London is a matter for the local licensing authority concerned. In London, where fares are fixed by the Secretary of State, the same tariff applies to all taxis, including those with access for disabled people.

Illegal Tipping

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to discourage illegal tipping. [62535]

Mr. Meacher: Stringent controls and severe penalties are already in place to discourage the illegal tipping of waste and the Environment Agency has made clear its commitment to taking firm enforcement action. The main controls and the maximum penalties are set out in the table:

Maximum penalties for offences relating to waste

Offence	Magistrates' Court	Crown Court
Sections 33(1)(a), (b) or (c) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990
Unlawful deposit, recovery, disposal etc. of non-special waste	Imprisonment for 6 months and/or a fine of £20,000	Imprisonment for 2 years and/or an unlimited fine
Section 33(1)(a), (b) or (c) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990
Unlawful deposit, recovery, disposal etc. of special waste	Imprisonment for 6 months and/or a fine of £20,000	Imprisonment for 5 years and/or an unlimited fine
Section 34(6) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990
Breach of the duty of care or Regulations on retention etc. of documents	A fine not exceeding the statutory maximum	An unlimited fine
Section 1(1) Control of Pollution (Amendment) Act 1989
Transporting waste without registering as a carrier	A fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale	n/a
Special Waste Regulations 1996
Unlawful movement or handling of special waste	A fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale	Imprisonment for two years and/or an unlimited fine
Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994: Regulation 20(5)
Failure to register as a waste broker	A fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale	n/a
Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994: Paragraph 12 Schedule 4
Failure to register as a collector, transporter, dealer or broker of waste	A fine not exceeding level 2 on the standard scale	n/a

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to release the report on the status of radioactive waste management at Dounreay prepared by the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee. [62392]

Mr. Meacher: I have not yet received the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee's report on Dounreay, but I understand that it is to be supplied to Ministers by the Committee shortly. The Committee itself publishes all the advice it gives to Government.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what levels of radioactive discharges have been notified from each site on the Sellafield complex in each of the last five years. [62490]

Mr. Meacher: The data for years 1996 and 1997 are in the Environment Agency's Annual Reports for those years. For the preceding years 1993 to 1995, the data are contained in annual discharge returns, provided by BNFL and UKAEA, which relate to discharges from major stacks and approved places on the sites. The data are available on request from the public register at the Environment Agency North West Regional Office, Warrington, Cheshire and other local authority public registers in Cumbria and Lancashire.

I have asked the Environment Agency to collate data specifically for the Sellafield complex and I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library as soon as this is available.

British Gas

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from British Gas plc concerning participation in a voluntary agreement relating to misleading environmental claims. [62377]

Mr. Meacher: My Department has received no representations from British Gas plc on this matter.

Drivers (Epilepsy)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has further to reduce the duration of the driving ban that follows an epileptic fit; and if he will make a statement. [62527]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There are at present no plans to reduce from one year the period for which an ordinary driving licence is withdrawn following an epileptic attack. As with other medical conditions, however, the situation is kept under review, taking account of expert advice.

Asbestos

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the extent of illicit recycling of asbestos into building materials; and if he will make a statement. [62358]

Mr. Raynsford: Asbestos waste is controlled under the provisions of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Special Waste Regulations 1996. The Environment Agency has responsibility for the enforcement of the relevant legislation.

The Environment Agency has no evidence to indicate that asbestos is being illicitly recycled into building materials.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions his Department has had with the British Occupational Hygiene Society on the dangers to working people of contact with asbestos; and if he will make a statement. [62596]

Mr. Meacher: The Health and Safety Executive and British Occupational Hygiene Society (BOHS) are in regular contact, and are planning a series of joint roadshows scheduled for early next summer to raise awareness of the dangers of contact with asbestos at work and to explain how to reduce the risks.

Rural Bus Challenge Competition

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to announce the results of the Rural Bus Challenge Competition. [62694]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I am currently assessing 214 bids, which have been received. I hope to make an announcement shortly.

Local Government Pension Scheme

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what would be the estimated annual cost of extending the Local Government Pension Scheme (Transitional Provisions) Regulations 1997 regarding spouses' pensions to spouses who remarried or started to co-habit prior to 1 April 1998. [62690]

Mr. Raynsford: This information is not available. An actuarial assessment of the cost of providing spouses' pensions for life was carried out on behalf of the United Kingdom Steering Committee on local government pensions prior to introducing this improvement into the Local Government Pension Scheme from 1 April 1998. However, this did not identify the cost of surviving spouses' pensions for widows or widowers who were already re-married or co-habiting before that date.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the total costs were of medical investigations, inquiries and examinations incurred by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency in the most recent financial year for which figures are available; and what proportion of these costs related to drivers aged 70 years or over. [62795]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The total cost in 1997–98 of medical inquiries was £5.7 million of which £2.2 million was spent on medical reports and examinations. The proportion of these costs attributable to drivers aged over 70 is not available.

Housing Revenue Account (Oldham)

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the financial impact on Oldham Metropolitan Borough Council of the implementation of the 3,000 homes limit on subsidy recalculation of the housing revenue account. [62687]

Mr. Raynsford: Oldham Metropolitan Borough Council transferred 642 properties on the Limehurst Village estate to Limehurst Village Trust in March 1998. The number of properties transferred fell below the threshold (the lower of 3,000 dwellings or 10 per cent. of the authority's current stock) at which Housing Revenue Account (HRA) Subsidy would be recalculated for 1998–99. Oldham was required to consider the effects on subsidy before deciding to make the transfer. If subsidy had been recalculated, it is estimated that Oldham MBC would have received an additional £490,000 in HRA subsidy for 1998–99.

Motorways

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many miles of motorway were (a) completed and (b) under construction in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1997. [63101]

Ms Glenda Jackson: During 1979, 41.3 miles of motorway were completed out of a total of 120.2 miles of motorway which were under construction at some time in the year. During 1997, 42.7 miles of motorway were completed out of a total of 87.7 miles of motorway which were under construction at some time in the year. These figures include some motorway widening.

Rail Fares

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many rail fares have, since 1 January 1998, (a) increased by more than 5 per cent., (b) increased by 3 to 5 per cent., (c) increased by 0 to 3 per cent., (d) remained unchanged and (e) decreased. [62889]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This information is not available in the form requested.

Under the Railways Act 1993 the regulation of fares is a matter for the Franchising Director. The Franchising Director regulates at least one fare between any two points on the network. Other fares, particularly discounted fares for off-peak travel, are set by the train operators. The Government have recently conducted research into the effects of fares regulation, based upon the fare actually paid by the passenger. The increase in average fares paid for 1995–96 and 1996–97 was 2.36 per cent, marginally below the RPI of 2.40 per cent. The increase between 1996–97 and 1997–98 was 3 per cent, below the RPI figure of 4 per cent. Between 1995–96 and 1996–97, the rate of increase in average fare paid fell below RPI for the first time since 1989–90.

Rail Cards

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many young persons' rail cards were issued in each of the last 10 years; [62890]

(2) how many senior citizens' rail cards were issued in each of the last 10 years. [62888]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information requested is in the table. Details of railcard sales in 1988–89 and 1989–90 are not available.

Financial year	Young Persons' Railcard	Senior Railcard
1997–98	722,443	679,664
1996–97	723,524	605,040
1995–96	683,719	569,904
1994–95	704,071	630,205
1993–94	652,840	681,425
1992–93	678,933	712,563
1991–92	712,672	760,648
1990–91	676,561	930,393

Integrated Transport

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the timetable for the publication of the daughter documents of the White Paper on integrated transport. [62417]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government have today issued their consultation document on road user charging and the workplace parking levy. The remaining daughter documents—papers on shipping, buses, sustainable distribution, road safety and inland waterways—will follow within the next few months. We will also be issuing a paper on ports policy, and confirming guidance on local transport plans, following up the draft guidance currently out to consultation. In addition, a strategy to encourage walking, produced by the Walking Steering Group, will be published by the Department early in the New Year.

Rail Users Consultative Committees

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to increase powers available to the rail users consultative committees; and if he will make a statement. [62430]

Ms Glenda Jackson: A New Deal for the Railways (Cm 4024) announced that, subject to legislation, sponsorship of the Rail Users' Consultative Committees will be transferred from the Rail Regulator to the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA). In future, the Committees will have explicit new powers to report perceived breaches of franchise agreements to the SRA, not just breaches of passenger and station licences. In addition, the Committees' remit will be extended to any open access operators (i.e. to passenger services not provided under franchise agreements). We will ensure that the Committees include a wide cross-section of passengers, and want them to co-operate with bus user representative bodies and to contribute jointly to the development of the regional transport strategies which will form part of Regional Planning Guidance.

Train Companies (Staff Reductions)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to ensure that staff reductions by train operating companies do not lead to compromises in safety. [62434]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Under the Railways Safety Case Regulations 1994, arrangements for operations or maintenance must be set out in a train operator's Railway Safety Case. Railway Safety Cases and any subsequent revisions have to be accepted by the Infrastructure controller or the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) before operations or revised operations can commence. Reductions in staffing levels would require amendment to a Railway Safety Case where this might affect safety. HSE monitors compliance with the Regulations and will take whatever action it considers appropriate (including enforcement action, if necessary) to ensure safety is not compromised.

Train Companies (Franchises)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the circumstances under which franchise agreements with train operating companies can be renegotiated; which franchises have been so renegotiated; and if he will make a statement. [62438]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Deputy Prime Minister has said that the books are open for renegotiating franchises in order to secure improved services for passengers. An announcement about how we will seek additional benefits through renegotiation will be made in due course.

The Franchising Director already has scope to negotiate additional commitments from franchisees. Where contravention of the franchise agreement has a materially adverse effect on passengers, the Franchising Director's Objectives, Instructions and Guidance, given to him in November 1997, require him to seek to secure contractual undertakings from the franchisee which will provide additional benefits as compensation for passengers. Where agreement has been sought to transfer control of a franchise to another party, the Franchising Director can also seek benefits for passengers. Substantial new commitments and changes to franchises negotiated by the Franchising Director since the Minister of Transport gave him new Objectives, Instructions and Guidance in November 1977 are shown in the table.

Franchise	Date	Circumstances	New commitments
Great Western Trains	23 February 1998	Three call-ins for infringements of thresholds for cancellations and part cancellations, deemed a breach of the franchise agreement	Operator committed to improvements in Passenger's Charter payments for delayed journeys, to implement a recovery plan to improve rolling stock reliability and train crew availability, to spend £500,000 on additional rolling stock items and £500,000 on additional customer information systems in 1998–99.

Great Western Trains, North Western Trains and Great Eastern Railway	6 March 1998	Franchising Director agreed to buyout of Great Western Holdings Ltd. by FirstGroup plc	Great Western: 32 new vehicles by June 2002; one week's free travel for qualifying season ticket holders; new performance penalty regime; bus/rail integration schemes; new first class lounges; refurbishment of sleeper trains; improvements for cyclists. North Western: £1.2 million invested in agreement with PTEs and passenger representatives; 70 new vehicles equipped with CCTV security; £100,000 spent on access for disabled people; TOC to take more of the costs of planned vehicle refurbishment over from PTEs; improvements for cyclists. Great Eastern: replace all slam door trains by end of 2002; bus/rail integration schemes; modern rolling stock for Sudbury branch by October 1998.
Thames Trains	5 June 1998	Franchising Director agreed to buyout of Victory Railway Holdings Ltd. by the Go-Ahead Group plc	£500k spent on station improvements; improvements to Passengers' Charter; new through service Oxford-Didcot-Swindon-Bath-Bristol; bus/rail through ticketing; improvements for cyclists at Oxford; improved access to Heathrow Airport; reinstate London-bound platform at South Greenford.
Chiltern Railway	19 August 1998	Three call-ins for infringements of thresholds for cancellations and part cancellations, deemed a breach of the franchise agreement	One week's free travel for qualifying season ticket holders; improved Passenger's Charter compensation provisions; improved security; new public address system and help points; improvements to facilities for disabled people, toilets and passenger shelters.
West Coast Trains; Cross Country Trains; South West Trains	7 October 1998	Franchising Director agreed acquisition of 49 per cent. of shares in Virgin Rail Group (VRG) by Stagecoach plc	Bus/rail integration schemes; improved Passenger's Charter compensation terms; 16 new vehicles for VRG or South West Trains; £500k spent on improvements at stations served, but not operated, by VRG; passenger fora hosted by senior directors of all three TOCs.
North Western Trains	29 October 1998	Concentration of cancellations on Oldham Loop, deemed a breach of the franchise agreement	Two weeks' free travel for season ticket holders; to be extended to other ticket holders by negotiation with Greater Manchester PTE.
LTS Rail	11 November 1998	Review of rolling stock availability relating to Class 317s scheduled for release from WAGN Railway	Relieved LTS Rail of incentive payments due if Class 317s not taken over from WAGN. Commitment to replace all slam door stock by March 2002; 12 additional vehicles; improved Passenger's Charter; more exacting performance thresholds; £2 million spend on passenger information systems, increased staffing and other facilities; additional spend each year on staffing; improved facilities for disabled people and passenger security; bus/rail integration schemes; improved access to Lakeside shopping centre; improvements for cyclists; additional reduced rate early morning season tickets.

Concessionary Bus Passes

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of persons of pensionable age currently have access to a concessionary fares bus pass. [62419]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I understand that 11 local authorities have no concessionary fare scheme for their resident pensioners. The number of pensioners in those local authority areas represents about 2.6 per cent. of the total number of pensioners in England.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of concessionary fare bus passes (a) currently issued and (b) which will be issued when the nationwide £5 bus pass is introduced; and if he will make a statement. [62418]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No such estimate can be made, because my Department does not hold statistics on the number of passes issued; that is a matter for the individual local authorities concerned. Without that information it is not possible to calculate any likely change in numbers of passes issued due to our proposal for a national minimum standard for concessionary fares for pensioners, based on a £5 bus pass and half fares on buses.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the extra cost to the public purse from the introduction of a nationwide concessionary fare bus pass at (a) £5 and (b) £10 assuming (i) a continuation of the present number of passes issued and (ii) his estimate of the increased number of passes which might be issued. [62420]

Ms Glenda Jackson: It is not possible to give such an estimate, because the cost and the number of passes issued would depend not only on the price of the pass, but also on the level of concessionary fare with which the pass was associated.

Lorries (Weight Restrictions)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to restrict lorry access by weight to non-trunk roads. [62429]

Ms Glenda Jackson: It would be impractical to impose a national ban on lorry traffic on non-trunk roads because most lorry journeys begin and end on such roads. Non-trunk roads are the responsibility of local traffic authorities who have powers to make traffic regulation orders to prohibit or restrict lorry access, subject in limited cases to a requirement to hold a public inquiry and obtain the Secretary of State's consent.

Train Companies (Sub-contracting)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the implications for public accountability of the sub-contracting of services by train operating companies; and if he will make a statement. [62433]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This was considered by the Franchising Director before letting the current franchises. Train operators may make arrangements with each other for operating services on a subcontracted basis, subject to conditions which ensure that the arrangements do not transfer control of the services concerned, or the obligation to deliver the Passenger Service Requirement (PSR), to the subcontractor; and subject to a maximum of 5 per cent. of the aggregate scheduled train mileage of the operator subcontracting services. Subcontracting above this limit or outside the terms of the conditions requires the consent of the Franchising Director or, where applicable, the relevant Passenger Transport Executive (PTE). In addition, the Franchising Director requires clear separation between different franchises held by the same franchisee, and any relationship between them must be on an arm's-length basis and set out in clear contracts.

Train Companies (Passenger Service Requirements)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the appropriateness of the criteria applied to train operating companies in respect of passenger service requirements; what plans he has to alter these; and if he will make a statement. [62437]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We have considered the revised Criteria for the Appraisal of Support for Passenger Rail Services, which the Franchising Director has submitted to us for approval, and he expects to issue them shortly.

Travel Safety Statistics

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many casualties per kilometre travelled were recorded in (a) 1987, (b) 1992 and (c) 1997 in respect of (i) car, (ii) train, (iii) motorbike, (iv) bicycle and (v) air travel. [62893]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information requested is shown in the table.

Train Companies (Compensation Payments)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much was paid in compensation payments, and to how many individual passengers, by each train operating company in the last year for which figures are available. [62894]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Under the franchise agreement, each franchise operator must have a Passenger's Charter which provides for compensation for day ticket holders whose journey are delayed, and for season ticket holders who suffer poor performance over a period. At the start of the franchises these terms were at least as favourable as British Rails; since then, a number of operators' terms have tightened, either through negotiation with Franchising Director or at an operator's own commercial initiative. Operators have varying Charter compensation terms and information about payments belongs to each operator. The Franchising Director has the contractual right to inspect records, to ensure compliance, but they are not maintained on a comparable basis across all TOCs.

Green Ministers Meeting

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the departments which, at the meeting of Green Ministers on 18 November, were represented by officials. [62415]

Mr. Meacher: The following departments were represented by officials:

Department for Culture, Media and Sport
Department of Social Security
Department of Trade and Industry
Foreign and Commonwealth Office
HM Treasury.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the meeting of Green Ministers on 18 November considered methods of (a) decreasing car journeys by Ministers and (b) making the cars made available to Ministers less polluting. [62416]

Mr. Meacher: The Green Ministers' meeting on 18 November discussed progress on delivering green transport plans across Government. These plans will comprise measures to encourage staff to choose alternatives to single-occupancy car use, including public transport, cycling, walking and car-sharing, to reduce the environmental impact of travel and to reduce the need to travel. Where feasible, Ministers use public transport or walk. However, security issues and issues of practicality can mean that cars are often essential.

But the Government Car Service is committed to reducing the environmental impact of its fleet, and has begun to convert its vehicles to use Liquid Petroleum Gas, a significantly cleaner fuel than conventional fuels, with the aim of converting its entire fleet within the next five years. It also has a programme monitoring fuel consumption and providing driver training with a published target for improving the average fuel efficiency across its fleet by at least half a mile per gallon every year.

Through-ticketing

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to promote through-ticketing between train and bus services. [62891]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Under his objectives, instructions and Guidance, the Franchising Director is required to take all appropriate steps to provide for the participation by franchises in multi-modal travel schemes, and to manage franchise agreements in a way which reflects our policy on transport integration. Accordingly, where he has negotiated new commitments from franchises, these have included through ticketing and timetable integration schemes which promote through journeys by rail and bus services, both within towns served by the railway and towns and villages. The number of similar schemes have been promoted by operators at their own initiative. We will be looking to build on this as we consider the renegotiation of franchise agreements.

Road Traffic Reductions

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the places where his Department wants road traffic levels to be reduced; and within what time scale it wants them to be reduced. [62892]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 3 November 1998, Official Report, column 458.

Coach Services

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the implications for rail services of the introduction of new coach services which could be assumed to seek to divert passenger traffic from parallel rail lines. [62432]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Coach operators may provide whatever services they wish in response to commercial demand, although where they could undermine rail services they may be subject to review by the competition authorities. The Rail Regulator and the Franchising Director would advise the Director General of Fair Trading in these circumstances, but any final decision would rest with my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Train Companies (Subsidy Reductions)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in what circumstances he can implement a reduction in subsidy to a train operating company in addition to that agreed in the franchise agreement. [62436]

Ms Glenda Jackson: All payments to and from franchise operators are governed by franchise agreements and changes to the basis for such payments could be made only during the term of existing franchises by negotiation and agreement between the contracting parties i.e. the Franchising Director and, in some cases, the Passenger Transport Executive and the franchise operator.

Strategic Rail Authority

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will allow the Strategic Rail Authority to retain revenue received from fines levied by that authority. [62431]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government are currently reviewing a wide range of fines currently paid into the Consolidated Fund, to consider which ones should be retained by the levying authority.

Mark One Rolling Stock

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to receive the report on mark one rolling stock from the Health and Safety Executive. [62435]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow) on 7 December 1998, Official Report, column 39.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each local authority the increase in standard spending assessment (a) for education, (b) for social services and (c) overall, included in the 1998–99 local government revenue finance settlement. [62886]

Ms Armstrong: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Air Carrier Liability

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will continue to pursue any prosecutions under Air Carrier Liability Order 1998/1751 pending the outcome of IATA's application for judicial review of the order; and if he will make a statement. [62944]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Unless and until the Air Carrier Liability Order 1998 is either amended by Parliament or declared by the courts to be void and of no effect, it remains in force and the possibility of prosecution for breaches of the Order therefore cannot be excluded.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment the Government have made of the implementation of Council regulation (EC) No. 2027/97 on air carrier liability following accidents in each member state; what assessment he has made of the level and nature of implementation in each member state; and if he will make a statement. [62945]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government have made no assessment of measures taken by other EU member states in giving effect to the Council Regulation in their jurisdictions. However, I can report that at a meeting in Brussels convened by the European Commission on 10 September 1998, when member states were asked what measures they had taken or planned to take to implement the Regulation, all eight member states present had either taken or already possessed powers to enforce the provisions of the Regulation.

National Air Traffic Control

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is the Government's intention to sell National Air Traffic Control Services in the financial year 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [62942]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government are currently consulting interested parties on their proposal to establish a public-private partnership for National Air Traffic Services Ltd. We will take full account of the views of consultees in reaching final decisions on the future of NATS and will bring forward legislation at the earliest opportunity. The timing of any sale is for consideration once the legislation is in place.

IATA v. UK Government

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the costs to the Government so far of the case brought by IATA against the UK Government concerning the implementation of EC regulation 2027/97; if he will estimate the likely total cost to the UK taxpayer; and how long he estimates the case will take to resolve. [62946]

Ms Glenda Jackson: At the preliminary hearing in the High Court in November, the judge refused IATA's request for an immediate reference of the matter to the European Court of Justice and awarded costs to the Secretary of State. A further hearing has been scheduled for February 1999, at which the substance of IATA's case will be considered, but it is not possible to predict the total cost to the Government of the action since this will depend on the length of the judicial process in reaching a decision and whether the Government are again awarded costs in the event of a successful defence. A reference to the European Court of Justice, which would result in a protraction of matters, cannot be excluded.

Four-star Petrol

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what exceptions he plans to make to the proposed ban on the sale of four-star petrol; if disabled drivers will receive financial help in replacing or converting their cars; and if he will make a statement. [63062]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government are considering options with the oil industry and other interested organisations with regard to the continuance, under the terms of the EU directive, of a very limited supply of leaded petrol. However, its availability will ultimately be a commercial decision.

Vehicles driven by disabled drivers are generally ordinary passenger cars or light vans all of which have been required to use unleaded petrol for several years. Older vehicles requiring leaded petrol will be able to use lead replacement petrol or an anti-wear additive in conjunction with unleaded petrol. Particular financial help for disabled drivers is not therefore necessary.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to ensure that local government computers are millennium compliant; how much money has been allocated to this; what percentage of this has been given to Taskforce 2000; and if he will make a statement. [62409]

Mr. Raynsford: We are working closely with the Local Government Association, the Local Government Management Board and the Audit Commission to ensure that all councils are properly prepared to deal with the millennium bug. My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has, jointly with Sir Jeremy Beecham, Chairman of the Local Government Association, written twice this year to each council leader stressing the importance of their taking action, inviting them to sign Pledge 2000, and to nominate a senior member to take local responsibility for seeing that action on this issue is driven forward. The Local Government Finance Settlement takes into account the need for councils to deal with the Year 2000 problem. On the basis of returns submitted to DETR, English local authorities have, in aggregate, provided £64.6 million in their 1998–99 reported budgets to deal with the Year 2000 problem.

Huddersfield Canal

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to announce the decision on funding from English Partnerships for the Huddersfield Canal Project. [63066]

Mr. Caborn: A full economic appraisal of the Huddersfield Narrow Canal Millennium Project, to ensure that the proposal is robust and represents good value for money, has been carried out by English Partnerships. English Partnerships Board recently give its support for almost £13 million of the funding to the project, subject to agreement on a number of contractual details with its partners, the local authorities and British Waterways. The level of English Partnerships' proposed investment means that the project requires approval from my Department. I expect a final decision in the next few weeks.

Regional Eurostar Services

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he has received the review into the feasibility of regional Eurostar services; and if he will make a statement. [63225]

Mr. Prescott: The Consortium presented its report "Review of Regional Eurostar Services" to me on 13 November and a copy has today been placed in the Library. The Government have noted the conclusions of the report and will be commissioning a thorough, independent review of it, and of the alternative proposals put forward by the Virgin Group. The Government will also be working with the parties to seek to ensure that the regions have access to convenient, effective Channel Tunnel services.

Trust Ports

Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of his review of trust ports. [63227]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Our review of the role and status of trust ports has been completed, and we have now published a summary consultation paper setting out conclusions and recommendations. We have asked that responses and comments on this paper should be sent to the Department by 31 January 1999. Copies of the paper have been placed in the Library.

Driving Tests

Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to revise the practical driving test. [63228]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Following extensive consultation, we have decided to make important changes to the practical driving test, its length, content and the way it is marked.

From Spring 1999, candidates will be required to demonstrate their skills in a broader range of road and traffic conditions. Tests will have about ten minutes more general driving. Test routes will include more higher speed dual carriageways and rural roads. The emergency stop exercise will be carried out at random in about one third of all car tests rather than all of them. Candidates who commit large numbers of less serious driving faults will fail their test. The threshold will initially be set at 15 faults. The revised test will set higher standards for candidates' driving and will check they are prepared for the pressure of driving in today's road and traffic conditions.

The package also includes measures to raise training standards. We plan to introduce a voluntary log book scheme at the same time as the test is amended, to aid candidates and their instructors to gauge progress towards test standard. Candidates will also be given more detailed written feedback about their performance on test by the examiner. This will advise unsuccessful candidates about the reasons they failed and provide those who passed guidance about aspects of their driving which could still be improved.

The implementation date for these changes will be announced shortly. The longer test and the revised marking arrangements will be introduced for the motorcycle test, and the emergency stop exercise will be retained in all those tests. The revised marking arrangements will also be introduced for lorry and bus driver tests. Training logbooks for these sectors will be developed in consultation with the representative bodies.

Planning Guidance

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when his Department will be issuing for consultation draft guidance for local authorities on land-use planning and electromagnetic fields. [63262]

Mr. Caborn: The Department has today issued for consultation the draft of a joint circular with the Department of Health. It gives guidance to local planning authorities in drawing up development plan policies or deciding planning applications for development giving rise to electromagnetic fields (EMFs) or for development proposed in the vicinity of existing sources of EMFs. Examples of development emitting EMFs are overhead power lines and telecommunications base stations. The Government recognise that there is some public concern about the possible health effects of exposure to EMFs and it is upon this aspect that the guidance focuses.

Comments are requested by 19 February 1999. Copies of the consultation package have been placed in the Library.

Transport Safety

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how he intends to implement the review of the arrangements for transport safety announced in the Transport White Paper; and if he will make a statement. [63307]

Dr. Reid: The White Paper on the future of transport "A New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone" announced the Government's intention to review the arrangements for transport safety, including those for accident investigation.

In carrying out this review, we will address recommendations from the Environment, Transport and Regional Affairs Select Committee that transport safety regulation should be focused on a single independent authority as a means of separating safety regulation from operational responsibilities. As the Select Committee's recommendations have potentially wide-reaching implications for the current institutional framework, the review will embrace all transport modes and consider the roles and responsibilities of a number of organisations concerned with transport safety.

The aim of the review is a modern institutional framework, designed to deliver continued improvements to transport safety and secure public confidence. It will focus on the principles that should govern the organisational and regulatory arrangements for transport safety, including those for personal security, and cover the main areas of public concern, from the setting of safety standards to the investigation of accidents. In particular, it will address institutional obstacles that are seen to act as a constraint to better regulation of safety and consider whether there are aspects of the current organisational arrangements that could give rise to conflicts of interest. It will not address the substance of policies for the operational safety of individual modes taken forward within the current institutional framework.

An inter-departmental steering group has been set up to guide the review which will work to the following terms of reference:

"to consider whether a more integrated or unified approach to transport safety across modes would be more effective, produce a safer travelling environment and secure best value for money".

The review will involve representatives of the transport industries and those working in them, together with consumers. We have set up a small advisory panel to provide an independent sounding board and external influence on the work of the review. There will also be consultation in the Spring on the organisational and operational principles that should apply to any new arrangements for transport safety.

Our aim is to complete the review process and announce decisions in about 18 months.

TREASURY

Bank of England

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff at the Bank of England were employed in the (a) Traded Markets Team and (b) Supervision and Surveillance Division of the Bank of England on (i) 31 December 1996 and (ii) 31 December 1997. [61037]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 27 November 1998]: As at 31 December 1996 there were 420 staff employed in the Supervision and Surveillance Divisions of the Bank including 10 staff in the Traded Markets Team.

As at 31 December 1997 there were 448 staff employed in the Supervision and Surveillance Divisions of the Bank including 11 staff in the Traded Markets Team.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff have transferred from the (a) Traded Markets Team and (b) Supervision and Surveillance Division of the Bank of England to the Financial Services Authority. [61038]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 27 November 1998]: Nine and 406 respectively.

EU Code of Conduct Group

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what matters have been discussed by the EU Code of Conduct Group to date; and if he will make a statement. [61884]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 1 December 1998]: The Code of Conduct Group has discussed matters which relate to potentially harmful and discriminatory tax measures as is its remit.

Duty Free Sales

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to retain duty free sales in the EU; and if he will make a statement. [62102]

Dawn Primarolo: This matter was discussed by European Finance Ministers at the ECOFIN Council meeting on 1 December 1998. A minority of member states, supported by the UK, called for a fresh look at the decision to end intra-EU duty free sales on 30 June 1999.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total amount raised in stamp duty on share transactions in each of the last five years. [62276]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 3 December 1998]: The figures are as follows:

Stamp duty (including stamp duty reserve tax) on transactions of shares and other securities

£ million

Year	Amount
1993–94	1,035
1994–95	1,013
1995–96	1,298
1997–98	1,960

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Government's plans with regard to the current stamp duty exemption when authorised unit trusts merge with an open-ended investment company. [63263]

Ms Hewitt: Following a number of representations, we intend to extend the current temporary exemption from Stamp Duty Reserve Tax (SDRT) when authorised unit trusts merge into an open-ended investment company (OEIC) to match the timetable for the introduction of the framework to allow the formation of a wider range of OEICS. This means that investment funds which intend to rationalise their range of products by merging authorised unit trusts into an OEIC will have the opportunity to do so without paying a Stamp Duty or SDRT charge.

The current exemption for mergers of authorised unit trusts into OEICs ends on 30 June 1999. We intend to extend this until a year after the coming into force of Treasury Regulations putting in place the new framework.

Drugs (Turkey)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of the proportion of heroin that enters the United Kingdom via Turkey. [62512]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs does not have a reliable estimate of the proportion of heroin which enters the United Kingdom via Turkey. The amount Customs seized during 1997 known to have originated in or transited through Turkey was 1037.33 kilograms which represented 59.37 per cent. of the total amount of heroin seized by Customs during that year, but Customs assess that around 80 per cent. of the total seized has arrived from Turkey.

Ministerial E-mail Address

Mr. Brake: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his e-mail address; and what is the e-mail address of the Chief Secretary of the Treasury. [62559]

Ms Hewitt: All Treasury Ministers can be e-mailed through the Treasury's website (www.hm-treasury.gov.uk) or the Public Enquiry Unit (public.enquiries@hm-treasury.gov.uk).

Charities

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to publish the Charities Tax Review consultation document. [62334]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 7 December 1998]: The Government received over 3,000 replies in the first phase of the Review and are determined to consider carefully all the options before launching the next phase. We intend to publish a Consultation Document as soon as possible.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent changes in practice there have been regarding the 10 per cent. commercial use concession to charities' zero rating for new buildings. [62338]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 7 December 1998]: None. Zero-rating is available for charity buildings that are used solely for non-business purposes. However, when the building is used for a business purpose for less than 10 per cent. of the total time that it is open, that use is ignored.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has made to the EU Commission regarding the special VAT zero-rating arrangements for charities regarding (a) the supply of lifeboats to the RNLI, (b) the conversion of lifeboat slipways, (c) the supply of medical research equipment to charities and (d) the supply of equipment for the disabled to charities; and if he will veto any proposals to end these arrangements. [62336]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 7 December 1998]: As my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary said in the House on 1 December 1998, there are no detailed proposals from the Commission to change the existing VAT rates, and existing EC agreements fully safeguard the UK's zero rates.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the revenue cost to charities of EU proposals to (a) end zero rating and (b) end exempt activities in respect of VAT. [62337]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 7 December 1998]: There are no proposals from the Commission to change the existing VAT rates for charities.

Winter Mortality Rates

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths, where hypothermia was mentioned on the death certificate as the main or contributory cause of death, took place in England and Wales in 1997 among those (a) of all ages, (b) aged 60 to 74, (c) aged 74 to 84 and (d) aged over 85 years; what were the winter mortality rates for (i) the population as a whole, (ii) people aged 60 to 74, (iii) people aged 75 to 84 and (iv) people aged 85 years and over; and what the percentage increase was in each group compared to non-winter deaths in 1997–98. [62794]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Eddie O'Hara, dated 8 December 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on deaths from hypothermia and winter morality rates.

Deaths where hypothermia was mentioned on the death certificate, England and Wales, 1997

Ages	Number
All Ages	357
60–74	51
75–84	127
85 and over	127

Excess winter mortality, England and Wales, 1997–98 [1]

Age	Excess winter deaths [2]	Percentage increase in mortality in winter
All ages	23,680	14
60–74	5,050	11
75–84	7,960	14
85 and over	9,180	19

[1] provisional
[2] rounded to the nearest 10

Excess winter deaths are defined as the difference between the number of deaths during the four winter months (December to March) and the average of the number of deaths during the preceding autumn (August to November) and the following summer (April to July).

VAT (Football Transfer Fees)

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the annual revenue is from VAT on football transfer fees for (a) players under contract and (b) players under 24 years who are out of contract; [62800]

(2) if he will estimate the annual revenue forgone as a result of the decision of the European Court in the Bosman case relating to football transfer fees; and if he will make a statement. [62799]

Dawn Primarolo: Any VAT relating to football transfer fees can be recovered by the acquiring club. Therefore, there is no VAT revenue from football transfer fees and no VAT revenue forgone as a result of the judgment of the European Court in the Bosman case.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Smoking

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee for what reasons smoking has been banned in the (a) Churchill Room and (b) Members' and Strangers' Dining Rooms; and for what reasons it is permitted in the Press Gallery Dining Room. [62651]

Mr. Dennis Turner: The Committee agreed that smoking should no longer be permitted in the Churchill Room and in the Members' and Strangers' Dining Rooms following representations made to it by hon. Members requesting such a course of action. I understand that the Director of Catering Services has received no such representations from members of the Lobby and Gallery concerning smoking in the Press Dining Room.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Lottery Funding

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which sporting venues have received lottery funding for athletics in the past 12 months. [62175]

Mr. Banks: Listed are the sporting venues which have received Lottery sports funding from the English Sports Council for athletics in the period 1 December 1997 to 30 November 1998:

Stourport Sports Club, Stourport-on-Severn, Worcestershire
Exeter Arena, Exeter, Devon
Trafford Athletic Club, Stockport, Cheshire Moorways Sports Complex, Derby
Priory School, Lewes, East Sussex
Eastbourne Sports Complex, Darlington, County Durham
Sunnydale Leisure Centre, Shildon, County Durham
Erith Running Track, Erith, Kent
Battersea Athletics Track, London
Par Recreation Ground, Cornwall.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much lottery funding the sport of basketball has received over the last 12 months. [62176]

Mr. Banks: In the period 1 December 1997 to 30 November 1998, basketball received Lottery capital sports facilities awards of £990,039 from the English Sports Council, towards total project costs of £1,285,052. The English Sports Council has awarded a total of £25,409,308 to the sport since awards began in March 1995.

Since the World Class Performance programme commenced in October 1997, 17 English wheelchair basketball players have received a combined total of £468,839 from Lottery sports funding. In addition, £14,500 has been awarded from World Class Events funding in an effort to bring the 2002 world championship for wheelchair basketball to this country.

UK Sports Institute

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many contracts for the UK Sports Institute have been (a) put out to tender and (b) signed. [62702]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 7 December 1998]: This is primarily a matter for those in Sheffield who are setting up the Headquarters of the UK Sports Institute. However, I understand that a number of contracts, including contracts for design and for site investigation as well as contracts of employment, have been let although no construction contracts have yet been put out to tender or signed. Both the UK Sports Council and Phoenix have assured me that good progress is being made.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress has been made in identifying sites for the national and regional centres of the UK Sports Institute. [62701]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 7 December 1998]: We have already announced that the Headquarters of the UK Sports Institute will be located in Sheffield. Separate announcements have been made about arrangements in Scotland. So far as England is concerned, the English Sports Council has been consulting wide with potential providers of services and I understand it will soon be in a position to make further proposals to the Government. We have already agreed that there should be a devolved regional structure. Some extra time has been taken by the Council to ensure that the whole of England is adequately covered, including East Anglia and the concentrations of population of the south coast.

National Lottery

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is the current National Lottery surplus; and if he will make a statement. [62634]

Mr. Banks: The National Lottery has so far raised £6.6 billion for Good Causes. £5.6 billion has been awarded to projects across the UK of which £2.99 billion has already been paid out. The remaining £1 billion is yet to be committed to projects. Any money held in the National Lottery Distribution Fund earns (tax free) interest for the good causes.

The recent changes to the Lottery will allow a more flexible approach to distributing Lottery money. The shift in emphasis from buildings to people should mean that more money will be distributed more quickly across the country.

PRIME MINISTER

Policy Unit (Travel)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list each overseas trip paid for out of public funds by members of the No. 10 Policy Unit since 1 May 1997, indicating in each case the (a) individuals involved, (b) destination, (c) purpose and (d) cost; and if he will make a statement. [62095]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 3 December 1998]: For the period 1 May 1997 to the end of October 1998, members of the No. 10 Policy Unit have travelled overseas on official business for talks with officials from European governments on 26 occasions. The average cost of travel was about £380.00 per person. Only one special adviser travelled on each occasion except for a visit to Bonn undertaken by three special advisers. Subsistence costs were met on four occasions, totalling approximately £700. All visits have been made in accordance with the rules set out in the Civil Service Management Code.

In addition, members of the No. 10 Policy Unit have accompanied me and other Ministers on my official visits abroad. Information on these visits has been provided in answer to previous parliamentary questions.

These arrangements follow the practice of successive administrations.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list all current special advisers in his Office; and if he will indicate the subjects on which they advise. [62798]

The Prime Minister: I refer the right hon. Member to the answers I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 30 October 1997, Official Report, column 860; my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett) on 14 January 1998, Official Report, column 233–34; the right hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Mr. Forth) on 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 278; and the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow), on 6 July 1998, Official Report, columns 356–57.

In addition, Dr. Iain Anderson is employed as a part-time, unpaid Adviser on the Millennium Bug providing advice to me and my right hon. Friend the President of the Council.

Parliament (State Opening)

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the total costs of the State Opening of Parliament. [62214]

The Prime Minister: Some £50,000 has been jointly set aside by the two Houses, from their Vote, for the State Opening of Parliament. As in previous years, approximately £1,600 has been allocated for the printing of the Queen's Speech.

The Metropolitan Police estimate policing costs for the State Opening at around £240,000, a similar figure to previous years. This excludes the costs incurred by the Metropolitan Police in providing the permanent security service within the Palace of Westminster. It also excludes costs such as catering. These figures do not include any additional cost of military staff who took part in the ceremony, which are not separately costed.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the special advisers in her Department and the issues on which they specialise; and to what level they have been security cleared. [62836]

Clare Short: I have two Special Advisers, David Mepham and Dee Sullivan, who advise me on the full range of issues for which I am responsible. They are strongly committed to international development and I value their work greatly. They work in full co-operation with my departmental officials on the issues on which it would be inappropriate for officials to work. Special Advisers are subject to the usual security clearance arrangements. It would not be appropriate to give details about the level of security clearance applying in the case of particular individuals.

Ministerial E-mail Address

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is her e-mail address. [62878]

Clare Short: The e-mail address of my office is c-short@dfid.gtnet.gov.uk.

Afghanistan

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has in respect of future humanitarian assistance to Afghanistan. [63056]

Clare Short: My Department has just concluded a review of Department for International Development's (DFID) current humanitarian programme to Afghanistan.

Our assessment is that while the forthcoming winter may see a seasonal lull in active fighting, there is little prospect for a settlement of the conflict.

Serious human rights abuses appear to have been perpetrated by all parties, and the discovery of mass graves has generated demands for an external investigation, together with the deployment of human rights monitors. We are supporting this in the UN, and have urged the involvement of the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights. The Taliban continue to impose difficult working conditions including limiting access to women. The Taliban have also not kept their pledge on narcotics, and production has actually expanded over the past year.

The UN aid agencies have not returned their expatriate staff to Afghanistan as conditions for their return (including satisfactory account of investigations into the past killings of UN workers, and assurances over future security) have not yet been met. The ICRC have remained in the country but with a curtailed programme and reduced expatriate representation. Some NGOs are sending back their expatriate staff, while others are still waiting to see what happens in coming weeks.

The humanitarian situation inside Afghanistan—in terms of basic physical needs—is under reasonable control at the present time. People are coping partly due to increased food production in areas that have seen little active fighting this year. However health services, rudimentary to start with, are further stretched or broken down. We are also informed that the situation in the Central Bamiyan region is precarious. Humanitarian needs may become more stark in parts of Afghanistan if there is a severe winter.

Current DFID Programme

During our Presidency of the European Union, the UK negotiated a Common Position, led a Joint EU Mission to create a broad consensus on aid strategy, and hosted a meeting of the Afghan Support Group in London. We also continue to support the mediation efforts of the United Nations Special Mission to Afghanistan, and the UN Secretary-General's Special Envoy Mr. Lakhdar Brahimi.

Our effort to help create a system-wide approach to Afghanistan, and increase synergy between peace-making and humanitarian assistance, has been underpinned by the provision of £8.5 million in 1998: this includes support for:

ICRC's protection, humanitarian law and medical relief work;

demining through the UN and Halo Trust;

United Nations Office For The Co-ordination Of Humanitarian Assistance for Afghanistan (UNOCHA) for co-ordination and common services to benefit the whole system (e.g. communications, logistics, aircraft);

NGOs (Afghanaid, Christian Aid, CARE, TEAR Fund, Support for Afghan Further Education (SAFE); BBC, Children in Crisis, the Agency Co-ordinating Body for Afghan Relief (ACBAR), British Agencies Afghan Group) for education, health, water, sanitation and co-ordination activities;

UNHCR for refugee care and protection programmes; and FAO for livestock and food security.

Useful impact has been achieved in terms of encouraging an effective principled common approach to programming, promoting protection, building livelihood security and making use of the available modest opportunities for education for girls and boys. We also provided disaster relief when two major earthquakes struck Northern Afghanistan earlier this year.

Forward Strategy

We will continue to remain engaged in Afghanistan. In doing so, we will be informed by the principled common programming approach under the United Nations led Strategic Framework for Afghanistan that we have been instrumental in developing and promoting. The purpose of the Strategic Framework is:

to enhance reinforcement between the United Nations political strategy in Afghanistan and international assistance activities; to promote greater effectiveness and coherence in the international assistance programme.

We recognise that the operating context for humanitarian agencies will remain highly uncertain for the time being. Until we have fresh information to the contrary, we shall continue to advise British aid workers against returning to Afghanistan because of security concerns. This means that we are not able to support NGOs that send expatriates back into the country. This restriction does not apply in the same way to ICRC and UN agencies because of their specially mandated role under international agreements.

We shall also consider further funding for ICRC and selected UN agencies in Afghanistan after appraisal of the Consolidated Interagency Appeal due to be launched next week by the United Nations. Guidance to Agencies wishing to apply for DFID funds includes the expectation that they will also subscribe to the above principles of the Strategic Framework for Afghanistan. New funding commitments would be limited to six months. We shall conduct another review of Afghanistan policy in mid-1999 unless there is significant earlier change in circumstances.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the cost to his Department of travel by Ministers in his Department in (a) RAF and (b) privately chartered aircraft (i) in the year to 1 May 1997 and (ii) since 1 May 1997. [60904]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 27 November 1998]: The cost of travel for DTI Ministers:

(a) In RAF Aircraft

(i) For the year to 1 May 1997: Nil

(ii) Since 1 May 1997: £15,934.80

(b) In Privately Chartered Aircraft

(i) For the year to 1 May: £24,199.01

(ii) Since 1 May 1997: £11,314.72.

Company Accounts

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many company directors were disqualified for one or more Companies Act 1985 offences for failing to keep adequate accounting records in each year since 1987. [61959]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 1 December 1998]: There are no known instances since 1987 where a director has been disqualified solely for failing to keep adequate accounting records.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many companies were (a) found guilty and (b) fined for not disclosing to the public that a director has (i) resigned and (ii) been appointed within two weeks of that resignation under section 288 of the Companies Act 1985 in each year since 1987. [61955]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 1 December 1998]: Since 1987 three convictions have been secured under section 288 of the Companies Act 1985. These convictions were obtained in the year 1990–91 but there is no record of the fines, if any, imposed.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the maximum available punishment following a conviction as a director of a company which failed to keep adequate accounting records. [61951]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 1 December 1998]: There are a number of penalties laid out in respect of punishment following conviction of a director of a company which failed to keep adequate accounting records. These are set out as follows under section 730, Schedule 24 of the Companies Act 1985.

Section of the Act	General nature of the offence	Mode of prosecution	Punishment
S 221(5) or 222(4)	Company failing to keep accounting records (liabilities of the officers)	1. On indictment 2. Summary	2 years or a fine: or both 6 months or the statutory maximum, £5,000; or both
S 222(6)	Officer of company failing to secure compliance with, or intentionally causing default under section 222(5) (preservation of accounting records for requisite number of years)	1. On indictment 2. Summary	2 years or a fine: or both 6 months or the statutory maximum, £5,000; or both

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many company directors were found guilty of approving accounts which did not comply with the Companies Act 1985 in each year since 1987. [61954]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 1 December 1998]: There were no prosecutions for the years 1987–1998 under the provisions of section 223(5) of the Companies Act 1985, as amended.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what was the average fine levied on a company director convicted of approving accounts which did not comply with the requirements of the Companies Act 1985 in (a) 1995, (b) 1996 and (c) 1997; [61949]

(2) how many directors were fined in 1997, and for what amounts, for approving accounts which did not comply with the requirements of the Companies Act 1985; [61952]

(3) how many company directors have been fined, and for what amounts, for approving accounts which did not comply with the requirements of the Companies Act 1985 in each year since 1987. [61950]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 1 December 1998]: There is no record of any company directors being fined for approving accounts which did not comply with the requirements of the Companies Act 1985 for the years in question.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what is the maximum punishment for conviction as a director of a company which fails to file an annual return which discloses the names of the directors and owners of the company within 28 days of its due date under section 363 of the Companies Act 1985; [61961]

(2) what is the maximum punishment following conviction for being a director of a company which fails to file financial accounts with Companies House within (i) seven months and (ii) 10 months of the end of the period of account; [61948]

(3) what is the maximum punishment for a company which does not disclose to the public that a director has (a) been appointed and (b) resigned within two weeks of that resignation under section 288 of the Companies Act 1985. [61960]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 1 December 1998]: A fine of up to £5,000 (the statutory maximum).

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many company directors have been (a) imprisoned or (b) fined over the last 10 years for approving accounts which do not comply with the requirements of the Companies Act 1985; and what is the maximum (i) prison sentence and (ii) fine which may be imposed. [61958]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 1 December 1998]: There have been no instances in the last ten years of fines or imprisonment of company directors for offences, in relation to approval of accounts that do not comply with the requirements of the Companies Act 1985. There are no provisions to imprison directors who fail to comply and the amount of fine is not specified.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many company directors were (i) found guilty and (ii) fined for failing to file an annual return which disclosed the names of the directors and owners of the company within 28 days of its due date under section 363 of the Companies Act 1985 in each year since 1987; [61947]

(2) how many company directors were fined for being a director of a company which failed to file financial accounts with Companies House within (a) seven months and (b) 10 months of the end of the period of account in each year since 1987; [61957]

(3) how many company directors were found guilty of failing to file financial accounts with Companies House within (i) seven months and (ii) 10 months of the end of the period of account in each year since 1987; and how many were fined. [61956]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 1 December 1998]: There are no figures available to answer pq 61956 and pq 61957. However, the total number of directors convicted each year since 1987 for failing to deliver annual returns and/or accounts on time to the Registrar are as follows:

Year	Number
1988–89	1,178
1989–90	1,635
1990–91	1,962
1991–92	1,716
1992–93	1,915
1993–94	1,285
1994–95	987
1995–96	636
1997–98	745

There are no figures available to show the number of directors convicted and fined during the years concerned for failing to deliver annual returns only.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many company directors have been found guilty of failing to keep adequate accounting records in each year since 1987; and what penalties were imposed. [61953]

Dr. Howells: The number of company directors that have been prosecuted for failure to keep or preserve accounting records in accordance with sections 221–223 of the Companies Act 1985 were:

S 221–223 failure to keep or preserve accounting records

Year	Offence	Prosecutions	Convictions	Numbers of charges where a conviction was not obtained
1997–98	S 221–223	134	64	70
1996–97	S 221–223	71	38	33
1995–96	S 221–223	32	22	10
1994–95	S 221–223	68	33	35
1993–94	S 221–223	118	61	57
1992–93	S 221–223	171	105	66
1991–92	S 221–223	118	69	49
1990–91	S 221–223	99	71	28
1989–90	S 221–223	116	93	23
1988–89	S 221–223	90	77	13

Statistics for earlier periods are not available and to research this information would involve disproportionate cost. Similarly there are no available records which show the level of penalties imposed for the above years. To research and gather this information would involve reference to a number of sources, such as records of Magistrate's Courts, and again the work involved would be disproportionate.

Lear Corporation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what Government grants or assistance has been requested by the Lear Corporation since 1996. [62293]

Mr. Battle: No publicly announced grants or assistance are on record.

Business Fees

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Government will announce the fee to be charged to businesses under the proposals in the Competition Bill. [62195]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 3 December 1998]: Any decision on fees will be made in good time before the new prohibition regime is brought into force on 1 March 2000 and following the statutory consultation prescribed in the Competition Act 1998.

Postage Costs

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the cost of (a) first class and (b) second class postage in each of the last 20 years, adjusted to 1998 prices. [62309]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I understand from the Post Office that first and second class postage rates in each of the last 20 years adjusted to 1998 prices were as follows:

Pence

Year	1st Class	2nd Class
1978	29.3	22.8
1979	26.9	21.2
1980	28.8	23.9
1981	30.2	24.8
1982	30.8	24.9
1983	30.4	23.9
1984	29.8	23.1
1985	29.2	22.1
1986	28.6	20.3
1987	28.7	20.8
1988	27.9	20.3
1989	27.2	20.1
1990	26.5	20.1
1991	27.5	21.1
1992	28.2	21.1
1993	27.9	21.0
1994	28.2	21.4
1996	27.2	20.8
1997	26.8	20.7
1998	26.0	20.0

Minimum Wage

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will publish the results of the consultation on the draft regulations implementing the minimum wage which ended on 6 November. [62978]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Our final proposals for the National Minimum Wage Regulations will be presented to the House for approval shortly.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to reduce the minimum wage payable by those employers who make full board and lodging available to their employees. [62982]

Mr. Ian McCartney: We have no plans to reduce the level of the national minimum wage. We are considering representations on the deductions that could be made in respect of accommodation provided by employers made to us during the consultation process on the draft National Minimum Wage Regulations. The Regulations will be presented to the House for approval shortly.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has had from British Activities Holidays Association in respect of the minimum wage; and if he will make a statement. [62979]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government have received a number of representations from the British Activity Holidays Association about the national minimum wage.

We have consulted business, employees and others with an interest on the draft National Minimum Wage Regulations. We have listened to the concerns expressed and this will be reflected in our final proposals to be announced shortly. The Regulations will be presented to the House for approval.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what factors led him to set the accommodation deductor in the draft national minimum wage regulations at its current level. [62939]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government accepted in principle the advice of the Low Pay Commission on the amounts which could be offset against the national minimum wage, subject to the practicalities of implementation and the draft National Minimum Wage regulations reflect that position. The maximum amount the Commission recommended to be offset for accommodation only was £20 per week.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on the issue of the draft national minimum wage regulations accommodation deductor; and if he will make a statement. [62940]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government have received a number of representations on the draft National Minimum Wage Regulation dealing with the treatment of deductions in respect of accommodation provided by the employer.

We have consulted business, employees and others with an interest on the draft National Minimum Wage Regulations. We have listened to the concerns expressed and our final proposals will be presented to the House for approval shortly.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to lay before the House the statutory instrument regarding the national minimum wage regulations. [62938]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The statutory instrument to implement the National Minimum Wage regulations will be presented to the House for approval shortly.

Confiscated Assets

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Government are taking to return to victims of Nazi persecution assets which were confiscated in the United Kingdom by Her Majesty's Government under trading with the enemy legislation. [63042]

Mr. Mandelson: This Government are revolted by the treatment meted out by the Nazis to Jews and other minorities during the Second World War. We have the greatest sympathy for the victims and their relatives. This is why, in June 1998, we appointed the right hon. the Lord Archer of Sandwell QC to advise on a Scheme for determining claims from victims of Nazi persecution for the return of assets, where practicable and subject to validation, placed in the UK, which were confiscated by HM Government during the Second World War. We have now received Lord Archer's recommendations and I am pleased to confirm that the Government will quickly put in place a Claims Scheme based on them. A copy of the Government's response to Lord Archer's main recommendations has been placed in the Library of the House.

The Scheme will have the following main features: any victims of Nazi persecution who had assets in the UK confiscated by HM Government under the Trading with the Enemy legislation, and who have not already been compensated, will be eligible to make a claim; the Government will pay compensation at today's values in respect of valid claims to the original owners or their heirs; and claims will be determined by a panel of three independent Assessors comprising a legal Chair; someone with financial expertise; and someone with an understanding of belonging to a minority group.

This Government are aware that time is of the essence to victims of Nazi persecution and their families. We shall therefore establish the Claims Scheme as a matter of urgency so that claims for compensation may be met as soon as possible. The terms of reference of the assessors, a claims form and guidance on how to apply will be made available as soon as is practicable.

My Department has already received a number of potential claims and we shall be writing to these individuals to inform them of the procedure. We shall also be updating my Department's enemy property website, adding further lists of names and details of the Claims Scheme as they emerge. We are also in touch with the main interest groups and together with them we shall ensure that the Scheme gets the widest publicity.

I am grateful to Lord Archer for proposing a solution which allows the Government to meet the claims of victims of Nazi persecution while addressing the real practical problems of meeting the standards of propriety expected in public expenditure in circumstances some fifty years after the event. The UK owes victims of Nazi persecution a debt of honour. That debt can now be repaid.

Gas Consumers

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent consultations he has held with the Council of Registered Gas Installers concerning the interests of gas consumers; and if he will make a statement. [62399]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 7 December 1998]: I met the Council of Registered Gas Installers on 24 November, to discuss a number of matters relating to the safe use of gas by domestic consumers.

Oil Industry

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Director General of Fair Trading will complete his review of the undertakings given by oil companies in 1966; and if he will arrange to publish this review when he receives it. [62402]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 7 December 1998]: I expect to receive the Director General of Fair Trading's advice following his review of the petrol undertakings around the end of the year. The Director General's advice is confidential.

Petrol Industry

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what conclusions he has reached on the Director General of Fair Trading's report on the wholesale and retail petrol market, published on 18 May. [62403]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 7 December 1998]: The Director General of Fair Trading, in his 18 May report on competition in the supply of petrol in the UK, concluded that the market is competitive and working to the benefit of consumers. It is for the Director General to decide whether or not to make a reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. He decided on the basis of his report that a reference of this market was not justified.

Better Payment Practice Group

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many businesses and organisations to date have joined the Better Payment Practice Group. [63111]

Mrs. Roche: The Better Payment Practice Group was established in October 1997 as an integral part of the Government's commitment to work in partnership with the private sector to bring about an improved payment culture in the UK. The role of the Group is to help shape and influence the private and public sectors' efforts to tackle the problem of late payment as well as informing the work of other organisations and sectors on this issue.

Since it began 18 representative organisations have accepted invitations to join the Better Payment Practice Group from the small firms, banking, factoring, trade credit insurance, credit management, accountancy profession and credit services sectors to look at this important issue. A key achievement for the Group has been the launch of its campaign in October this year to highlight the economic benefits that can be derived from paying on time.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the businesses and organisations which have refused invitations to join the Better Payment Practice Group. [63112]

Mrs. Roche: The Better Payment Practice Group was formed in October 1997 as a partnership between the public and private sector to bring about an improved payment culture in the UK. Since it was established no organisation invited to join the Group has refused the offer of a place.

This 100 per cent. take-up rate reflects the importance which both the private and public sectors attach to addressing the difficulties caused as a result of late payment of commercial debts.

Small Arms Exports

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the quantity of small arms exported in each of the last five years and their destination; and what (a) quantity and (b) proportion were exported to a country at war or which was at war within a year of the arms being exported. [61661]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

The information is not held in the form requested and obtaining it could be done only at disproportionate cost.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Criminal Legal Aid

34. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what are (a) the budgets and (b) the priorities for criminal legal aid in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99 and (iii) 1999–2000. [61257]

Mr. Hoon: There is no separate budget for criminal legal aid. However, in 1997–98, the cost of criminal legal aid, including advice and assistance, was £733 million. This year expenditure is expected to be around £800 million while next year it is expected to rise to £840 million.

Our priority continues to be that criminal legal aid should enable criminal justice to be dispensed fairly, effectively and without undue delay. Our proposals for contracts at fixed prices would reward efficient lawyers and provide better control over expenditure and quality.

Court Closures

35. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how many courts have closed since May 1997; and how many new ones have opened. [61258]

Mr. Hoon: I am aware of 29 magistrates courthouses closures since May 1997. It is possible that other closures have occurred following a decision by a local magistrates courts committee against which no appeal has been lodged. The Lord Chancellor has a role in magistrates courthouse closures only where an appeal has been made. Three new magistrates courthouses have opened at South Shields, Chippenham and Tameside.

Since May 1997, eight county courts have closed. There have been four court buildings opened since May 1997: Swansea County Court (June 1997), Oldham County Court (November 1997), the Immigration Appellate Authority (March 1998) and Principal Registry of the Family Division (June 1998).

38. Mr. McWalter: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to provide additional resources to boroughs which no longer have court services; and if he will make a statement. [61262]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor's Department makes grants to local authorities towards current and capital expenditure incurred by them on behalf of the magistrates courts committee for their area. The overall level of expenditure allowed to be incurred, and thereby the amount of grant due to be paid, is determined by this Department.

The formula used to calculate the amount of current grant to be paid to each local authority is under review. It has been agreed, pending the completion of this review, that each local authority will receive, in cash terms, a 1.5 per cent. increase in their grant allocation for 1999–2000 over 1998–99.

The Department has made no specific plans to provide additional resources to local authorities during 1998–99, with the exception of those areas where there are amalgamations of magistrates courts committees which may bid for additional resources towards any transitional additional costs resulting from that amalgamation. It is always open to a magistrates courts committee, in conjunction with its local authority, to bid for additional resources from this Department.

Epping Magistrates Court

36. Mrs. Laing: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has received on the future of Epping Magistrates Court. [61259]

Mr. Hoon: I considered three representations on the future of the Epping Magistrates Court, before approving the application made by the Essex Magistrates Courts Committee for the reorganisation of its petty sessional divisions.

I understand from the Justices' Chief Executive for the Essex Magistrates Courts Committee that the Committee has no proposals to close the Epping Magistrates Court.

Witness Support Schemes

37. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement about the contribution made by witness support schemes to the administration of magistrates courts. [61260]

Mr. Hoon: Witness support schemes give information about court procedures, arrange with the court pre-court familiarisation visits and provide separate waiting facilities on the day of the witness's court appearances, and give emotional support. The Government are committed to improving witness services in the magistrates courts, reflecting the considerable importance that is attached to the welfare of witnesses in the criminal courts.

Judicial Appointments Commission

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make it his policy to establish a judicial appointments commission. [61253]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor announced in October 1997 that, given the priority of other radical reforms, work on a judicial appointments commission would not proceed for the time being. He has made significant changes to the appointments process, including the extension of advertising of vacancies to include High Court appointments; more flexibility in part-time sitting arrangements to encourage applications, in particular from women; and an increase in the upper age limit for appointment as Assistant Recorders and lay magistrates in order to widen the field of applicants.

Worthing County Court

Mr. Flight: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has received about the proposed closure of Worthing County Court; and if he will make a statement. [61250]

Mr. Hoon: The hon. Member for Worthing, West (Mr. Bottomley) and the Worthing Law Society have written separately to the Lord Chancellor. Before any consideration is given to closure, court users will be asked for their views early in the New Year.

Rights of Audience

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps are being taken to extend rights of audience before the courts for solicitors and employed barristers. [61251]

Mr. Hoon: The Access to Justice Bill includes provisions to give all solicitors and barristers full rights of audience before all the courts, provided they meet the training and conduct requirements imposed by their professional bodies. The Bill proposes to give employed barristers and solicitors, including Crown Prosecutors, the same rights of audience as their colleagues in private practice.

SCOTLAND

Special Adviser

8. Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many special advisers are employed in his Department; and what is the total cost to public funds in the current financial year. [61271]

19. Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total cost to public funds of employing special advisers in his Department in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [61282]

Mr. Dewar: There are three Special Advisers employed in my Department. Their salaries are negotiated individually and are confidential within the three-band range announced to the House by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 16 November 1998, Official Report, columns 354–55.

Beef

10. Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the NFU in Scotland to discuss the promotion of Scottish beef. [61273]

Mr. Dewar: I have met the farming industry several times in recent months and discussed the promotion of Scottish beef and other matters with the President of the Scottish NFU when I met him on 24 November 1998.

Regaining export markets for Scotch beef is vital and my noble Friend Lord Sewel is working closely with the industry. But it is not the only opportunity for our Scottish industry; I want to help the farming industry secure a healthy sustainable future. My noble Friend and I will meet the Scottish NFU and other organisations on 22 December to launch discussions on the way ahead for the Scottish farming industry and related sectors.

Vehicle Excise Duty

11. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has made to the Treasury regarding proposals for varying the vehicle excise duty in Scotland. [61274]

Mr. Macdonald: I very much welcome my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer's commitment to make payment of Vehicle Excise Duty fairer for owners of lower emission cars. I encourage interested parties in Scotland to contribute their views.

Health Service

12. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the planned expenditure on the health service in Scotland. [61275]

Mr. Galbraith: Net expenditure on the Health Service in Scotland is planned to be £4.6 billion in 1998–99. Following the Comprehensive Spending Review an extra £1.8 billion is planned to be spent over the period 1999–2000 to 2001–02. Planned spending next year will be at a record high of £4.9 billion or about £960 per head.

Scottish Parliament

13. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received regarding elections to the Scottish Parliament. [61276]

Mr. Dewar: Since the publication of the White Paper, "Scotland's Parliament", last year we have received many representations on a wide range of issues to do with the elections to the Scottish Parliament.

21. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the Scottish Parliament to sit for the first time. [61284]

Mr. McLeish: Section 2 of the Scotland Act 1998 provides that the date of the Parliament's first sitting will be prescribed in an order by the Secretary of State. My right hon. Friend will make an announcement on this in due course, but we expect that the Parliament will first meet a few days after the elections on 6 May.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to review the method by which additional members of the Scottish parliament will be elected. [62087]

Mr. McLeish: The electoral system for the Scottish Parliament is set out in the Scotland Act 1998, which received Royal Assent on 19 November. We have no plans to review this.

Farmers (Assistance)

14. Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he will take to assist farmers in Scotland. [61277]

Mr. Macdonald: Assistance is currently running at record levels. Last year, direct payments to Scottish farmers totalled almost half a billion pounds and latest indications are that a similar amount will be recorded for 1998. Throughout this year we have implemented a range of additional measures and these have been worth about £50 million. On 16 November, a further £36 million was approved for payment early next year.

Strategic Defence Review

15. Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the impact of the strategic defence review on Scotland. [61278]

Mr. Dewar: I welcome the outcomes of this Review conducted by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence. It ensures that Scotland will continue to play a prominent role in meeting Britain's defence requirements.

Office for National Statistics

16. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the status which the Office for National Statistics kitemark carries on official documents published by the Scottish Office. [61279]

Mr. Dewar: ONS does not operate a kitemarking scheme. Some Scottish Office publications bear the logo of the Government Statistical Service (GSS). The logo is not used for publications which are not prepared on behalf of the GSS, or where the content of a publication is set out in statute.

The Scottish Office is committed to adhering to the Official Statistics Code of Practice in all statistical work, whether or not carried out on behalf of GSS.

New Parliament Building

17. Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest estimate of the cost of the new Parliament building. [61280]

Mr. McLeish: The construction costs of the new Scottish Parliament building at Holyrood continue to be estimated at around £55 million including site acquisition and demolition costs but not including fees and VAT.

EU Enlargement

18. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last visited the European Parliament to discuss the implications for Scotland of EU enlargement. [61281]

Mr. Macdonald: I visited the European Parliament in June of this year while my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met the President of the European Parliament when he visited Scotland on 3–4 December. On both occasions the issues discussed included EU enlargement.

Funding Transfers

20. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to transfer funding from local authorities in Scotland to the Scottish Parliament. [61283]

Mr. McLeish: My right hon. Friend has no such plans.

Anti-drugs Strategy

22. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on progress with the Government's anti-drugs strategy in Scotland following the appointment of the United Kingdom anti-drugs co-ordinator. [61285]

Mr. Galbraith: Following the publication of the White Paper "Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain", my right hon. Friend and I have asked the Scottish Advisory Committee on Drug Misuse and the Drug Action Teams in Scotland to consider further development of the Government's drugs strategy for Scotland.

We expect to issue an enhanced drugs strategy framework for Scotland in the first part of 1999.

Domestic Abuse

23. Miss Begg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action the Government are taking to protect the victims of domestic abuse. [61286]

Mrs. Liddell: Tackling domestic violence is a priority for the Scottish Office. We are taking action on 3 fronts.

We have established a Scottish Partnership on Domestic Violence which met for the first time on 23 November under the chairmanship of Anne Smith QC.

On 13 November we issued a consultation document entitled "Preventing Violence Against Women: A Scottish Office Action Plan". This contained 27 Action Points.

We are also preparing a new awareness raising campaign which will begin at Christmas and roll out over the next 3 years.

Home Ownership

24. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on levels of home ownership in Scotland. [61287]

Mr. Macdonald: The estimate for December 1997 recently published in the Scottish Office Statistical Bulletin (Housing Series), is that, 60.2 per cent. of all dwellings in Scotland are owner-occupied.

Farming Support

25. Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the farming industry to discuss support for Scottish farms. [61289]

Mr. Macdonald: Support for the agricultural industry was one of the matters discussed when my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State last met representatives of the farming industry on 24 November.

Further Education

26. Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what additional resources have been channelled into further education since 1 May 1997. [61290]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government have been able to make available to the further education (FE) sector in 1997–98 and 1998–99 £12.4 million more than the planning figures set by the previous Administration. This is in spite of the Government's commitment to operate within the overall spending limits planned by the previous Administration for the period.

Further education in Scotland is to receive a massive boost over the next three years, as a result of the Comprehensive Spending Review. In total, the FE budget will receive an additional £214 million over the period, to support further increases in student numbers, promote wider access to FE, improve quality and standards, and stabilise the financial position of the sector.

Higher Still

27. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action the Government are taking to ensure that Higher Still proceeds on time. [61291]

Mrs. Liddell: We are on course to introduce the first Higher Still courses in 1999. Over £24 million is being provided over the three year period up to 2001–02 to help classroom teachers implement Higher Still. This is in addition to the £20 million which will have been directly invested in Higher Still by the time the first classes start in 1999. An unprecedented level of support materials and national training is also being provided, and two additional in-service days have been granted for local training.

In addition, I have set up a Liaison Group consisting of representatives from teaching unions, local authorities, further education and parents' organisations, to discuss detailed arrangements for the phasing of Higher Still in 1999–2000. The Group will also consider other topics of concern identified by members.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the Education Institute of Scotland to discuss the implementation of Higher Still. [61288]

Mrs. Liddell: I had a positive and constructive meeting with representatives of the EIS on 24 November. This resulted in the EIS suspending its boycott of preparations for Higher Still and joining the Liaison Group which I have set up to agree the detailed arrangements for the rephasing of Higher Still in 1999–2000.

Parliamentary Constituencies

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to review the rules that will determine the number of Scottish parliamentary constituencies. [62086]

Mr. McLeish: Section 86 of the Scotland Act removes the current requirement in the Parliamentary Constituencies Act 1986 for there to be a minimum number of Scottish constituencies, so that this requirement will not apply at future reviews of parliamentary boundaries in Scotland. Section 86 further provides that the electoral quota for Scotland will in future be the same as that for England. I have no plans for any further review of these provisions.

Racism

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures is he taking to combat racism in Scotland. [62088]

Mr. McLeish: The Government are firmly committed to combating racism in all its forms. In Scotland, we have taken steps to meet the Government's commitment to put racial equality at the heart of our policy agenda by introducing new measures in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 to deal with racially aggravated offences; working with key agencies such as the NHS and the Employment Service to make services more accessible to minority communities; and promoting racial equality projects through funding the Ethnic Minority Grant Scheme. The Scottish Social Inclusion Strategy recognises the exclusion that some minority communities face, and we have made equal opportunity a key principle to underpin the Scottish Parliament so that it can be responsive to the whole range of Scottish society.

I plan to meet the Commission for Racial Equality shortly to discuss how we can work together to raise the profile of racial equality in Scotland as we look ahead to the Parliament. In addition, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland has demonstrated his own personal commitment to racial equality by signing up to the Commission's Leadership Challenge.

SSSIs and National Parks

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will publish the findings of the consultation exercise concerning reform of SSSIs and national parks. [62255]

Mr. Macdonald: The Scottish Office is currently considering responses to the consultation paper "People and Nature: A New Approach to SSSI Designations in Scotland". My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland expects to make an announcement in the early part of next year.

Scottish Natural Heritage (SNH) recently consulted on proposals for National Parks appropriate to Scottish circumstances. The responses to the consultation will be taken into account by SNH in the advice that it provides to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland. It is intended that SNH publish its advice in the early part of next year.

Devolution (Concordats)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many concordats remain to be published; and if he will make a statement. [62186]

Mr. McLeish: Work is progressing on concordats both within the Scottish Office and in Whitehall Departments. None of them has yet been published.

Ministerial E-mail Address

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his e-mail address. [62564]

Mr. Dewar: Electronic mail for me should be sent to scottish.secretary@scotland.gov.uk. This address is published on the home page of The Scottish Office Website.

School Toilets

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many schools have outside toilets (a) in each education authority and (b) in Scotland. [62648]

Mrs. Liddell: The information is not collected centrally.

Teachers

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) pupils and (b) full-time equivalent teachers there were in each education authority in (i) primary schools and (ii) secondary schools; and in each case what the pupil-teacher ratio (1) was in 1997 and (2) is currently. [62649]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested is set out in the tables.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average per capita spending (a) in each education authority and (b) in Scotland in (i) primary schools and (ii) secondary schools on (1) books, (2) computer equipment and (3) other education materials and equipment in the most recent three years for which figures are available. [62647]

Mrs. Liddell: The available information is given in the following tables which have been compiled from local authority financial returns. Details for 1994–95 and 1995–96 are under the council areas then applicable, whereas the table for 1996–97 reflects the current local authority structure. There can be variations in the recording of expenditure under the two headings. It is, therefore, possible that some expenditure on books may be included under expenditure on equipment or vice versa. Expenditure on computer equipment is not identified separately in local authority returns to The Scottish Office for the years in question.

Scottish Members of Parliament

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on his proposal to reduce the number of hon. Members for Scottish constituencies; and if he will make a statement. [61270]

Mr. McLeish: We recognise that the creation of the Scottish Parliament means that the present level of Scottish representation at Westminster cannot be maintained, a view which has received very broad support.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

China

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the human rights situation in China; and what has been the impact of United Kingdom and European Union policy. [63146]

Mr. Fatchett: We continue to have many serious concerns about human rights in China. During his visit to China earlier this year my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary raised these concerns with Chinese leaders, as did my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister. Recently, the Chinese Government has taken some positive steps in this field, which we have welcomed, while repeating our desire to address issues of concern through the continuing bilateral and EU/China Human Rights Dialogues.

Since the commencement of the bilateral UK/China Dialogue, and the resumption of the EU/China Human Rights Dialogue, last year, China has taken several positive steps which will bring about its closer integration into the UN human rights system, and should in time help to strengthen protection of human rights in China. It has signed the International Covenants on Civil and Political Rights and on Economic Social and Cultural Rights; agreed to report to the UN on Hong Kong under these two Covenants; admitted the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, Mrs. Robinson, as well as the UN Working Group on Arbitrary Detention; and welcomed a possible visit by the UN Special Rapporteur on Torture.

In addition, China has allowed a visit by a delegation of EU Troika Ambassadors to Tibet and accepted the participation in the Dialogue of critical NGOs such as Amnesty International. It is also noteworthy that the Dialogue has allowed us to discuss privately and frankly with the Chinese authorities a range of concerns from Tibet, to the death penalty, freedom of association and torture.

Both Britain and the EU have now established substantial co-operation programmes with China, funded respectively by DFID and the Commission, and these seek among other things to promote judicial exchanges and legal reform.

We shall encourage the Chinese Government to ratify the International Human Rights Covenants, with as few reservations as possible, as soon as possible. We want to see further reform in China's capital punishment regime, leading ultimately to abolition, as well as improvements in its systems of detention. At the same time we shall continue to raise the cases of individuals, as we did on 2 December, when we expressed our concern to the Chinese Government at the recent detention of Mr. Xu Wenli, a prominent dissident. We look forward to discussing these and other points with the Chinese Government.

MI6

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he takes to ensure that former MI6 personnel who take up private sector posts do not utilise information gained whilst employed by MI6 for the advantage of their new employers. [62426]

Mr. Robin Cook: SIS staff are bound by the same conditions as home civil servants and members of HM Diplomatic Service with regard to acceptance of outside appointments after resignation or retirement. These include, where appropriate, reference to the Advisory Committee on Business Appointments, and approval by myself.

Government Hospitality (Wine)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the total expenditure on wine for Government hospitality purposes since 1 May 1997; what is the average cost of each bottle purchased; and what percentage of wine purchased is of UK origin. [62422]

Mr. Fatchett: The cost of wine purchased for all Government Hospitality purposes from 1 May 1997 to 25 November 1998 was £146,985 inclusive of VAT (the cost of wine purchased for all Government Hospitality purposes from 1 November 1995 to 30 April 1997 was £192,604 inclusive of VAT). The average cost per bottle was £11.72 inclusive of VAT. English and Welsh wines comprised 4 per cent. of the total bought.

Telephone Records

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if telephone records exist that could enable the tracing of external telephone calls from particular extension numbers in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to external numbers on 28 and 29 April. [62440]

Mr. Fatchett: No such records exist.

Mercenaries

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the Government's current guidelines on relationships with mercenary companies; and when he will announce new guidelines. [62080]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The current guidelines on FCO official contacts with private military companies are those referred to by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary in his statement to the House on 27 July 1998, Official Report, column 21. These guidelines are now being revised in consultation with other Government Departments. The new guidelines will be announced shortly.

Visa Application (Maladministration)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will name the diplomat criticised in the Ombudsman's recent report relating to maladministration in connection with a visa application by a UK businessman; and for what reasons his Department did not take the action recommended by the Ombudsman. [62948]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The diplomat involved is Sir David Gore-Booth, currently British High Commissioner in New Delhi.

The FCO fully accepts the conclusions in the Ombudsman's report and has apologised to the complainant. In addition the FCO has offered him an ex gratia payment of £5,000 in compensation for the manner in which his complaints were handled.

Sir David Gore-Booth

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the resignation of Sir David Gore-Booth from the Diplomatic Service. [62947]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Sir David Gore-Booth will be leaving the Diplomatic Service on 31 December 1998 in order to take up a post in the Private Sector.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the present members of the St. Helena Government. [63063]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Subject to the provisions of the St. Helena Constitution Order 1988, the executive authority of St. Helena is exercised on behalf of Her Majesty by the Governor, who is advised by an Executive Council. The Governor is Mr. D. L. Smallman, LVO.

The present members of the Executive Council are:

Hon. T. Richards: Chairman, Agricultural and Natural Resources Committee

Hon. E. W. George: Chairman, Public Health Committee

Hon. S. George: Chairman, Public Works and Service Committee

Hon. R. Robertson: Chairman, Education Committee

Hon. W. Drabble: Chairman, Employment and Social Services Committee

Mr. M. Clancy: Chief Secretary

Mr. M. Young: Financial Secretary

Mr. K. de Freitas: Attorney General.

Currently the hon. Mrs. P. Peters and Mr. J. Siraut are temporary members of the Executive Council during the absence from St. Helena of Councillor Drabble and Mr. Young.

Members of the Legislative Council have an important role to play in the government of St. Helena as legislators and members of the Council Committees which influence policy development.

Idi Amin

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Government of Saudi Arabia calling for them to expel Idi Amin from their territory. [63097]

Mr. Fatchett: We have no plans to make such representations.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Belfast Harbour

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made by Belfast Harbour Commissioners in developing their proposals for the transfer of the port to the private sector; what consultation there will be on the proposals; and if she will make a statement. [63222]

Marjorie Mowlam: In May this year, the Government conveyed their agreement, in principle, to the Belfast Harbour Commissioners' proposals to transfer the Port to the private sector by means of a placed flotation, with the aim of establishing a private/public partnership, with Government retaining a Golden Share interest. Since then the Commissioners have made good progress in further developing their proposals with the view to submitting a formal Transfer Scheme to the Department, under the terms of the Ports (NI) Order 1994.

This legislation provides for a 6-week public consultation on submission of a Transfer Scheme to the Department. However, local elected representatives have expressed the view that this period is insufficient given the strategic importance of the Port in Northern Ireland context. Following discussions with the Belfast Harbour Commissioners therefore, it has been agreed that the Commissioners will now embark on a consultation process involving local Political Parties and other interested groups, before finalising their proposals and submitting their Transfer Scheme.

It is expected that this further consultation will extend over a 3–4 month period and this means that the final decision on the Commissioners' Transfer Scheme will be taken by the Assembly. I am writing today to each of the Northern Ireland Political parties explaining in more detail the arrangements for the extended consultation process.

Chief Electoral Officer

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will publish the report of the Chief Electoral Officer for Northern Ireland for 1997–98. [63223]

Marjorie Mowlam: The Chief Electoral Officer's annual report has been laid before Parliament today. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

DEFENCE

Tank Transporter (Cenotaph Parade)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what type of transporter the Challenger II tank used in the Whitehall Cenotaph parade on Sunday 15 November was brought into central London; how many axles it had; who owned it; and if he will make a statement. [62082]

Mr. Spellar: The Challenger II tank used in the Whitehall Cenotaph parade on Sunday 15 November was moved by a civilian tractor and low loader trailer unit with 10 axles, owned by Messrs Kings Heavy Haulage of Bristol. The move into and out of Whitehall was conducted in conjunction with the Metropolitan Police and other civil police authorities.

Pay and Personnel Agency

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the outcome of consultation with his Department's trades union officials about the recommendations of the efficiency review of the Pay and Personnel Agency. [63145]

Mr. Spellar: Further to my reply to the hon. Member for Tewkesbury (Mr. Robertson) on 28 October 1998, Official Report, column 206, the consultation process is now complete. I have accepted the recommendations of the efficiency review, including the closure of the Worcester office, but in the light of representations made by the Trade Unions I have agreed that the implementation of certain other recommendations from the review should be delayed until later next year. These adjustments to the timetable will help the handling of the important changes in the way the agency conducts its business but will not significantly affect the savings anticipated in the PPA's running costs in the next financial year. The implementation of the review's proposals, especially those concerning the transfer of pensions work from Worcester to Cheadle Hulme, will be sufficiently flexible to ensure the effective transfer of existing skills and will include a contingency to meet any changing demands upon the agency. I am today informing the MOD Trade Unions of my decision.

Defence Diversification

Mr. Beard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the libraries that hold copies of the submissions received in response to the consultation exercise on defence diversification announced in Cm 3861. [63224]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Microfiche copies of the submissions received have been placed in the Parliamentary Libraries and in the following major libraries.

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what requests his Department has received for the disclosure of papers dated between 6 November 1997 and 17 July 1998 relating to depleted uranium; what response he has given; if he has authorised investigations by MoD police relating to these papers; and if he will make a statement. [63035]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Ministry of Defence has received two requests for copies of documents, dated between 6 November 1997 and 17 July 1998, which relate to depleted uranium. Both requests, which were from the same individual, are being considered under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

The documents were requested by reference to details given in a document list which has been reported to the Ministry of Defence Police as having been stolen from the Gulf Veterans' Illnesses Medical Assessment Programme based at St. Thomas' Hospital, London. Since then the Ministry of Defence Police have been investigating the reported theft in the normal way.

The Chief Constable of the Ministry of Defence Police is independent of ministerial and departmental influence in operational policing matters and it is for him to authorise any investigations.

Armed Forces (Married Quarters)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the numbers of married quarters available to each service of the Armed Forces in Scotland by location; and how many are currently occupied by families. [62541]

Mr. Spellar: Housing for Service families is a tri-Service resource with no allotment of estates to individual Services.

Management information on housing is maintained by Defence Housing Executive Area, not by individual location, which could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The information requested, broken down by the three Areas covering Scotland is:

All as at 31 October 1998	Total stock	Number occupied
Area 23
Helensburgh and South West Scotland	1,637	1,057
Area 24
Rosyth and South East Scotland	2,016	1,593
Area 25
Highlands and Islands	2,425	1,945

Note:
The Total Stock figure includes houses held for, or undergoing major modernisation works and some awaiting disposal.

Gulf War Syndrome Victims

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he was informed, before they took place, about recent searches of the homes of Gulf War Syndrome victims by his Department's police. [63065]

Mr. Doug Henderson: No. The execution of search warrants is an operational matter for the Chief Constable of the MOD Police. The Chief Constable of the Ministry of Defence Police is independent of Ministerial and Departmental influence in operational policing matters.

MOD Policies (Public Reaction)

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the result of research carried out into public reaction to his Department's policies since 1 May 1997. [63144]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 30 June 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my predecessor on 28 July 1998, Official Report, column 199. I regret that the information provided contained minor inaccuracies and did not specify which reports would be placed in the Library. The research listed was that reported to the Survey Control Unit of the Office for National Statistics.

The RAF attitude survey and advertising tracking research was commissioned in March 1997 not March 1998 and should not therefore have been included in the previous answer. The Army fitness video research was commissioned but was not in fact, undertaken.

The following reports have now been placed in the Library of the House:

DEXSA 1998 Exhibition

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which (a) ministers and (b) officials visited the DEXSA 1998 exhibition in South Africa. [62081]

Mr. George Robertson: No British Ministers attended DEXSA 1998. Thirty-five UK based MOD staff attended: of these ten were British Army personnel demonstrating British equipment to prospective buyers and six were members of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) who supervised the DERA stand. A further 13 locally based staff also attended.

SOCIAL SECURITY

State Earnings-related Pension Scheme

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what weekly SERPS pension would be received in April 2000 by (a) a man, on retirement, who had earned average male earnings throughout his working life, (b) the widow of such a man who died after 31 March 2000 and (c) a married woman, on retirement, who had earned average female earnings throughout her working life, except for 10 years during which she received child benefit, under the SERPS rules which existed (i) when SERPS was first introduced, (ii) following the enactment of legislation basing pensions entitlement on life time earnings and related changes and (iii) following the Pensions Act 1995. Widow	101.85	50.15	48.70
Female—full record	64.20	63.05	60.15
Female—10 years blank	39.40	35.10	34.50

Notes:

1. Figures are in April 2000 prices and are rounded to the nearest 5 pence.
2. The estimates assume constant average earnings for men and women.
3. 1975 Act figures include the best 20 years and the full 25 per cent accrual rate.
4. 1986 Act figures allow for lifetime earnings and 24.5 per cent. accruals post 1988. The introduction of Home Responsibilities Protection for SERPS from 1999 has not been included in the answer.
5. 1995 Act figures allow for annualization.
6. The estimates for females assume that the blank years are from 1978/79–1987/88.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of people who will be affected in each of the 20 years after 2000 by the decision to halve SERPS for widowers and widows whose spouse dies on or after 6 April 2000. [61149]

Angela Eagle [Holding answer 27 November 1998]: The information is in the table.

Information on the average number of widows and widowers who could be affected at any one time in each year

Year	Number of widows and widowers affected
2000–01	105,000
2001–02	310,000
2002–03	500,000
2003–04	675,000
2004–05	845,000
2005–06	1,000,000
2006–07	1,145,000

Information on the average number of widows and widowers who could be affected at any one time in each year

Year	Number of widows and widowers affected
2007–08	1,280,000
2008–09	1,410,000
2009–10	1,530,000
2010–11	1,640,000
2011–12	1,745,000
2012–13	1,845,000
2013–14	1,940,000
2014–15	2,025,000
2015–16	2,110,000
2016–17	2,190,000
2017–18	2,265,000
2018–19	2,335,000
2019–20	2,405,000
2020–21	2,470,000

Notes:

1. It should be noted that some of these people may have no SERPS entitlement and will not be affected by the change.
2. The proposed new schemes for widows and widowers under State Pension age have not been taken into account.
3. Cases where the widower is over state pension age but the deceased partner is under State Pension age are included in the estimates.
4. Figures are for GB only.
5. Numbers are rounded to the nearest 5,000.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the special advisers in his Department and the issues on which they specialise; and to what level they have been security cleared. [62833]

Mr. Denham: This Department employs Andrew Maugham as economic adviser to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, across the full range of Departmental issues. All special advisers are subject to the usual security clearance arrangements.

War Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the take-up rate of war pensions. [62873]

Mr. Timms: It is not possible to estimate take-up of War Pensions. Only a minority of former members of the HM forces suffer any disablement due to service.

We estimate that 16 per cent. of service personnel discharged from the HM forces since 1945 have claimed a War Disablement Pension.

Work Incentives and Benefits

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to publish the results of his research on (a) work incentives and intermediaries, (b) attitudes towards housing benefits and (c) take-up of income support among older citizens; and if he will, in each case, place a copy of such results in the Library. [62872]

Angela Eagle: The research on work incentives and intermediaries was published on 15 September 1998, as the Department's Research Report Number 85—Elam G, Diffley M, and Shaw A, (1998) "Getting the Message Across", CDS. A copy was placed in the Library.

The Department will publish a research report on "Attitudes to the Welfare State and Responses to Reform" in the first quarter of 1999. This report will include a chapter on the research into attitudes towards Housing Benefits.

Research to understand why pensioners do not claim the Income Support to which they are entitled began at the end of last year. The fieldwork is now complete and a report is being prepared. Preliminary findings from qualitative research were published in June 1998 as the Department's Research Summary Number 6 "Older People and Income Support: Barriers and Triggers to the take-up of Income Support". A copy was placed in the Library. Full results are due early next year, and publication is expected in Spring.

Family Credit

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to separate bursaries from income when assessing an applicant's entitlement to family credit; and if he will make a statement. [62413]

Angela Eagle: There are no plans to separate bursaries from income when assessing an applicant's entitlement to Family Credit.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security under what statutory authority he can amend (a) the taper, (b) the rates of credit and (c) the structure of the child care subsidy within the family credit system. [62953]

Angela Eagle: The statutory authorities are:

(a) Regulation 48 of the Family Credit General Regulations 1987;

(b) Schedule 4 to the Family Credit General Regulations 1987; and

(c) Regulations 13 and 13A of the Family Credit General Regulations 1987.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total sum paid to local authorities in Wales for the last complete financial year to enable them to discharge their obligation to pay council tax benefit to eligible claimants. [62503]

Angela Eagle: The total sum payable by this Department to local authorities in Wales for 1996–97 to enable them to discharge their obligations to pay Council Tax Benefit was £86.2 million.

Note:

The figure for 1996–97 is the last financial year available.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Employment Service

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the reasons for the Employment Service's failure (a) to meet its target for placing unemployed people into work and (b) to stay within its planned unit cost of placing unemployed people into work in 1997–98. [61074]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 30 November 1998]: The main reason for the shortfall was the introduction by ES—after the unemployed placing target was set—of a new, more rigorous, recording and validation system for job placings. Whilst improving the accuracy of performance information, this action reduced the number of job placings recorded. The welcome fall in unemployment during 1997–98 also meant there were fewer long term unemployed people for ES to help into work. The unemployed job placing target for 1998–99 has been set to take account of the new placing validation system, and the lower level of unemployment.

The 1997–98 planned unit cost of an unemployed placing was based on the assumption that the ES would achieve its placing target with the resources available. Due to the shortfall in unemployed job placings, the ES was unable to stay within its planned unit cost.

ES performance during 1997–98 should be seen in context of the excellent work it undertook to ensure the successful implementation of the New Deal programmes and other Welfare to Work initiatives.

Class Sizes

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if, where admission limits to infant schools are in excess of multiples of 30, his Department will insist on reduction or increases to admission numbers when agreeing local education authority development plans. [61823]

Ms Estelle Morris: No. It is a matter for local decision how local education authorities and school governing bodies comply with the duty to limit infant classes to 30 or under with effect from the start of the 2001–02 school year. Adjusting published school admission numbers relating to infant classes to multiples of 30 is one of a number of options available, although admission authorities have a duty to vary standard numbers where these are incompatible with class size limits. The Department will consider the plans put forward by local education authorities in the light of local needs and circumstances.

Local authority plans must give due regard to the exercise of parental preference. Our guidance states that this can be best achieved by adding to the number of classes in popular and high achieving schools which are able to expand. Where this is not possible local education authorities should ensure that there is sufficient space at another local school which offers a broadly equivalent standard of education.

Teachers (Resignations)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total number of qualified teachers who left teaching in each of the years 1992–93 to 1997–98 for reasons other than reaching the normal retirement age; and if he will provide an analysis of the reasons. [61819]

Ms Estelle Morris: The following table shows full and part-time qualified teachers (excluding short term supply teachers) who left teaching in the maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools sector in England and Wales, during the financial years shown, by their position at the end of the year.

Changes, made in April and September 1997, to the early retirement arrangements for teachers are now bringing down the numbers of premature and ill-health retirements.

Dead or barred	400	400	400	400	400
Ill-health retirement	3,900	4,500	5,100	5,000	5,200
Premature retirement (redundancy)	2,300	3,000	2,400	3,200	3,100
Premature retirement (efficiency)[2]	5,400	5,400	5,400	5,900	7,900
Not in service—men[3,4]	3,400	3,100	3,400	2,900	3,100
Not in service—women[3,4]	14,100	12,300	13,600	11,100	11,000
Total leaving teaching service	29,500	28,700	30,300	28,500	30,700
Going to other teaching service[5]	4,000	10,300	4,500	5,000	4,400

[1] 1996–97 figures are provisional

[2] The increase in premature retirements on efficiency grounds in 1996–97 was mainly caused by teachers leaving before the changes to the early retirement arrangements in September 1997.

[3] Some of the teachers shown as not in service may be in service that is not recorded i.e. in independent schools that are not part of the Teachers Pension Scheme (TPS).

[4] A number of the teachers shown as not in service will have taken career breaks and will return to teaching.

[5] Going to other service such as short term supply teaching, independent schools (that are part of the TPS) or the further education sector. Only the 1992–93 figures include teachers leaving sixth form colleges. In 1993–94, sixth form colleges left the schools sector, this has distorted the number of teachers apparently leaving the schools sector and moving to another sector in 1993–94. From 1994–95 onwards, teachers leaving sixth form colleges are excluded.

Undergraduates

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of undergraduates of British nationality entering (a) Oxford, (b) Cambridge and (c) the London School of Economics came from (i) fee-paying private schools and (ii) selective grammar schools in each year since 1968. [62027]

Mr. Mudie: The available information for the years 1994 to 1997 is shown in Table 1. The data are taken from information collected by the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS). Prior to 1994, the data were collected by the Universities Central Council for Admissions (UCCA) but were not published separately for each university.

Data for Oxford and Cambridge for the years prior to 1994 are however published by the admissions offices of these universities and available data are shown in Table 2, though this does not separately identify grammar schools.

Further and Higher Education

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to allow the use of local authority benefits data and Benefits Agency data to target Access resources for the recruitment of students to further education and higher education. [62545]

Mr. Mudie: This is a matter for those administering student support arrangements to agree locally, but I would not expect them to ask for such detailed information on individual students. Confirmation that a student or their parents are in receipt of an income-related benefit is usually all that is needed. The arrangements have operated in this way for a number of years.

Teacher Morale

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of teacher morale; and if he will make a statement. [62361]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My colleagues and I continually assess teacher morale through the various contacts we have with teachers, which include visits to schools, face to face meetings, correspondence and consultations. We have published, on 3 December, a Green Paper setting out our vision of a modernised profession capable of creating a world class education service.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many staff are employed in units of his Department established since May 1997; [63059]

(2) how many employees his Department had in May 1997; and how many it has currently. [63067]

Mr. Mudie: There are currently 204 DfEE staff employed in new Divisions established since May 1997. In May 1997, there were 4,230 staff in the DfEE. There are currently 4,245 staff.

Education Council (EC)

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the outcome of the Council of EC Education Ministers held on 4 December. [63261]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Council, at which my noble Friend the Minister for Education and Employment represented the UK, reached agreement on common position texts for European Parliament and Council decisions establishing the second phases of the Socrates and Leonardo da Vinci programmes. Agreement was also reached on a Council decision establishing the third phase of the Tempus programme.

The Council received information from the European Commission on implementation of the Commission's White Paper "Teaching and Learning: Towards the Learning Society" and on the Commission's Action Plan on the promotion of transnational mobility in the Community in the fields of education, training and youth. The Council also received information from the Austrian delegation on education events organised during the Austrian Presidency of the Council of Ministers.

WALES

Development Agencies

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representatives of the Welsh and Scottish development agencies are stationed outside the United Kingdom. [62023]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh and Scottish Development Agencies have the following representatives stationed outside the UK:

	Welsh Development Agency
Europe	5
Asia Pacific	8
Japan	3
USA	7
Total	24

Scottish Enterprise

	Locate in Scotland	Scottish Trade International
USA	18	5
Asia	6	6
Europe	6	5
South America	—	2
South Africa	—	1
United Arab Emirates	—	1
Total	30	20

In addition, Highlands and Islands Enterprise have two representatives in Europe.

World Heritage Site Nominations

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those organisations in Wales involved in reviewing World Heritage Site nominations resulting from the Government's recent consultation. [62050]

Mr. Hain: Welsh candidates for the UK Tentative List of potential World Heritage Sites were provisionally identified by the Ancient Monuments Board for Wales and the Historic Buildings Council for Wales (in consultation with Cadw: Welsh Historic Monuments) and the Countryside Council for Wales. All local authorities in Wales as well as specialist bodies with an interest in the recommended sites, were subsequently consulted. Cadw has been involved in the review of the results of consultation co-ordinated by the Department of Culture, Media and Sport.

Semi-conductor, Newport

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much financial assistance has been provided to date by his Department and by Government bodies in Wales to LG Industries for the proposed semi-conductor investment at Newport, Gwent. [62223]

Mr. Hain: Out of the total support package offered to the overall LG development at Newport the payments to LG Semicon to date amount to £43.328 million. This represents the apportioned value of the land acquired for the development, the general infrastructure and site development costs attributable to LG Semicon, and the property development grant paid by the Welsh Development Agency. This total also include training grants of £528,487 paid by Gwent TEC.

None of the grant offered under the Regional Selective Assistance scheme has yet been paid.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what procedures his Department has in place to ensure that LG Industries repays any financial assistance received from his Department and from Governmental bodies in Wales for the proposed semi-conductor investment at Newport, Gwent, if the proposed investment does not go ahead. [62224]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh Development Agency has agreements in place with both LG Electronics Ltd. and LG Semicon Ltd. which provide for recovery of grant payments in appropriate circumstances. The Regional Selective Assistance offered to the Companies is also subject to detailed recovery provisions. Gwent TEC makes payments to the LG Companies only when individuals have been training and in employment for 3 months. The total of training support will not be paid if training does not take place for the agreed numbers of staff.

Millennium (Emergency Cover)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans his Department has to contract with the armed services to provide emergency cover over the millennium period; and what estimate he has made of the cost of that cover. [62570]

Mr. Michael: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary on 7 December 1998, Official Report, column 20.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what the value is of PFI credits approved for each unitary authority in Wales; [62366]

(2) what is the total value of (a) all PFI applications per unitary authority in Wales to date and (b) PFI schemes approved per unitary authority to date. [62370]

Mr. Michael: No PFI credits have yet been issued to County and County Borough Councils in Wales. However, on reaching contract signing stage credits amounting to about £150 million are available for the projects selected as Local Government pathfinders.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average time taken for the appraisal of PFI schemes in Wales. [62368]

Mr. Michael: Each scheme has to be appraised against the criteria of affordability and value for money. The time taken for the appraisal of PFI varies from scheme to scheme to such a degree that it is not possible to provide a meaningful average figure.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the notional value is of Government credits for PFI apportioned to Wales. [62367]

Mr. Michael: There are no PFI credits apportioned to Wales. The Welsh Block receives a consequential of the revenue costs of local government PFI projects approved in England. I determine the related level of PFI credits to be made available in Wales as and when successful projects emerge.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the criteria applied in considering PFI schemes for approval in Wales. [62372]

Mr. Michael: The criteria applied in considering PFI schemes are that each scheme should:

meet a policy objective of the Welsh Office;

meet the priorities of the Welsh Office; deliver good value for money by allowing both public and private sectors to focus on what they do best; and ensure that staff are fairly treated whoever employs them.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many PFI schemes are currently under review in Wales. [62369]

Mr. Michael: There are 6 PFI projects included in the Local Government pathfinder programme. There are 3 major NHS PFI projects currently being progressed with the private sector and in addition there are a number of other PFI schemes being progressed individually by NHS Trusts within locally delegated arrangements. There is also a PFI project with one of our NDPBs (Bute Avenue) and the Department itself has one project (the A55).

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many PFI schemes have been approved for each unitary authority in Wales. [62371]

Mr. Michael: The Department is supporting 6 pathfinder PFI projects in the local government sector and will approve projects which successfully meet all the relevant criteria, including affordability. To date, no proposals have reached this stage.

Welsh Language

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to ensure that the Welsh Language Board monitors Welsh language schemes effectively. [62364]

Mr. Michael: The Welsh Language Board has to set out plans for its activities in its corporate and operational plans. These plans require the approval of Ministers. Under the current approved operational plan, the Board is requiring bodies operating Welsh language schemes to submit annual reports on how they have carried out those schemes. The Board also uses its powers to investigate matters relating to individual schemes where it receives a complaint, or where it has other reason to believe that there has been a failure to carry out a scheme.

The Board's work and progress against its approved plans, is monitored in a cycle of regular meetings with Ministers and officials.

Health Authorities (Public Consultation)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent by each health authority in Wales on public consultation documents on their services in the last year for which figures are available. [62505]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The information requested is not held centrally.

A5-A55 Dual Carriageway

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which company has been awarded the contract to build the A5/A55 dual carriageway across Anglesey; and if he will give the starting date for the work. [62504]

Mr. Hain: The contract has not yet been awarded but negotiations with the Preferred Bidder are nearing conclusion. The starting date for the work will be the date the contract is signed which I will announce when known.

HEALTH

Clinical Perfusionists

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received regarding the regulation of clinical perfusionists; and if he will make a statement. [62360]

Mr. Milburn: We are considering a representation from The Society of Perfusionists of Great Britain and Ireland to regulate clinical perfusionists under the Professions Supplementary to Medicine Act 1960.

Adoption Act 1976

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to amend section 51 of the Adoption Act 1976. [62638]

Mr. Hutton: We have no present plans to amend section 51 of the Adoption Act 1976. However, officials are working with the main interested groups to establish what might be done under existing legislation to clarify procedures relating to the disclosure of birth records.

Correspondence

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place a copy of his letter to Anthony C. Walkey, 11 Castle Street, Totnes, Devon, referred to in his answer of 2 November 1998, Official Report, column 423, in the Library; and if he will make a statement on the steps he is proposing to take to ensure that lessons are learnt from the case of Mr. Walkey's son. [62307]

Mr. Dobson [holding answer 7 December 1998]: If Mr. Walkey gives his permission I shall place copies of my letter to him in the Library. Officials have written seeking his permission.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton may expect replies to his letters to Ministers in his Department dated 20 August, 29 September and 29 October with regard to Mr. Peter Welbourne of 51 Mackenzie Street. [63058]

Mr. Hutton: I have replied to my right hon. Friend today.

Mid Essex Hospital Services NHS Trust

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the latest figures for people waiting (a) 13 to 25 weeks and (b) 26 weeks or more to see a consultant in the Mid Essex Hospital Services NHS Trust area. [62646]

Mr. Milburn: The number of patients who were waiting for a first outpatient appointment at Mid Essex Hospital Services National Health Service Trust at the end of September were:

Over 26 weeks: 341.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the latest figures for people waiting 12 months or more for hospital treatment in the Mid Essex Hospital Services NHS Trust area. [62645]

Mr. Milburn: The number of patients waiting over 12 months at the Mid Essex Hospital Services National Health Service Trust at the end of October was 1,180.

Midwives

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS trusts in England (a) have and (b) have not implemented the Government's recommendation to ensure that midwives working as the lead professional are awarded the minimum F-grade salary. [62951]

Mr. Milburn: In July 1995, following the publication of the Changing Childbirth report in 1993, the National Health Service Executive issued Executive Letter (95)77 to trusts, suggesting that an 'F' or 'G' grade would normally be appropriate for posts in which a midwife has a defined caseload of women to whom she/he gives the full range of midwifery care. Many NHS trusts have reviewed midwifery services and grading since Changing Childbirth. In January 1998 the Nursing Pay Review Body recommended that the Health Departments ensure the implementation of EL(95)77 at trust level and Advance Letter (Nurses/Midwives) 1/98 was issued on 4 June 1998 asked employing authorities to act upon this recommendation. Subsequently the NHS Executive wrote to NHS trusts in June 1998 asking about midwives' grading with reference to EL(95)77. We have summarised responses in supplementary evidence to the Nursing Pay Review Body, copies of which are available in the Library.

MRSA

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the risks presented to (a) doctors, (b) nurses, (c) other hospital staff and (d) visitors by MRSA. [62863]

Ms Jowell: Methicillin Resistant Staphylococcus Aureus does not pose a significant risk to healthy people and we are not aware of any evidence to suggest that MRSA infection is more common in hospital staff or visitors than in the rest of the general population. Employers must make a local assessment of the risks from MRSA and other biological agents under the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1994.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many legal cases there have been against hospitals in each of the last 10 years, as a result of patients becoming infected by MRSA. [62869]

Ms Jowell: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of future therapeutic problems likely to occur as a result of MRSA, GRAM-negative bacilli and enterococci becoming resistant to available antibiotics. [62865]

Ms Jowell: Antibiotic resistance is one of the major challenges facing the international public health community. It was the subject of a comprehensive and wide ranging report earlier this year from the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology to which we will be responding shortly.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost of the MRSA in each of the last three years. [62868]

Ms Jowell: These data are not held centrally. In any individual patient, it is usually very difficult to assess the contribution of any infection acquired in hospital on the outcome, since many patients are already seriously ill from other conditions.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to develop community-based approaches to the prevention and transmission of MRSA. [62862]

Ms Jowell: The Department has issued guidelines on the control of infection in nursing and residential homes and in September 1998 issued a report by the Standing Medical Advisory Committee on good practice in clinical prescribing of antimicrobials to minimise the emergence of antibiotic resistance. Our response to the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology Report on Resistance on Antibiotics, which will be published shortly, will include information about other initiatives.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to make MRSA a notifiable disease. [62866]

Ms Jowell: Methicillin Resistant Staphylococcus Aureus infection can take the form of many different diseases ranging from minor skin infections to pneumonia or septicaemia, all of which are more commonly due to other causes. It cannot be diagnosed clinically but only by laboratory tests. Notification of clinically suspected cases of all of these diseases would be wholly impracticable. However, consideration is being given to the introduction, at the earliest possible opportunity, of a statutory requirement on laboratories to notify certain specified test results, which may include those indicating MRSA infection.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to ensure that hospitals' computers are millennium compliant; how much money has been allocated to this; what percentage of this has been given to Taskforce 2000; and if he will make a statement. [62411]

Mr. Milburn: All National Health Service trusts are required to report quarterly, in detail, on their plans for dealing with the Year 2000 problem. This information is published on the Internet, and is reported to Parliament as part of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster's regular reports on progress in the public sector. The NHS Executive's regional offices, as part of their performance management responsibilities, analyse the returned questionnaires and follow up progress and issues through visits and other surveys. The purpose of these arrangements is not only to assess progress but to identify central support requirements to help ensure a successful outcome for all NHS organisations.

The latest returns for the period to 30 September 1998 show the reported position of the number of NHS organisations making satisfactory or good progress towards Year 2000 compliance currently standing at 93 per cent.

The NHS's estimate of the cost of dealing with the Year 2000 problem is £318 million. This figure includes the cost of replacing of deficient equipment.

The Department has not contributed any funding to Taskforce 2000.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Forestry

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to receive the report on a Forestry Strategy for England from the Forestry Commission; and when he will publish it. [62678]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 7 December 1998]: I have received the report from the Forestry Commission and expect to publish the Strategy later this week.

Mr. Quinn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he plans to publish the Government's Forestry Strategy for England. [63226]

Mr. Morley: We have today published "A New Focus for England's Woodlands", our forestry strategy for England, and a copy has been placed in the Library.

The Strategy sets out our priorities and programmes for the creation and management of woods and forests in England. It will help to focus discussion on how we, in partnership with other organisations, can work to ensure that England's woods and forests continue to provide benefits for England's people.

The Strategy sets out a series of actions to help achieve our priorities and to help implement our key programmes. The Strategy is not prescriptive. It sets out the framework for the Government's continued support for forestry in England and will guide the targeting of our resources in the years ahead.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many people in his Department are currently on secondment from private companies, and if he will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62849]

Mr. Morley: There are currently no secondees from private companies in this department.

Organic Production

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the financial incentives which presently exist to encourage tenant farmers to switch to organic production. [62425]

Mr. Morley: A comprehensive review of the rates and the structure of aid to farmers for conversion to organic production methods was produced in April 1998. A copy was placed in the Library of the House. The review included a detailed analysis of the cost of conversion of different farm types. Tenant farmers were not identified as a group requiring separate treatment within this analysis. As a result of the review a substantial increase in the payment rates and other measures designed to improve support for the organic sector was announced on 30 July 1998, Official Report, columns 466–67.

CABINET OFFICE

Correspondence

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what guidelines the Government have set in respect of the timescale for Ministers to (a) acknowledge and (b) reply to letters from hon. Members regarding (i) constituency business and (ii) other matters. [63116]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Cabinet Office issued guidance in October to departments reminding them of the procedures to be followed when handling correspondence from hon. Members. The guidance, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House, emphasises the importance of setting robust and challenging targets for responding to letters from hon. Members.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

BBC Funding

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he expects to announce who will chair the independent review panel considering BBC funding. [62949]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 8 December 1998]: I expect to announce the chairman and members of the licence fee review panel shortly.

Tourism

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action he intends to take to encourage visitors to the UK to visit parts of the country outside London. [62961]

Janet Anderson: The British Tourist Authority recently opened the new Britain Visitor Centre in London. The new Centre, which is a partnership between the BTA and the tourist boards of England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, aims to encourage visitors to London to travel more widely throughout the UK. This year we are providing a further £1.5 million to the London Tourist Board to support its Focus London campaign, which promotes London as a gateway to the rest of Britain. Our new tourism strategy, which will be published early next year, will set out in detail our plans for spreading the benefits of tourism throughout the country and throughout society.

UK Sports Institute

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to copyright the name of the UK Sports Institute. [62700]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 7 December 1998]: I assume that the hon. Member has in mind registration of a trademark rather than copyright. Action is in hand through the United Kingdom Sports Council to register as a trademark the names 'UK Sports Institute', 'United Kingdom Sports Institute' and 'UKSI' with the Trademarks Registry. A hearing before the Trademarks Examiner was attended by the UK Sports Council's legal advisers on 24 November as a forerunner to the process of formalising the submission of evidence for registration in the form of a Statutory Declaration.

A licence agreement has also been prepared between the Department, the UK Sports Council and Phoenix Sports Ltd. (the Sheffield bid team) for use of the trademark 'UK Sports Institute' and other similar marks during the period prior to registration of the trademark.

Creative Industries

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many representatives there are on the Creative Industries Task Group and Film Policy Review who have a background in the technical side of their industry. [61425]

Janet Anderson: Industry members of the Creative Industries Task Force were invited to participate on the basis of their expertise and experience and do not represent particular industries or aspects of industry. However, Paul Smith has a technical background in fashion.

Members of the Film Policy Review Action Committee were chosen for their knowledge and experience of the film industry as a whole. Several have direct experience of technical aspects of the industry.

DEFENCE

Navy (Early Retirement)

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the numbers of (a) divorces and (b) applications for premature voluntary retirement of Royal Naval personnel were during each of the last 10 years. [62936]

Mr. Doug Henderson: My Department does not hold statistics on divorces of service personnel.

The number of applications for premature voluntary release (PVR) by members of the Royal Naval Service from 1988–89 to 1997–98 were:

Financial year	Applications
1988–89	3,788
1989–90	4,647
1990–91	3,470
1991–92	2,140
1992–93	1,667
1993–94	1,396
1994–95	1,691
1995–96	2,639
1996–97	2,086
1997–98	2,019

Notes:
1. Royal Naval Service includes Royal Marines and Queen Alexandra's Royal Naval Nursing Service.
2. PVR applications are recorded against the date they were input to the computer database.

Otterburn Range

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if munitions containing depleted uranium are authorised to be fired on the Otterburn range, Northumberland. [63034]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Munitions containing depleted uranium have not been and are not fired on the ranges at Otterburn.

Helicopter Crash (South China Sea)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance was offered by (a) Singapore rescue helicopters and (b) the Malaysian Government, following the crash of a British military helicopter in the South China Sea off the east coast of Malaysia; and if he will make a statement. [62079]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 8 December 1998]: A Lynx helicopter, operating from HMS Grafton, crashed during a bilateral exercise with the Singapore Navy on 23 September this year. Following the crash, a Singaporean naval vessel rescued the pilot after he had spent about an hour in the sea. Other Singaporean ships and aircraft continued to search for the second crew member until the decision was taken to call off the rescue.

Malaysia was not involved in the exercise and was therefore not in a position to offer immediate help. Two Malaysian ships did, however, offer assistance later; but by then the wreck of the helicopter had been located and so it was not necessary to accept the offer.

Gulf War Veterans

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to publish the interim epidemiological reports relating to Gulf War Syndrome sufferers. [62956]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The MOD is funding two epidemiological studies into the health of UK Gulf veterans. One study, being conducted by a team from Manchester University led by Professor Nicola Cherry, aims to determine whether Gulf veterans are experiencing greater ill-health than Service personnel who did not take part in the conflict and to identify possible exposures and predisposing factors associated with any distinctive pattern of symptoms which may be found. It will also investigate whether there is an increased incidence of mortality or cancer amongst Gulf veterans. Initial results from this study are expected to emerge in the first part of next year.

The other study, being conducted by a team from the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine led by Dr. Patricia Doyle, will examine the reproductive health of Gulf veterans and the health of their children. Initial results from this study are not expected until the end of 1999.

Initial results from a US-funded study by a team from Kings College, London, led by Professors Simon Wessely and Anthony David, are expected to become available at around the turn of the year.

All three research teams are working on an independent basis and therefore the publication of their results is a matter for them and not for my Department.

NATO

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the allegation that secrets of where NATO were prepared to strike during the recent crisis in Kosovo were passed to the Serbs; and what assessment he has made of the implications for UK forces. [62096]

Mr. Doug Henderson: There have been recent reports of a possible breach of security involving Major Bunel, a French military officer working at NATO headquarters. This and any other alleged breaches of NATO or national security regulations are matters for the security authorities concerned. In the Bunel case, the French Minister of Defence has stated publicly that Major Bunel had not had access to detailed planning, and preparations for NATO military action had therefore not been compromised. This case had no direct implications for UK forces.

Oman

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the reports alleging corruption in the 1970s involving members of Her Majesty's Forces in Oman; and if he will make a statement. [62296]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I believe that my hon. Friend is referring to allegations that appeared in a newspaper article and a book recently of corruption in the Special Air Services (SAS) Regiment during the Dhofar Campaign in the early 1970s. The events in question took place almost 25 years ago and official records on the matter are incomplete. However, I understand that the Regiment dealt with the matter at the time and that disciplinary action, where appropriate, was taken.

Ministerial E-mail Address

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his e-mail address. [62565]

Mr. Doug Henderson: An e-mail address at which Ministers in this Department may be contacted will be set up shortly.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Local Government Finance

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will list the percentage changes in (a) standard spending assessments and (b) revenue support grants for (i) shire counties and (ii) shire districts between the settlement for 1998–99 and the proposals for 1999–2000, ranked and numbered in descending order; [63074]

(2) if he will list for 1999–2000 the proposed (a) revenue support grants and (b) standard spending assessments for (i) district councils and (ii) shire counties as a sum per head of their populations, ranked and numbered in descending order. [63073]

Ms Armstrong: The information requested has been placed in the library.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the real terms percentage difference is between the SSAs for North Somerset Council for 1998–99 and 1999–2000. [63069]

Ms Armstrong: The real terms percentage difference between the SSAs for North Somerset Council for 1998–99 and 1999–2000 is 1.6 per cent. i.e. 4.1 per cent. deflated by the GDP deflator.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what amount, per capita, is allotted in external support grants for 1998–99 and 1999–2000 (a) as a national average and (b) for North Somerset Council. [63071]

Ms Armstrong: The two main external support grants covering services provided by unitary authorities are redistributed national non-domestic rates (NNDR) and revenue support grant (RSG). The table shows the per capita amounts for 1998–99 for England and for North Somerset, and the provisional amounts for 1999–2000.

	1998–99		Provisional 1999–2000
	England	North Somerset	England	North Somerset
NNDR	225/hd	236/hd	276/hd	255/hd
RSG	397/hd	240/hd	403/hd	234/hd
Total	652/hd	475/hd	680/hd	489/hd

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the real terms difference between the education spending in 1998–99 by North Somerset Council and the Education SSA for the same authority in 1999–2000 is, expressed as (a) cash and (b) a percentage. [63070]

Ms Armstrong: The 1999–2000 Education SSA (Expressed at 1998–99 prices) for North Somerset Council was £4.957 million (7.0 per cent.) less than the 1998–99 budgeted Net Revenue Expenditure. The Net Revenue Expenditure was £6.705 million (10.4 per cent.) more than the 1998–99 SSA. The actual SSAs and NRE used are shown.

1998–99 SSA for Education: £64.601m

1999–2000 SSA for Education (adjusted using the GDP deflator to 1998–99 prices): £66.349m.

[1] Includes an apportionment of Capital Expenditure charged to Revenue Account but excludes specific and special grants.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what the 1999–2000 SSA for North Somerset Council would be if the real terms percentage increase were the same as the national average. [63068]

Ms Armstrong: Applying the national average real terms percentage increase to the 1998–99 SSA for North Somerset would give £133.853 million.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each local authority, the 1999–2000 standard spending assessment (a) per five to 10 year old pupil and (b) per 11 to 15 year old pupil. [62887]

Ms Armstrong [holding answer 8 December 1998]: A table showing the Primary Education SSA per pupil aged 5 to 10 and the Secondary Education SSA per pupil aged 11 to 15 for each local education authority has been placed in the library.

Driving Instructors

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he takes to ensure that those qualifying as driving instructors will be equipped in most cases to meet the standards later operating in their check-tests; and if he will introduce an appeals system for those who fail their check-tests. [63072]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The standards established when passing the qualifying examinations are the same as those needed subsequently to pass the periodic check-tests. Advice and assistance is available to instructors at any time from local supervising examiners. Also, the system of check-tests is operated in an educational rather than a punitive way. Following an unsatisfactory check-test, an examiner will offer to discuss performance, so the instructor can consider what action is needed, possibly involving re-training, before a further check-test takes place. We have no plans currently to introduce an appeals system to review the examiner's judgment where a check-test is failed. It would be difficult for an independent adjudicator to pass judgment on a text without having been present.

The Registrar seeks to remove the instructor's certificate only after a third consecutive unsatisfactory performance. A statutory mechanism already does exist to protect any instructor who wishes to appeal against the Registrar's decision to take removal action.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many driving instructors who have been removed from registration during the last four years following check-test failures have then sought re-qualification by taking the appropriate examinations; how many of these have been successful; and if he will make a statement. [63075]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In the last four years, 254 instructors have been removed from the Register of Approved Driving Instructors following check-test failure. But information about how many have subsequently sought re-qualification, and how many have been successful, is not held in a retrievable form.

Family Dwellings

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Government will appoint a commission to re-examine standards for, and design of, family dwellings. [62283]

Mr. Raynsford: I have no plans to do so. The Building Regulations set minimum standards for the health and safety of people in and around dwellings, as well as making requirements for energy efficiency and access for disabled people. Housing warranty providers also set their own standards over and above the requirements of the Building Regulations.

In addition, my Department has commissioned a set of detailed Housing Quality Indicators, which can be used to evaluate all aspects of housing design, from internal and external layout and space standards to energy efficiency and sustainable construction. The Indicators will be published early in the New Year, and the Housing Corporation has recommended their use by all Registered Social Landlords.

Motorway Service Areas

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the criteria used by the Highways Agency to determine the basis of need for a new motorway service area to be built. [62902]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Decisions on the need for new motorway service areas (MSAs) are not matters for the Highways Agency. Its role is to advise on the impact of MSA proposals on the operation and safety of the motorway and trunk road network. Need is a matter for planning authorities to consider in the light of that and other relative advice. Guidance on the criteria to be used in determining need issues was contained in my answer of 31 July 1998, Official Report, columns 611–12. Copies are in the House Libraries.

Nuclear Fuel Transport (Irish Sea)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list (a) what representations he has received concerning the 24 October 1998 incident involving the 'Pacific Crane' vessel in the Irish Sea, (b) what assessment he has made of the environmental issues raised and (c) what (i) correspondence and (ii) meetings have taken place with British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. since the incident; and if he will make a statement. [61969]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 7 December 1998, Official Report, column 47.

Waste Strategy

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what advice he is taking on the responses to the consultation paper on the new waste strategy for England and Wales "Less Waste: more value". [63604]

Mr. Meacher: My Department is examining all the comments that were made, both by individuals and by organisations in response to "Less waste: more value". Where further elucidation seems necessary, they are discussing points with a number of experts selected on a personal basis, as well as continuing to hold regular liaison and ad hoc meetings with representative bodies from local government, the community sector and industry. The aim of this consultation is to produce a draft waste strategy next spring for further consultation with a view to adopting a final strategy before the end of 1999.

Fuel Duty Rebates

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the advantages of introducing necessary user rebates in respect of fuel duties paid by the disabled and their carers. [61796]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government have no plans to introduce a fuel duty rebate for disabled motorists but they will continue to take account of the impact of the fuel duty escalator on these and other essential car users. Whilst disabled motorists often need the use of a car, they can still reduce their fuel consumption and, in some cases, will be able to choose significantly more fuel-efficient vehicles which manufacturers are committed to introducing to the market. Disability Living Allowance, which will rise in line with inflation, also provides a contribution towards the extra costs of disability, and is awarded on the basis of the mobility as well as care needs of disabled people. In addition, vehicles owned by many disabled drivers are exempt from Vehicle Excise Duty.

Ministerial E-mail Address

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his e-mail address. [62556]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, and all other Ministers in this Department, can currently be contacted via the Department's Web site—WWW.DETR.GOV.UK. All members of the Department, including my right hon. Friend, will have individual e-mail addresses from March next year.

Non-metallic Storage Vessels

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the Health and Safety Executive's findings over the past 10 years on the failures of non-metallic storage vessels including plastic-lined GRP storage vessels, together with relevant information on recorded failures which is contained in the HSE database of investigated incidents; and if he will make a statement. [62303]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 7 December 1998]: A research report by the Health and Safety Laboratory of the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has reviewed all the failures of non-metallic vessels reported to HSE during the period 1986–1996. The report discloses that early experience with GRP storage vessels was disappointing due to poor design, poor or inadequate installation, lack of suitable testing and inspection techniques, poor fabrication or materials specification, environmental stress cracking, and user-abuse. A number of key recommendations aimed at addressing these problems are contained in the report and HSE is reviewing its guidance in the light of these. In total, the report reviews a total of 59 incidents, 7 of which involved plastic-lined GRP storage vessels. Arrangements are in hand for a copy of the report to be placed in the Commons Library.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how and when he will consult rural communities and their representative bodies in accordance with section 2(3) of the Regional Development Agencies Act 1998 before appointing members to the RDA boards. [63092]

Mr. Caborn: The Government started the appointments process while the legislation was before Parliament, in order to be in a position to take decision on appointments to the RDA boards soon after the commencement of the Regional Development Agencies Act 1998.

Earlier this year we advertised in the national press for applications direct from individuals and also consulted a wide range of bodies asking them to nominate people whom they thought were suitable for board membership. These groups included many who represent the interests of rural communities.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the special advisers in his Department and the issues on which they specialise; and to what level they have been security cleared. [62841]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The following Special Advisers are employed in the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions:

Joe Irvin full-time special adviser. He advises on all areas for which the DPM is responsible.

Joan Hammell full-time special adviser. She also assists the DPM.

Paul Hackett, part-time special adviser. Advises on regional issues.

Darren Murphy part-time special adviser. Advises on local government and housing.

Richard Olszewski. Special adviser on transport issues.

Special Advisers are subject to the usual security clearance arrangements. It is not appropriate to give details about particular individual's level of security clearance.

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people in his Department are currently on secondment from private companies; and if he will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62831]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There are currently 11 people on secondment to the Department from private companies. They are listed:

Name	Company	Current responsibilities
A. Carter	Boots the Chemist Ltd.	Contributing to planning and regeneration issues, including work on sustainable communities, the New Deal for Communities, and the revision of planning guidance
M. Coe	Unilever	Advising on promoting greater environmental awareness by business
B. Everett	Bellway Urban Renewal	Secretariat of the Urban Task Force
J. Faragher	CRE Group Ltd.	Expert adviser in the European Commission on environmental management systems and the development of the ecomanagement and audit scheme
C. Fulford	KPMG	Secretariat of the Urban Task Force
J. Hall	Institute for Fiscal Studies	Providing advice on industrial, regional and labour market issues
M. Salter	OPM	Secretariat of the Urban Task Force
G. Pearce	Bank of Scotland	Assisting with the restructuring arrangements for Channel Tunnel Rail Link
A. Stacey	ABROS	Secretariat of the Urban Task Force
S. Tindale	IPPR	Attached to the Sustainable Development Unit providing advice on environmental issues
A. Wain	Kvaerner Construction	Implementation of the recommendations of Sir John Egan's Construction Task Force Report "Rethinking Construction"

Railtrack

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the transparency of the information provided by Railtrack regarding levels of capital investment and spending on maintenance; and if he will make a statement. [62601]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Under Condition 7 of its Network Licence, Railtrack is required to publish an annual Network Management Statement (NMS), setting out its plans for the maintenance, renewal and development of the rail network for a ten year period, with greater detail for the first three years of the programme. The form of the NMS, and the period it covers, has to be approved by the Rail Regulator.

Asbestos

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what evidence he has obtained that contractors from other countries dump asbestos waste in Britain. [62636]

Mr. Meacher: The import of asbestos waste into Great Britain is controlled by the Asbestos (Prohibitions) Regulations 1992. Under these Regulations, the import of amphibole (largely brown or blue) asbestos waste is prohibited. Proposals from the Health and Safety Commission, currently under consultation, will extend this prohibition to include the import of chrysotile (white) asbestos waste.

While derogations from the Regulations to allow imports may be sought, a certificate of exemption would be granted only in exceptional circumstances and be subject to stringent conditions. No certificates of exemption have so far been issued for the import of asbestos from another country into Great Britain.

There is no evidence of any illegal imports of asbestos waste into Great Britain.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Petrol Industry

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reason the pricing behaviour of petrol retailers on motorways was not included in the report into the retail petrol industry by the Director General of Fair Trading published on 18 May; and if he will make a statement. [62404]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 7 December 1998]: The content of the report is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading. I am asking him to reply to the hon. Member directly.

Millennium Experience

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to refuse sponsorship for the New Millennium Experience Company from companies which are in receipt of Government grants. [61991]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 1 December 1998]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Montgomeryshire (Mr. Öpik) on 16 November 1998, Official Report, columns 421–22.

Sombrero Island

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the application made to use the island of Sombrero, near Anguilla, as a rocket launch site; what assessment he has made of the likely effect on wildlife on the island; and if he will make a statement. [62097]

Mr. Battle: Beal Aerospace, an American company, wish to develop Sombrero Island as a satellite launch site, and have already negotiated with the Government of Anguilla an option to lease Sombrero. The Anguillan Government have negotiated conditions on the lease which include their being satisfied on the likely impact upon the environment. Beal have submitted an Environmental Impact Report on the project to the Anguillan and UK Governments.

It will be for the Anguillan Government to decide whether or not to give permission to Beal Aerospace to develop the island. The UK's role is to give whatever advice and assistance is necessary to help the Government of Anguilla make that decision. We anticipate this assistance to include providing an evaluation of the Environmental Impact Report. In the interests of transparency and open debate, the UK Government are making copies of the Environmental Impact Report available to the UK Non-Governmental Organisations who have expressed an interest. Over the next few weeks officials will be discussing with the Government of Anguilla the detailed plans for assisting them with the planning application.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the special advisers in his Department and the issues on which they specialise; and to what level they have been security cleared. [62832]

Mr. Mandelson: I have two special advisers, Benjamin Wegg-Prosser and Dan Corry. They advise me and my colleagues on the full range of issues for which we are responsible.

Special Advisers are subject to the usual security clearance arrangements. It is not appropriate to give details about particular individuals' level of security clearance.

Indonesia (Hawk Aircraft)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of the purchase price for 24 Hawk aircraft (a) remains to be repaid by the Indonesian Government and (b) has subsequently been included in the rescheduling of Indonesia's international debts. [62971]

Mr. Mandelson: The information is as follows:

(a) Principal loan repayments remaining to be paid by the Indonesian Government equate with 40 per cent. of the original purchase price. The ECGD supported loan was for 80 per cent. of the purchase price.

(b) Principal instalments totalling 167 million US Dollars have been included in the rescheduling.

Export Licences

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of applications for export licences were processed by his Department within 20 days for the period 13 July to date. [61929]

Mrs. Roche: The Export Control Organisation (ECO) of DTI measures export licence processing performance against two aims:

to provide a substantive response to an application within 20 working days of receipt for applications that need to be circulated to other Government Departments according to their policy requirements ("circulated cases") to provide such a response within 10 working days of receipt of applications that are dealt with by the DTI itself ("non-circulated cases").

In each case, full documentation in support of the application must be provided by the applicant at the outset for these targets to apply.

ECO management data on the processing of licence applications is compiled on the basis of four-week periods. The accumulated data for the periods beginning 27 June 1998 to 13 November 1998 showed that to the nearest percentage point 45 per cent. of circulated cases were finalised within 20 working days and 82 per cent. of non-circulated cases were finalised within 10 working days.

This information was taken from ECO's management data, which are compiled to monitor processing of Standard Individual Export Licences. The performance measures do not apply to applications for Open Individual Export Licences (due to wide variations between goods and country coverage of such licences), to licences covering Iran or to exports which are subject to control solely because of United Nations Sanctions.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many export licence applications were refused by the Export Control Organisation during each of the four week periods used by his Department from 29 May to date. [61931]

Mrs. Roche: The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated and the numbers of applications for Standard Individual Export Licences refused in full for each period are as follows:

Period	Standard individual export licences
30 May 1998—26 June 1998	9
27 June 1998—24 July 1998	4
25 July 1998—21 August 1998	10
22 August 1998—18 September 1998	10
19 September 1998—16 October 1998	10
17 October 1998—13 November 1998	9

No Open Individual Export Licences were refused in full during the period.

This information should be considered in the light of my answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) on 30 October 1997, Official Report, columns 870–71.

HEALTH

Investing in Dentistry

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been allocated to Investing in Dentistry up to 30 November; which health authority areas have applied for such funds to date; how much each has bid for; and how many applications have been successful in each health authority area. [62103]

Mr. Milburn: Since the Investing in Dentistry initiative was announced in September last year, grants totalling £6,843,582 have been approved. The table gives details of the health authorities who submitted Investing in Dentistry funding requests to the Secretary of State in 1997–98 and 1998–99 to date, the gross amount of funding requested, and the number of applications approved.

Aspirin

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact on the retail price of aspirin of changes in the maximum quantities available over the counter at pharmacies. [62295]

Ms Jowell: The Department has made no assessment of the impact on the price of aspirin products, this is a matter for the Office of Fair Trading. The Director General of Fair Trading has investigated the pricing of a number of pack sizes of aspirin and paracetamol that were available over the counter before and after the introduction of the new pack sizes. He did not find any evidence of anti-competitive behaviour. The market in analgesics is very competitive and equivalent products are available at a wide variety of prices. The Director General will keep the market for analgesics under review and will investigate any anti-competitive behaviour.

Health Authority Funding Formula (South-West)

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what means the funding formula for health authorities in South West England takes account of the number of older people resident in them. [62386]

Mr. Milburn: The national funding formula used to inform health authorities' unified allocations includes adjustments to take account of the relative healthcare needs of different age groups. Elderly people require relatively more health care, and the target allocations of health authorities reflect this.

Bartlet Hospital, Felixstowe

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what account he took of the closure of other local health services in considering the proposal to close the Bartlett Hospital in Felixstowe; and what assessment he made of the overall impact of the proposed closures. [62317]

Mr. Dobson: I have rejected the proposals to transfer the rehabilitation and recovery services from the Bartlet hospital, Felixstowe to Ipswich hospital until Suffolk Health Authority has undertaken a full and comprehensive review of the implications for the future of the Bartlet hospital. This must clearly take into account other local health services.

Dental Health

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will rank by English health authority those areas with the poorest dental health. [62532]

Mr. Milburn: The table ranks health authorities in England by decayed, missing or filled teeth of 5-year-old children for the year 1995–96. These results are from a survey co-ordinated by the British Association for the Study of Community Dentistry. Information for Leicestershire Health Authority is not available.

Dental Nurses

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations he has received in support of changes to the Dentists Act 1984 to allow the statutory registration of dental nurses; and if he will make a statement; [63029]

(2) how many dental nurses currently employed by the National Health Service have passed the National Certificate examination awarded by the National Examining Board for Dental Nurses; [63030]

(3) what plans he has to review the operation of the Dentists Act 1984. [63028]

Mr. Milburn: The General Dental Council has proposed that it should set up a statutory register of dental nurses, entry to which would be dependent upon the satisfactory completion of an approved training programme. We support this proposal and, in due course, will consider if measures to strengthen the existing regulatory systems of the health care professions, which we plan to include in the forthcoming National Health Service Bill, could be used to make the necessary amendments to the Dentists Act 1984. Information is not held centrally upon numbers of dental nurses, but each year some 2,000 candidates pass the examinations of the National Examining Board for Dental Nurses.

Secondments

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in his Department are currently on secondment from private companies; and if he will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62821]

Ms Jowell: Central records are held on three such secondments:

Company	Current responsibilities
Lloyd's Bank	To provide advice on project finance issues involved in taking forward private finance initiative projects at National Health Service trusts
Pricewaterhouse Coopers	To provide advice on project finance issues involved in taking forward private finance initiative projects at NHS trusts
Ward Hathaway Solicitors	To provide advice on legal issues involved in taking forward private finance initiative projects at NHS trusts

Special Advisers

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the special advisers in his Department and the issues on which they specialise; and to what level they have been security cleared. [62838]

Mr. Milburn: There are two special advisers in the Department, Mr. Simon Stevens and Mr. Joe McCrea. Special advisers advise on the full range of issues for which Ministers are responsible and are subject to the usual security clearance arrangements.

Retinal Implants

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department is funding into the use of electronic retinal implants for the blind and partially-sighted. [62966]

Mr. Milburn: None at present, but the Department and the ophthalmic professions monitor the results of major research and development projects funded from other sources.

Smoking

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the percentage of people smoking in (a) 1995, (b) 1996 and (c) 1997. [62793]

Ms Jowell: The information is not available for 1995 and 1997. Available information is as follows:

Prevalence of cigarette smoking among adults aged 16 and over, by gender
England 1994 and 1996

Percentage

	1994	1996
Men	28	28

Neurological Diseases

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the recorded incidence per 1,000 population of (a) motor neurone disease, (b) multiple sclerosis and (c) Alzheimer's disease was at five-year intervals during the last 30 years. [63136]

Mr. Hutton: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 7 May 1998, Official Report, column 503.

Medicines Control Agencies and Medical Devices Agencies

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what future plans there are for the Medicines Control Agency and the Medical Devices Agency. [63429]

Mr. Milburn: The Department of Health is carrying out a study to identify the longer-term organisational arrangements which will best support the effective regulation of pharmaceuticals and medical devices carried out by the Medicines Control Agency and the Medical Devices Agency respectively. The terms of reference for the study have been placed in the Library.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Immigration Appeals Tribunal

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list (a) the number of cases the Special Immigration Appeals Tribunal has heard since its inception, (b) how many of these appeals have been successful and (c) how many cases are pending. [61967]

Mr. Hoon: The Special Immigration Appeals Commission has so far received four appeals. None of these have yet been heard. They are all subject to Directions hearings to determine how they are to proceed to full hearing.

Land Registry Offices

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department which of the Land Registry offices his latest accommodation review has revealed as surplus to current requirements; and what action he now proposes to take with regard to them. [62895]

Mr. Hoon: The Land Registry's latest accommodation review has revealed that a sub-office (1,269 sq m) of the Gloucester District Land Registry is surplus to current requirements. The Land Registry is actively marketing the sale of the lease. Since 1990, the Land Registry has reduced its estate by some 43,000 sq m of accommodation, covering 34 sites.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department which Land Registry offices in the North West have sufficient spare capacity in terms of space or people to enable them to take on the work currently conducted by the Lytham Land Registry. [62896]

Mr. Hoon: There are no Land Registry offices in the North-West which have sufficient spare capacity in terms of space or people to enable them to take on the work currently conducted by the Lytham Land Registry.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what analysis his Department or the Land Registry has undertaken on the future of the Land Registry office in Lytham. [62897]

Mr. Hoon: An analysis by the Land Registry on the future of its office in Lytham has concluded that registration activity is projected to increase by up to 20 per cent. over the next five years following recent land registration legislation. Existing accommodation, which is operating at fully capacity, will therefore soon be insufficient to carry out its business.

The Land Registry intends to redevelop its nearby Warton site to house the registration work generated by the County of Lancashire. The existing Lytham building will cater for work generated by Greater Manchester.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the operational future of the Land Registry office in Lytham (a) in the next 12 months, (b) in the next three years and (c) in the next five years. [62898]

Mr. Hoon: In the next 12 months the Land Registry will begin to operate from its Lytham office as the Lytham District Land Registry (dealing with registrations from Greater Manchester) and the Lancashire District Land Registry (dealing with registration from Lancashire)—the latter moving to the new accommodation at nearby Warton on its completion. Over the next five years the two business units will be taking forward partnerships with local authorities to register all of their landholdings. This will bring considerable security and efficiency benefits to local authorities and to the local taxpayer.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he is currently acting on a request from the Treasury to review the property portfolio of office accommodation currently used by the Land Registry. [62899]

Mr. Hoon: A review of the property portfolio of office accommodation used by the Land Registry was carried out as part of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review. The review identified some 13,000 sq m of accommodation as surplus to requirements and this has now been disposed of.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the cost of operation per employee of each of the Land Registry offices. [62900]

Mr. Hoon: Excluding one-off costs, the costs of operation per employee in 1997–98 of each of the Land Registry's offices were as follows:

Offices	£
Birkenhead	21,814
Coventry	22,047
Croydon	27,358
Durham	20,372
Gloucester	23,968
Harrow	27,508
Hull	23,274
Leicester	22,008
Lytham	22,526
Nottingham	21,132
Peterborough	26,199
Plymouth	24,019
Portsmouth	26,056
Stevenage	23,487
Swansea	22,466
Telford	23,548
Tunbridge Wells	22,583
Weymouth	22,664
York	26,957

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department when he last assessed the office accommodation requirements for the Land Registry; and if he will make a statement. [62901]

Mr. Hoon: The office accommodation requirements for the Land Registry were last assessed as part of its business planning cycle and are shown in the Land Registry's Corporate Plan 1998–2003 and its published Business Plan 1998–99. Both Plans were approved by the Lord Chancellor.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Indonesia

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on assistance given by her Department for elections in Indonesia. [63388]

Clare Short: Indonesia is planning to hold Parliamentary Elections next year. Elections that are free, fair and inclusive will be essential in helping restore political and economic stability and in reversing the recent increase in poverty. We shall work towards this end with the United Nations Development Programme, which has been asked to co-ordinate donor assistance. We shall contribute up to £1 million—some of it immediately—linked to satisfactory progress with preparations for the elections.

Secondments

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people in her Department are currently on secondment from private companies; and if she will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62818]

Clare Short: There is currently one staff member from NRI/University of Greenwich seconded to my Department. He is Dr. Guy Poulter filling the position of Senior Natural Resources Adviser (Research) in my Department's London HQ.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Torture

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will (a) list the recommendations made by the UN Committee Against Torture following its examination of the UK Periodic report, (b) indicate what measures he will take in response, (c) place the observations and comments of the Committee in the Library, (d) list NGO submissions to the Committee concerning the UK report and (e) place these submissions in the Library. [61965]

Mr. Boateng: The United Nations Committee Against Torture made the following recommendations:

(a) The closure of detention centres, particularly Castlereagh, at the earliest opportunity.

(b) The reform of the State Immunity Act 1978, to ensure that its provisions conform to the obligations contained in the Convention.

(c) The reform of sections 134(4) and (5)(b)(iii) of the Criminal Justice Act 1988, to bring them into conformity with the obligations contained in article 2 of the Convention.

(d) The abolition of the use of plastic bullet rounds as a means of riot control.

(e) Reconstruction of the Royal Ulster Constabulary so that it more closely represents the cultural realities of Northern Ireland. This should continue to be associated with an extensive programme of re-education for members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, directed at the objectives of the Peace accord and the best methods of modern police practices.

(f) The Committee finally recommends that, in the case of Senator Pinochet of Chile, the matter be referred to the office of the public prosecutor, with a view to examining the feasibility of and, if appropriate, initiating criminal proceedings in England, in the event that the decision is made not to extradite him. This would satisfy the State Party's obligations under articles 4 to 7 of the Convention and article 27 of the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties of 1969.

The Government will formally respond to the Committee in the United Kingdom's Fourth Periodic Report, which will be due in January 2002.

A copy of the Committee's conclusions and recommendations is being placed in the Library. NGO submissions were made direct to the United Nations Committee Against Torture. We are asking the Committee for the information requested and I will write to my hon. Friend when we have received a reply.

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) how many public interest immunity certificates he has signed in each quarter since May 1997, (b) how many requests for such certificates have originated in each sub-division of his Department and (c) how many such certificates have been issued in the course of hearings of the criminal division of the Court of Appeal. [61966]

Mr. Straw: The number of Public Interest Immunity certificates signed by me in each quarter since May 1997 is as follows:

May-July 1997: 0

August-October 1997: 4

November 1997-January 1998: 2

February-April 1998: 2

May-July 1998: 4

August-October 1998: 1

November 1998: 1.

These figures include any certificates signed by my Ministers.

Of these 14 certificates, five originated from requests made by the Prison Service and nine originated from requests made by the Security Service.

Two certificates have been issued in relation to proceedings in the Criminal Division of the Court of Appeal.

Police Dogs

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many new police dogs were taken on by the police in each of the last five years; and what percentage of these dogs were found to be unsuitable for use as working dogs following the training period. [63077]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by whom the dog-training manuals used by police dog units are compiled; and how often they are updated. [63078]

Mr. Boateng: The current edition of the Police Dog Training and Care Manual was drawn up by members of the Home Office Standing Advisory Committee on Police Dogs and was issued to all forces in 1996. Earlier this year, the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) General Policing Committee's Police Dog Sub-Committee took over the work of the Home Office Standing Advisory Committee, including responsibility for revision of the Manual. The Manual is a standing agenda item at each meeting of the ACPO Police Dog Sub-Committee and amendments are made as and when necessary. Several amendments have been made since it was issued.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were recruited to dog-handling sections in each of the last five years; and how many of these have left following the training period. [63076]

Mr. Boateng: The information is not collected centrally. It is for individual chief constables to decide on the number of officers who are trained in and assigned to dog handling duties.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines have been issued to police dog units responsible for training dogs, since the recent case against four police officers from the Essex Police Dog Section. [63079]

Mr. Boateng: I understand that no guidelines have yet been issued to forces, as the officers who were convicted in the Essex case have decided to appeal and the allegations were specific to one force.

Mrs. Pauline Clare, the Chief Constable of Lancashire, who chairs the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) General Policing Committee's Police Dog Sub-Committee, has, however, been in contact with Essex Police, the RSPCA, the National Canine Defence League, and Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary with a view to devising a scheme for inspection of force dog training centres. In the first instance, a pilot scheme is to be initiated within Essex involving two members of the ACPO Police Dog Sub-Committee, a representative of the RSPCA, and a member of the Essex Police Authority. The ACPO Police Dog Sub-Committee will evaluate this pilot scheme in due course.

Fire Service (Dog Collars)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which fire service authorities are currently equipped with dog collars that administer electric shocks to the animals. [63081]

Mr. George Howarth: Information is not held centrally, but I am not aware of any such arrangements for dogs used by brigades to assist in fire investigations.

Rape Cases

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in the study he has initiated into the processing of rape cases by the criminal justice system; and when he expects to publish the full report. [63132]

Mr. Boateng: The research has been completed and a report is being prepared. We plan to publish the report in the first quarter of 1999.

Prisons (Drug Offences)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reported drug offences have taken place in prisons in England and Wales since 1 January. [62378]

Mr. George Howarth: Provisional information for 1998 showing the number of drugs offences by prisoners proved at prison adjudication is given in the table. In addition, 831 visitors to prisoners were arrested for drug related incidents at prisons in England and Wales.

Number of drugs offences proved at adjudication in prisons in England and Wales, January to September 1998

Offence	Number
Refusal to provide a drug test sample	326
Falsifying a drug test sample	35
Unauthorised use of controlled drug	11,902
Possession of unauthorised drug	2,402
Sells/delivers drugs to person	69
Total	14,734

Asylum Seekers

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons from (a) Slovakia and (b) the Czech Republic have been awarded (i) refugee status and (ii) exceptional leave to remain since May 1997; and, of these, how many achieved this status following an appeal. [61683]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: For the period May 1997-October 1998, the number of initial asylum decisions made for nationals of Slovakia was 535. For that same period, the number of initial decisions made for nationals of the Czech Republic was 310. Of these, none of the above nationals was recognised as a refugee. Nor were any Slovak or Czech nationals granted exceptional leave to remain.

Manually collected records show that six Slovakian nationals were recognised as refugees following allowed appeals. A further two were granted exceptional leave to remain on compassionate grounds, following additional representations made in their cases, after an initial decision was taken to refuse them asylum. In the same period, 48 appeals were dismissed and 49 were abandoned or withdrawn.

In the case of nationals of the Czech Republic, two were recognised as refugees following appeal. A total of 36 appeals were dismissed and 25 were abandoned or withdrawn.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost of travel by Ministers in his Department in (a) RAF and (b) privately chartered aircraft borne by his Department (i) between 1 May 1996 and 1 May 1997 and (ii) since 1 May 1997. [60903]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 27 November 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 19 November 1998, Official Report, columns 733–34, for the period between 2 May 1997 and 30 September 1998. Since that time, the following trips have also been undertaken:

Date	Destination	Purpose	Numbers accompanying Minister
November 1998	Blackpool	To attend Association of Police Authorities Conference	3
December 1998	Brussels (return to Blackpool)	Justice and Home Affairs Council	5

The average cost for these two additional flights was £1,451.50.

Campsfield House

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 1 December 1998, Official Report, column 134, how the contracts relating to Campsfield House detention centre are monitored; what financial penalty has been imposed for failure to comply with the contract; and if he will make a statement. [63090]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The contract is monitored by a Home Office Contract Monitor, Group 4 senior management and an Independent Visiting Committee. Also, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons carries out inspections on all aspects of the management and performance of the contract. The contract provides for payments to be withheld to the extent of the contractor's failure to deliver the services to the required standard. Group 4's performance has been such that it has not been necessary to impose any financial penalty.

Senator Pinochet

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will decide whether to issue an authority to proceed in response to the Spanish extradition request for Senator Pinochet. [63335]

Mr. Straw: I signed an authority to proceed in respect of Senator Pinochet today. The Spanish request for his extradition will now be considered by the courts. The reasons for my decision were sent to all the parties concerned in a letter from one of my officials as set out:

"1. I am writing to inform you that the Secretary of State has today signed an authority to proceed in respect of Senator Pinochet. The authority to proceed and supporting documentation are being transmitted to Bow St. I am notifying the Deputy Chief Clerk of this decision by fax. I enclose a copy of the authority to proceed for your information.

2. The Secretary of State is not under an obligation to provide reasons for his decision to sign an authority to proceed. However, in this case, and in the light of the matters raised by the representations, he has agreed to give his reasons at this stage.

Representations

3. The Secretary of State received notification, before the House of Lords judgment on 25 November, that he would be receiving representations for and against the issue of an authority to proceed.

4. Although there is no provision in the Extradition Act ("the Act") for representations at this stage in extradition proceedings, he has taken careful account of these in making his decision; in particular representations made to him by legal representatives of Senator Pinochet, the Spanish Government, the Chilean Government and legal representatives for "the Interveners" before the House of Lords. He also received material from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Ministry of Defence.

5. The decision to issue an Authority to Proceed was taken personally by the Secretary of State.

Requests from the French and Swiss Governments

6. The Secretary of State received formal extradition requests for Senator Pinochet from the Spanish Government on 11 November 1998, from the Swiss Government later the same day, and from the French Government on 13 November 1998.

7. The Secretary of State has considered these requests, and further material made available by the Swiss Government, under section 12(5) of the Act and Article 17 of the European Convention on Extradition ("ECE"). He has given precedence to the Spanish request, and notified the French and Swiss Governments accordingly.

The Secretary of State's approach to his decision

8. He has taken his decision under section 7(4) of the Act, which provides:

(4) On receipt of any such request the Secretary of State may issue an authority to proceed unless it appears to him that an order for the return of the person concerned could not lawfully be made, or would not in fact be made, in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

9. The Secretary of State has taken the approach that if it already appears to him that no order for the return of Senator Pinochet to Spain could lawfully be made, or would in fact be made, then he should not issue an authority to proceed. If those conditions do not exist he has a discretion whether or not to issue an authority to proceed.

10. He has had regard to the relevant extradition arrangement, namely the ECE. The UK's obligation is to extradite Senator Pinochet to Spain consistently with the ECE. That is a consideration to which the Secretary of State gives particular weight.

11. In reaching his decision, the Secretary of State has considered the application of the Act to the Spanish request and all the general restrictions on surrender in sections 6 and 12 of the Act.

Extradition crimes

12 Section 1 of the Act provides that where, as in the case of Spain, extradition procedures under Part III of the Act are available, a person in the United Kingdom who: "is accused in that state of the commission of an extradition crime" may be arrested and returned to that state in accordance with those procedures.

13. The Secretary of State considers that Senator Pinochet is accused, in Spain, of offences equivalent to UK offences of attempted murder, conspiracy to murder, torture, conspiracy to torture, hostage taking and conspiracy to take hostages.

14. Senator Pinochet is also charged, under Spanish law, with genocide, and the CPS advised, on behalf of the Spanish Government, that murder is also disclosed by the request. The Secretary of State does not consider that the contents of the extradition request satisfied the definition of an extradition crime under section 2 of the Act in respect of these offences, and has therefore not included them in the authority to proceed.

15. The relevant test under the Act was explained by the Lord Chief Justice in the Divisional Court (with whom the other judges agreed) who said: "What is necessary [for the definition of extradition crime in s. 2] is that at the time of the extradition request (rather than at the time of the conduct alleged; emphasis supplied) the offence should be a criminal offence here, ..."

16. The Secretary of State has proceeded on the basis that he is entitled, at this stage of the extradition proceedings against Senator Pinochet, to treat the Spanish request as well-founded as a matter of Spanish law.

Sovereign or diplomatic immunity

17. The Secretary of State has also proceeded on the basis that Senator Pinochet does not enjoy any immunity in relation to the offences in question. He has not accepted a representation made on behalf of Senator Pinochet that he should disregard the House of Lords judgment on the grounds of alleged bias on the part of one of the law lords. Nor does it appear to him that Senator Pinochet is entitled to diplomatic immunity or protection as the head of a special mission.

General restrictions

18. The Secretary of State has considered all the general restrictions on surrender in sections 6 and 12 of the Act. In particular, he has had regard to:

Political Offences (section 6(1)(a))

19. Section 24 of the Act provides that no offence to which section 1 of the Suppression of Terrorism Act applies can be regarded as an offence of a political character. Since Spain is a designated country for the purposes of section 24, the Secretary of State considers that all the offences that are to be included in the authority to proceed fall within this provision. In any event it does not appear to him that the offences charged are of a political character.

Punishment for political opinions (sections 6(1)(c) and (d))

20. The Secretary of State does not consider that there are good grounds for concluding that the request has been issued for this purpose.

The passage of time (section 12(2)(a)(ii))

21. The Secretary of State has not been notified by the Spanish Government that any of the offences for which extradition is sought are time barred from prosecution, and considers that it is reasonable to proceed at this stage on the footing that no relevant time bar appears to apply.

22. Nor does the Secretary of State consider that the passage of time would render it unjust or oppressive to issue an authority to proceed in this case. It does not appear that Senator Pinochet is unfit to stand trial. The offences for which return has been sought are serious, and in the nature of those for which, domestically, passage of time would not be regarded as restricting prosecution. The case is an accusation case and, ordinarily, the reliability of witnesses' memories may properly be regarded as a matter for the court of prosecution.

Accusation not made in good faith in the interests of justice (section 12(2)(a)(iii))

23. The Secretary of State does not believe that there are good grounds for concluding that the request has been issued other than in good faith in the interests of justice.

The Secretary of State's discretion

24. The Secretary of State has considered the ambit of his discretion under section 7(4) and his residual general discretion under section 12 of the Act, which would apply in relation to the return of Senator Pinochet were he to be committed by the Bow Street magistrate under section 9 of the Act. Contrary to certain of the representations made to him, he has been advised that the discretion conferred upon him is wide, and he has therefore taken a range of factors into consideration.

25. A large number of points were raised in representations concerning the Secretary of State's discretion, including aspects of issues that fall to be considered under the general restrictions on return contained in the Act. In particular, the Secretary of State has had regard to the following:

Humanitarian considerations

26. Representations were made on behalf of the Senator that his age and health would render it unjust or oppressive to issue an authority to proceed. The Secretary of State has considered these carefully, but concluded that it does not appear that the Senator is unfit to stand trial and concluded that in all the circumstances it would not be unjust or oppressive for him to stand trial in relation to the offences with which he is charged. The Secretary of State also has in mind that this question, among others, can be re-examined in the light of any developments, at the stage when he comes to exercise his final discretion at the end of the extradition process, under section 12 of the Act.

Pending proceedings in Chile

27. The Chilean Government argued that Senator Pinochet should be returned to Chile where he could stand trial. However, there is no extradition request from the Chilean Government, which the Secretary of State could consider under section 12(5) of the Act. Moreover, there is no provision of international law which excludes Spain's jurisdiction in this matter. The Secretary of State does not consider the possibility of a trial in Chile to be a factor which outweighs the UK's obligations under the ECE to extradite Senator Pinochet to Spain.

Other factors

28. The Secretary of State has also considered other factors, under his general discretion, including:

(i) the possible effect of extradition proceedings on the stability of Chile, and its future democracy; and

(ii) the possible effect of extradition proceedings on the UK national interest.

29. He has concluded that the material and representations put before him do not amount to sufficient grounds not to issue an authority to proceed.

Conclusion

30. In the event that Senator Pinochet is committed to await the Secretary of State's decision on his return, the Secretary of State will consider the extradition request afresh under section 12 of the Act. At that stage he will be able to take into account any findings in the committal proceedings and any habeas corpus proceedings as well as any further representations which Senator Pinochet may wish to make against return.

31. If Senator Pinochet decides to apply for leave to move for judicial review of the Secretary of State's decision, he reserves the right to expand upon the reasons given in this letter in an affidavit to be sworn by one of his officials."

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the reduction in the cost of state earnings-related pensions arising from (a) the changes contained in legislation basing pension entitlement on lifetime earnings, and related changes and (b) the changes contained in the Pensions Act 1995 in (i) 2000, (ii) 2010, (iii) 2030 and (iv) 2040. [61440]

Mr. Denham: The information is in the table.

Reduction in expenditure arising from the 1986 pensions act and the 1995 Pensions Act

	2001–02	2010–11	2030–31	2040–41
1986 Pensions Act[1]	0.0	–3.1	–25.0	–33.1
1995 Pensions Act[2]	0.0	–0.9	–7.5	–10.6

Notes:

1. The figures are approximations based on figures from the Social Security Bill 1986, Report by the Government Actuary on the Financial Effects of the Bill on the National Insurance Fund (Cmnd 9711) assuming an extra 5 million contract out, and the Report by the Government Actuary on the Financial Effects of the Pensions Bill 1994 on the National Insurance Fund (Cmnd 2714).
2. The figures are based on the Report by the Government Actuary on the Financial Effects of the Pensions Bill 1994 on the National Insurance Fund (Cmnd 2714).
3. Estimates do not take account of means-tested benefit offsets.
4. Estimates are in respect of retirement pensioners only.
5. Figures are 1998–99 benefit rates and are rounded to the nearest £0.1 billion.

Gulf War Veterans

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the policy is of the War Pensions Agency on the seven year rule towards Gulf War veteran claimants. [62959]

Mr. Timms: War Pension legislation applies to Gulf War veterans in the same way as to all ex-service personnel claiming a War Pension. Anyone who considers that disablement may be due to service in the Gulf may claim a War Pension at any time after leaving H.M. Forces.

Where a claim is made within seven years of termination of service there is no onus on the claimant to show that disablement is due to service. Even where a claim is made more than seven years after termination of service, it is only necessary for there to be reliable evidence to create a reasonable doubt that disablement might be due to, or aggravated by, service. The benefit of that reasonable doubt is always given to the claimant.

The Secretary of State may review a decision to reject a claim at any time and on any grounds. Where a claim made within seven years of termination of service is later reviewed, the same conditions of proof which applied at the time the claim was made apply to the review.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Enterprise

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the current limits are on the borrowing powers of Scottish Enterprise. [62954]

Mr. Dewar: There is no specified limit on the borrowing powers of Scottish Enterprise. However, Section 25(2) of the Enterprise and New Towns (Scotland) Act 1990 limits the aggregate amount of central government funding that Scottish Enterprise can receive including its general external borrowings. The limit is defined as the aggregate amount outstanding (AAO) and was set by the Scottish Enterprise (Aggregate Amount Outstanding) Order 1997 at £3,000 million. The AAO is made up of the following elements (with the level of funding at 31 March 1998 given in parenthesis): sums issued by the Secretary of State or the Treasury, in fulfilment of guarantees (nil); loans guaranteed by Scottish Enterprise or its subsidiaries (£0.3 million); payments from the Secretary of State consisting of grant-in-aid less administrative expenses plus voted loan payments (£2,470 million); and the general external borrowings of Scottish Enterprise and its subsidiaries (£3 million).

Roads

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many classified roads cross from Scotland to England. [62955]

Mr. Macdonald: My right hon. Friend is responsible for the four trunk roads (the A1, A68, A7 and A74 (M)) which cross from Scotland to England. Information on other classified roads is not held centrally.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how the sustainable development indicators announced by the Deputy Prime Minister on 23 November 1998 will be applied to Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [62786]

Mr. Macdonald: The Government published "Sustainability Counts", a consultation paper on a set of headline indicators of sustainable development, as part of the revision of the Strategy for sustainable development for the United Kingdom. A definitive set of indicators will be published with the Strategy. In the longer term, it will be for the Scottish Parliament to decide its own approach to sustainable development, which may include the adoption of an appropriate set of indicators.

Countryside Premium Scheme

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many applications were received by his Department for grants for use in 1999 under the Countryside Premium Scheme; and how many of these applications were successful. [62785]

Mr. Macdonald: A total of 953 Countryside Premium Scheme applications were received this year, of which just over 500 are expected to be successful.

PRIME MINISTER

Duty Free

Mr. Gale: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions relating to the future of duty-free shopping were instigated by the Government at the Anglo-French Summit in St. Malo on Thursday 3 and Friday 4 December; and if he will make a statement. [62851]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 7 December 1998]: At the Franco-British Summit in St. Malo the United Kingdom and France both saw a clear case for looking again at the 1991 decision to abolish duty-free sales within the European Union at the end of June 1999; but noted that unanimity would be required to amend the 1991 decision.

TREASURY

Age Discrimination

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Inland Revenue staff were required to retire before their contractual retirement age in each of the last three years. [62495]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue has a contractual retirement age of 60, regardless of gender or grade, and this has been in place for many years. There are a number of retirement schemes, the majority of which are voluntary. If a member of staff was required to retire, it would be under the compulsory retirement or severance schemes, or if medical grounds were involved, under the ill health retirement scheme.

There have been no compulsory redundancies or severances in the last three financial years, nor any to date in the current year. The number of ill health retirements are detailed in the table.

Number of ill health retirements of Inland Revenue staff

Year	Number
1995–96	396
1996–97	373
1998–99	149

As is the case for all Civil Service ill health retirements, these must be approved by BMI Health Services. It is not possible to distinguish between people who requested to retire on ill health grounds and those who were required to do so. It is probable that those who requested to retire would be in the majority.

Dog Collars (Customs and Excise)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which sections of HM Customs and Excise are currently using dog collars that administer electric shocks to the animals. [63080]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Customs and Excise does not use collars which administer electric shocks on any of its dogs.

Art Collections (Access)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department is taking to improve the advertising of access to private works of art for which the owner receives tax relief for providing such access; and if he will make a statement. [62381]

Dawn Primarolo: In return for conditional tax exemption, owners of heritage assets have to provide reasonable public access to those assets and to publicise the agreed access arrangements. Most conditionally exempt works of art are displayed in houses, museums and galleries open to the public. Others which are not on public display are listed on the Inland Revenue's Register of conditionally exempt works of art, which is available on the Internet.

The Finance Act 1998 strengthened the rules of the conditional exemption scheme to ensure, among other things, that the public are better informed about their rights to see conditionally exempt assets. In future, owners of all conditionally exempt assets will be required, as a minimum, to advertise access arrangements through the Inland Revenue's Internet site. Owners will also be required to disclose information about the terms of the exemption.

Export Levies

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been raised in levies on British exports to non-EU countries in each of the last five years; and what is the estimated figure for the current year. [63102]

Dawn Primarolo: Figures for receipts of export levies (which apply only to certain agricultural products) are available from 1994–95. They are as follows:

Year	Amount
1994–95	5,600
1995–96	202,371
1996–97	295,679
1997–98	50,111

No monies are expected to be raised from export levies in 1998–99.

Non-EU Imports

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been raised from duties on imports from non-EU countries in each of the last five years; and what is the estimated figure for the current year. [63103]

Dawn Primarolo: Net receipts of customs duties and agricultural levies on imports from non-EU countries have been as follows:

Year	£ million
1993–94	2,169.4
1994–95	2,164.5
1995–96	2,479.5
1996–97	2,299.5
1997–98	2,263.3

The latest estimate for 1998–99, as published in the Pre Budget Report, is £2.0 billion.

VAT

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the yield from VAT in the current financial year; and what is his estimate of its yield in 1999–2000. [63100]

Dawn Primarolo: The latest forecasts for VAT (as published in the November 1998 Pre Budget Report) in 1998–99 and 1999–2000 are £52.6 billion and £55.0 billion respectively.

Supplementary Tax Allowances

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of married couples over 65 years of age who are (a) receiving the full benefit of the married couples' supplementary tax allowance and (b) receiving no benefit or part benefit from those tax allowances. [62629]

Dawn Primarolo: Latest estimates for the number of married couples where one partner is aged 65 or more for 1998–99 are as follows:

	Thousand
	Number of couples
(a) Receiving the full benefit of the appropriate age related married couple's allowance	930
(b) Receiving no benefit or part benefit of the supplementary age related married couple's allowance (including non-taxpayers)	1,940

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the additional costs to the Treasury, for the current year, of supplementary tax allowances for the age-related personal allowance paid to citizens who are (a) aged 65 to 74 and (b) 75 years and over; and what is the total cost of age-related supplement incorporated into the married couples' allowance for the current year. [62627]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimated costs for 1998–99 of the excess of the aged personal and married couples' allowances over the corresponding allowances for non-aged taxpayers are as follows.

	Allowance	£ billion
a.	Taxpayers aged (65 to 74)—personal allowance	0.5
b.	Taxpayers aged (75 and over)—personal allowance	0.4
c.	Taxpayers aged (65 and over)—married couples' allowance	0.2

Savings

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of (a) individuals and (b) households with savings (i) below £1,000, (ii) between £1,000 and £5,000, (iii) between £5,000 and £10,000 and (iv) above £10,000; and if these figures exclude pension fund entitlements. [62631]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the estimated distribution of savings held by individuals is given in the table. Similar information on the distribution of savings held by households is shown in Table 5.9 of Family Resources Survey 1996–97, a copy of which is in the Library. Neither includes the value of accrued pension rights.

	Number of adults[1] (million)
Total	46.0
No savings or investments	14.0
With savings or investments	32.0
Less than £1,000	14.5
£1,000 but less than £5,000	8.0
£5,000 but less than £10,000	3.1
£10,000 or more	6.4

CABINET OFFICE

Ministerial E-mail Address

Mr. Brake: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what is the e-mail address of the Parliamentary Secretary to the Treasury. [52880]

Mr. Kilfoyle: My right hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary to the Treasury does not have an E-mail address.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list the special advisers in his Department and the issues on which they specialise; and to what level they have been security cleared. [62844]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Minister for the Cabinet Office has appointed two Special Advisers—Ms Anna Healy and Mr. Tim Walker—who provide advice on the full range of issues for which he is responsible. In addition, the UK Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator, Mr. Keith Hellawell, and his Deputy, Mr. Michael Trace have been working in the Cabinet Office since July 1998 when the responsibility for co-ordination of anti-drugs activity was transferred from the President of the Council to my right hon. Friend.

My right hon. Friend, the Leader of the House of Lords, Lord Privy Seal and Minister for Women has two special advisers, paid for from the Cabinet Office vote. Ms Clare Cozens advises on legislative strategy and parliamentary procedure, and policy across government. Ms Jo Gibbons advises on the presentation and co-ordination of policies which fall within my right hon. Friend's area of responsibility.

My right hon. Friend, the Government Chief Whip has two special advisers paid for from the Cabinet Office vote. Ms Sue Jackson and Mr. Ian McKenzie provide advice on the full range of issues for which the Government Chief Whip is responsible.

The special advisers are subject to the usual security clearance arrangements.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Arms Embargo (Argentina)

Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if there have been any new exceptions to the arms embargo on Argentina. [63430]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: A licence has recently been issued to allow the export of nine sets of gun rings and smoke grenade launchers to be mounted on armoured personnel carriers in service with the Argentine contingent of the UN forces in Cyprus. This decision represented an exception but not a change to the arms embargo on Argentina.

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the United Nations Special Representative on Cyprus, regarding her negotiations on the Cyprus issue; and if he will make a statement. [62597]

Ms Quin: We remain firmly committed to supporting UN efforts towards a comprehensively political settlement in Cyprus. We warmly welcomed the UN Secretary-General's 30 September announcement of a process for on-island contacts with both parties, led by the UN Deputy Special Representative for Cyprus, Dame Ann Hercus, aimed at reducing tensions and promoting progress towards a just and lasting settlement. Dame Ann has secured the agreement of the two parties to treat discussions within this process as confidential. We respect this, and urge both sides to co-operate in a constructive and flexible manner with Dame Ann, with whom we maintain close contact through our High Commissioner in Nicosia.

Secondments

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people in his Department are currently on secondment from private companies; and if he will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62829]

Mr. Fatchett: There are currently 23 staff seconded from the private sector to the FCO. Full details are as listed.

Edgar Fernandes

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett), had with officials to discuss the case of Edgar Fernandes during his visit to Turkey on 18 to 19 November. [62598]

Mr. Fatchett: The prime purpose of my visit to Turkey, which took place on 17–19 November, was to promote British trade. I held a meeting with the then Deputy Prime Minister, Bulent Ecevit, at which Iraq, human rights and terrorism were the key subjects. It was not possible to discuss the case of Edgar Fernandes although, in my discussions with the British Consul General in Istanbul, I was briefed on the latest developments in the case.

Hawk Aircraft (Indonesia)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to ensure that Hawk aircraft recently sold to Indonesia will not be used for the purposes of internal repression; and if he will make a statement. [62970]

Mr. Fatchett: 16 Hawk Aircraft were licensed by the previous Administration in October 1996. The Indonesian authorities are well aware of the Government's position on human rights.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received regarding the sale of 16 Hawk aircraft to Indonesia. [62969]

Mr. Fatchett: We have received a number of representations from Members of Parliament, NGOs and members of the public on the question of the sale of Hawk aircraft to Indonesia.

Strategic Arms Exports (Annual Report)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the annual report on strategic arms exports to be published. [63093]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Ruislip-Northwood (Mr. Wilkinson) on 27 November 1998, Official Report, column 385.

WALES

National Assembly Members (Salaries)

9. Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will make a decision on salaries for elected representatives in the National Assembly. [61567]

19. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he plans to determine the salaries payable to elected representatives in the Welsh Assembly. [61578]

Mr. Michael: I am not yet in a position to say when I shall make this decision.

I have received a first stage report from the Senior Salary Review Body, which makes recommendations on the pay of ordinary Members, personal travel and subsistence payments and pensions and severance. I am currently considering it.

National Minimum Wage

10. Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales will benefit from the national minimum wage. [61568]

11. Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales will benefit from the national minimum wage. [61569]

Mr. Hain: Latest research shows that 109,000 people in Wales will benefit from the national minimum wage.

Manufacturing Industry

12. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to assist manufacturing industry in Wales. [61570]

Mr. Hain: The Government are pursuing policies to deliver long-term economic stability, the essential platform for encouraging high levels of growth and employment.

Farming (Aid)

13. Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the impact on Wales of the recent package of aid for British farming. [61571]

17. Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the impact on Wales of the recent package of aid for British farming. [61576]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The aid package, worth over £21 million to Welsh farmers, has helped to alleviate the forecast drop in farm incomes for 1998–99. The income figures published last week show that without the additional resources the Net Farm Income for mixed cattle and sheep farms in the Less Favoured Areas of Wales was forecast to fall by 66 per cent. The effect of the package has been to reduce that decline by around a half, to 32 per cent.

Education Expenditure

14. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the increase in expenditure on education in Wales in 1999–2000. [61572]

Mr. Hain: In July this year we announced indicative increases in education spending of £110 million in 1999–2000, £250 million in 2000–01 and £370 million in 2001–02. These include increases in local authority spending on education.

Decisions on allocations for education and other services are being announced in the statement on the local government revenue settlement.

New Deal

15. Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future development of the New Deal in Wales. [61573]

Mr. Hain: The New Deal is progressively being extended to help more people who want to find work. At the beginning of November, measures were introduced to help Disabled People and the New Deal for Lone Parents was extended from the pilot area to cover the whole of Wales. Last week we saw the introduction of pilots in West Wales and Bridgend/Rhondda Cynon Taff which brought the New Deal for Over 25s within the range of those who have been unemployed for 12 and 18 months respectively.

Ministerial Travel

16. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his Department's planned expenditure on ministerial travel for 1998–99 within Wales. [61575]

Mr. Michael: It is not possible to give a specific figure for ministerial travel as the money allocated is subsumed within wider travel and subsistence budgets.

Waterhouse Child Abuse Inquiry

18. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he received the report by Sir Ronald Waterhouse into child abuse in North Wales; and when he expects to publish its conclusions. [61577]

Mr. Michael: I expect to receive the Tribunal's report early in the new year. It will be presented to the House as soon as possible thereafter.

Steelmaking

20. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the competitiveness of steelmaking in Wales. [61579]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh steel industry is among the most competitive in the world. However, like others, it is experiencing difficult trading conditions. The industry is therefore undertaking a range of measures to maintain its competitiveness, such as the introduction of new technology and team working. In particular British Steel has recently completed a £121m investment in a new continuous annealing process line at Port Talbot. This is the biggest single investment since privatisation and represents a massive vote of confidence in the Welsh steel Industry.

Structural Funds

21. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the work of the taskforce established to maximise benefits from European structural funds. [61580]

Mr. Hain: The Taskforce was established on 16 October 1998 and has been charged with advising my right hon. Friend on Welsh interests in the ongoing negotiation of the draft Structural Funds Regulations for the period 2000–06 and considering, advising and co-ordinating the preparation of a national development strategy and related operational programmes to implement Structural Funds investment in Wales over that period.

As part of this process, it has established working groups to examine the needs of the Welsh economy both by sector and by region and also to work up strategic and local priorities. Its work embraces a wide range of partners to enable it to command the greatest possible degree of participation and ownership.

First Minister

22. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received regarding the powers of First Minister of the Welsh National Assembly. [61581]

Mr. Michael: I have received no such representations.

National Assembly Members (Election)

23. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will review the arrangements for election of additional members to the National Assembly. [61582]

Mr. Michael: No. The return of members for the Assembly's electoral regions will be made in accordance with the provisions of the Government of Wales Act 1998.

Consultant Referral Waiting Times

24. Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about waiting times for patients awaiting referral to a consultant. [61583]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Latest published information shows that 93 per cent. of patients waiting for a first outpatient appointment were seen within six months, (79 per cent. within three months). In addition, 95 per cent. of patients waiting for inpatient/daycase treatment in hospital were seen within 12 months (78 per cent. within three months).

Lobbyists

25. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his policy on the role of lobbyists in informing decisions taken by his Department. [61584]

Mr. Michael: Lobbyists play no role in decisions made by my Department.

Territorial Army

26. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact on local communities of the closure of nine Territorial Army centres in Wales. [61585]

Mr. Hain: Six Territorial Army Centres in Wales are to close of which two are not currently in use. Twenty two Territorial Army centres will remain in use: 17 in South Wales, 5 in North Wales, plus 3 centres are to be retained for cadets.

The Ministry of Defence have listened to the responses which resulted from the consultative documents with the results that the current complement in Wales of 2,982 will be reduced by 435, a reduction of 14.6 per cent., the lowest of any UK region.

NHS Trusts

27. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his proposals for NHS trusts. [61586]

28. Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the NHS Trust proposals for Wales. [61587]

29. Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the reconfiguration of NHS trusts in Wales. [61588]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for the Vale of Glamorgan (Mr. Smith), 9 December 1998, Official Report, column 309.

Local Government Finance

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what his proposals are for local government revenue spending and grant support in 1999–2000; and what his plans are for the following two years. [63603]

Mr. Michael: Following the Comprehensive Spending Review and extensive consultation on my spending priorities in Wales, I propose that total standard spending in 1999–2000 should be £3,243 million, an increase of £143 million or 4.6 per cent. on the comparable figure for 1998–99.

This is a good settlement for local government and for Wales as a whole. It is not just about money but about partnership. It paves the way for the co-operation I have offered to the leaders of local authorities which is aimed at improving services and extending opportunity everywhere in Wales. It also sets the scene for a strong partnership between the National Assembly for Wales and local government which I believe is essential for the success of both.

The increase includes an additional £70 million revenue spending for education and extra provision so that local authorities can:

improve children's services in line with the Government's response to the report by Sir William Utting; provide at least half price bus transport for pensioners from April 1999; and implement a new regime to deal with contaminated land with effect from 1 July 1999.

I announced details of the settlement for police authorities on 2 December 1998.

I propose to set aggregate external finance at £2,827 million, of which I plan to make available £1,914 million in revenue support grant and council tax reduction scheme grant, £656 million in redistributed business rates and £257 million for specific grants.

I propose that the non-domestic rate poundage for Wales should rise by 3.2 per cent. in line with the Retail Prices Index for the 12 months to September 1998, giving a rate of 44.3p in the pound for 1999–2000.

There will be a scheme to limit council tax increases; it will be similar to the targeted scheme that operated for 1998–99 and I will announce further details shortly.

I also intend that there should be new arrangements for council tax benefit subsidy, to prevent the full cost of excessive council tax increases being passed onto the national tax payer in the form of higher subsidy payments. The arrangements will apply to county and county borough councils only in 1999–2000, and the National Assembly for Wales will be able to extend them to police authorities the following year.

I expect local authorities to budget prudently, and I am prepared to use my capping powers if they decide to make excessive increases in council tax.

Looking ahead to the following two years my plans provide for total standard spending and aggregate external finance (net of specific grants) to be as reflected in the table. The National Assembly will take the final decisions. My proposals for 1999–2000, on the same net basis, are also given for comparative purposes:

	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
Net TSS (£ million)	2,986	3,128	3,279
Of which Net AEF (£ million)	2,570	2,671	2,778
Percentage increase in net TSS	5.1	4.8	4.8
Real terms percentage increase in net TSS	2.5	2.2	2.3

Further information on the proposed settlement, including details for individual authorities and the detailed arrangements for council tax benefit subsidy, will be announced shortly. I will also be discussing with the Welsh Local Government Association a range of performance measures linked to this announcement.

My Department has written today to the Welsh Local Government Association and all local authorities in Wales to initiate a consultation on my proposals for next year's settlement. Copies of the consultation letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money was allocated in the 1998–99 standard spending assessment to each local authority in Wales to repay capital debt. [62652]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: There are no separately identifiable allocations within standard spending assessments for repayment of debt. The amounts in respect of overall capital charges included in the 1998–99 standard spending assessments are given in the following table.

Isle of Anglesey	6,772
Gwynedd	10,608
Conwy	8,659
Denbighshire	9,015
Flintshire	12,691
Wrexham	9,739
Powys	12,603
Ceredigion	5,696
Pembrokeshire	10,800
Carmarthenshire	14,353
Swansea	22,312
Neath Port Talbot	12,529
Bridgend	10,882
The Vale of Glamorgan	9,011
Rhondda, Cynon, Taff	17,065
Merthyr Tydfil	5,019
Caerphilly	12,061
Blaenau Gwent	7,606
Torfaen	8,982
Monmouthshire	5,469
Newport	13,204
Cardiff	24,236
Dyfed-Powys Police	649
Gwent Police	821
North Wales Police	678
South Wales Police	2,412
Total Unitary Authorities	249,311
Total Police Authorities	4,560
Total Wales	253,871

Capital charges cover repayment of debt, interest payments on outstanding debt, non-operational leasing charges, and for the police authorities capital expenditure charged to the revenue account. The figures are net of capital financing grants.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures his Department has taken to encourage local authorities in Wales to repay debt. [62653]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Local authorities' new borrowing is regulated by the issue of credit approvals in accordance with Government policy. Authorities have a statutory duty to make provision to meet their existing debts. It is for them to decide whether it would be prudent to repay any loan before they are contractually required to do so.

National Assembly

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assumptions he has made about the workload of the National Assembly for Wales up to autumn 1999 in planning his work in 1999. [62365]

Mr. Michael: My officials are identifying the business the Assembly will need to address in its early days, based on the emerging standing orders, the draft Transfer of Functions Order, the work currently in hand in the Welsh Office and the Government's programme of legislation. I shall share this forward look with the leaders of the political parties in Wales so that we can work towards a common understanding of the likely early demands on the Assembly's time.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he is taking in response to the report of the Commission for Racial Equality about the treatment of ethnic minority people in Wales. [62528]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: A Survey of current Secondary Health Care Practice was prepared by the NHS Wales Equality Unit in partnership with the Commission for Racial Equality. I attended the launch of the report on 30 November 1998 and gave the Department's support to its recommendation that health care should be accessible, fair and without disadvantage. Welsh Office officials will be meeting the Commission for Racial Equality to consider the issues further.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the management of the Welsh Development Agency following the recent resignations of senior staff. [62363]

Mr. Hain: The WDA expects some turnover of its staff in the normal course of events and this always presents an opportunity to strengthen the organisation. I am confident that the management team in place will be able to deliver the challenging agenda which Government have set.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the adequacy of action being taken within the Welsh Office to deal with the problem of the millennium bug. [63094]

Mr. Michael: In common with all Departments the Welsh Office completes a Quarterly Return to the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency on the progress towards achieving Millennium compliance of it's internal systems and the general state of readiness of the wider public sector in Wales.

These returns are published on the Internet and copies are placed in the Library of the House. The last returns were published on 2 December.

I am currently satisfied with my Departments progress towards achieving Millennium date change compliance but will keep that progress under review.

Nurses

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he proposes to take to improve morale amongst nurses. [62697]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The Department is preparing a Strategic Framework for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting in Wales following consultation with the health service. It will set out the vital contribution that the profession makes to the health service.

As an integral part of the Human Resource Strategy for Wales we will set the NHS targets to improve its record as an employer which will mean improving the quality of life of staff and their access to continuing professional development.

The Government are committed to a fair and affordable pay settlement which will have a positive impact on the nursing profession. The Nurses Pay Review Body is currently considering evidence from the trade unions, Health Departments and employers and will make recommendations on pay levels to take effect on 1 April 1999. The Government will make an announcement early in the new year.

Steel Imports

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the Chairman of British Steel plc concerning imports of steel products from the Far East; and if he will make a statement. [62699]

Mr. Hain: None, but the Welsh Office maintains close contact with British Steel and my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, met the Chairman of British Steel plc on 17 November to discuss this and a range of other issues affecting the steel industry.

The Government consistently press for strict rules contained in the Steel Aid Code to be applied rigorously by Member States and for stringent monitoring and enforcement by the Commission. This has contributed to a climate in which illegal state aids have declined significantly in importance as a problem for the UK steel industry.

Where any cases give rise to concern, the Government are always willing to examine any evidence put forward, and to consider what action might be appropriate.

Direct Labour Departments

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the losses that will be made by local authority direct labour departments in this financial year. [62681]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: I have made no such estimate because local authorities are not due to submit reports for this financial year until 31 October 1999. However, I expect all authorities to do everything possible to achieve the specified financial objective for the work which they carry out.

I have asked those authorities whose direct service organisations made losses for the 1997–98 financial year to report to me on what action they are taking to return their organisations to profit. I shall consider whether any further action is necessary when I have received these reports.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Performance League Tables

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what research he has commissioned on value-added models of performance league tables. [62583]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Following research sponsored by the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority, and a consultation by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority, we have conducted a value added pilot study, the results of which were published as a supplement to the secondary school tables on 1 December. The study involved some 200 schools and investigated a variety of options for presenting value added measures from Key Stage 3 to GCSE/GNVQ, based on information about individual pupil performance. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to publish league tables weighted according to pupil performance at Key Stage Two. [62582]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We aim to publish measures of value added by secondary schools from Key Stage 2 to the end of compulsory schooling from 2003, when suitable data for matching pupils' achievements over time are expected to become available.

Further Education

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total amount the further education sector is expected to raise in efficiency savings in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000; and if these sums are included in the announced increases in resources allocated to further education in each of those years. [62548]

Mr. Mudie: The efficiency savings expected of the Further Education sector are equivalent to £135 million in financial year 1998–99 and £35 million in financial year 1999–2000. The increased funding that has been allocated to Further Education in each of these years does not include these amounts but does assume that these efficiency savings will be realised.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if his figures for the additional students expected in the further education sector by 2002 will be calculated on the basis of student enrolments. [62547]

Mr. Mudie: The additional students expected in the further education sector by 2002 are calculated on the basis of the number of students in Further Education colleges.

Class Sizes

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if infant schools which continue to operate admission limits in excess of 30 or multiples of 30 will receive additional resources to meet the class-size pledge. [62608]

Ms Estelle Morris: Whether individual schools receive additional resources to meet the class size pledge will depend on the implementation plan submitted by their local education authority and the costings to support that plan, as approved by the Secretary of State. A school that continues to operate admission limits in excess of 30 or multiples of 30 may receive additional resources to meet the class size pledge if it is judged reasonable for it to continue to operate those limits in the context of the authority's plan, taking into account the circumstances of the school.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he has taken to ensure the education in subsequent years of an exempted pupil admitted as a 31st child consistent with the class size requirements of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998. [62606]

Ms Estelle Morris: An excepted pupil falling within paragraphs 2 to 5 of the Schedule in the Education (Infant Class Sizes)(England) Regulations 1998 (S.I. 1998/1973) will cease to be treated as such a pupil after the end of the school year in which he/she is admitted to the school. This does not apply to an excepted pupil falling within paragraphs 6 and 7 of that Schedule because that exception permits a pupil with special educational needs, normally educated in a special school or a special unit attached to a mainstream school, to gain the benefits of being able to join in a mainstream class for some lessons.

Every governing body and local education authority will be under a legal duty to comply with class size legislation. We will be monitoring closely all aspects of that legislation, including the operation of the limit.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if, where an exempted pupil is admitted to an infant class in excess of 30, additional resources will be made available from his Department to meet the class size pledge in subsequent years. [62607]

Ms Estelle Morris: We will be providing sufficient resources to enable all local authorities to meet the class size pledge. We intend to make resources available to deal with contingencies which arise when, exceptionally, a child is lawfully admitted to a school, taking an infant class above 30 pupils. Whether an authority will require additional resources to deal with a case of that kind will clearly depend on the particular circumstances of the case.

Higher Education (Fees)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice his Department has issued to Higher Education institutions regarding the collection of fees from (a) EU and (b) UK students. [62603]

Mr. Mudie: Our advice did not differentiate between UK and non-UK EU students. My Department wrote to universities and colleges on 7 October 1998 in response to reports that some institutions were pressing for payment of the full £1,000 from students still awaiting an awards letter. It reiterated the advice contained in an earlier letter from the Department of 18 November 1997 about the importance of institutions undertaking the collection of the fee sensitively and flexibly in the early months of a degree course, taking account of the particular circumstances of individual students. It went on to advise that, in the case of students still awaiting an awards letter, and if instalment or other arrangements were offered, these should be put into effect only when the awards letter became available, so that payments were based on actual amounts due and students not required to make any contribution were not disadvantaged.

Dental Students

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what studies his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on (i) the effect of debt among dental students and (ii) the impact of this on their willingness to work in the NHS; [62315]

(2) what assessment he has made of the British Dental Association's survey of dental students' debt. [62313]

Mr. Mudie: The Department has not commissioned any research on the effect of debt on dental students but, we have recently received a summary of the survey by the British Dental Association which we shall consider carefully.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will provide extra help for dental students who are heavily in debt. [62314]

Mr. Mudie: Dental and other students who entered higher education before 1998–99 and who take out five or more loans will repay these loans over a period of seven years compared with five years for other borrowers. They will not have to start repaying their student loans until their income reaches the earnings related threshold which for 1998–99 is set at £17,784 per annum.

From 1998–99 dental students in the first four years of their course will have access to the same loan, grant and fees support as all other new entrants, but they will receive help in years five and beyond through NHS bursaries and the Department of Health will meet their tuition fees. After graduation, they will benefit from the fairer repayment system which we are introducing, which links repayments directly to graduates income. No repayments are made until their income reaches a threshold, initially set at £10,000, and thereafter they are calculated as a percentage of income above that level. This will ensure that dental students, and others with larger loans to repay will have affordable repayments linked directly to their earnings.

PE Teachers (Gloucestershire)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many secondary school physical education teachers have been employed by local education authority and grant maintained schools in Gloucestershire since 1979. [62973]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information is not available.

School Performance Bonus Scheme

Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his oral statement of 3 December 1998, Official Report, columns 1041–45, if he will make a statement on the intended scope of the school performance bonus scheme. [63334]

Mr. Blunkett: Initial plans are that the School Performance Awards Scheme will cover up to a third of schools. Over time we would expect many more schools to be able to benefit. All payments would be allocated on the basis of merit. I will consult further on the technical document planned for publication in the New Year.

Teachers (Supergrades)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the extent to which the recently announced supergrades for teachers will be filled by existing teachers. [62908]

Mr. Charles Clarke: All Advanced Skills Teacher posts will be filled by serving teachers, because candidates need to be assessed in their present teaching posts. Advanced Skills Teacher posts may be filled by internal candidates, or by external candidates further to advertisement of posts. Both routes are lawful, although my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State would prefer Advanced Skills Teacher posts to be advertised in order to maximise the field of candidates.

Literacy and Numeracy

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what additional funding is available to schools to support the literacy and numeracy hours. [62347]

Ms Estelle Morris: We are providing significant investment to support the implementation of the National Literacy and Numeracy Strategies in primary schools. This year we have given £65 million to schools to purchase books for reading. On 7 December we announced an additional £54 million to support our drive to raise literacy standards in primary schools, a similar amount will be made available for schools to implement the numeracy hour in September 1999.

Dyslexia

Mr. Ridney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what evaluation he has made of the studies referred to in the Green Paper, "Excellence for all Children: Meeting Special Educational Needs", by the Helen Arkell Dyslexia Centre and the Manchester

Metropolitan University relating to teaching methods for tackling dyslexia; and if he intends to publish the evaluations. [62312]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The results of the Helen Arkell Dyslexia Centre research project, which has just been completed, will be published in the Department's research report series in February 1999. The results from the Manchester Metropolitan University research project are being published by the University. As a result of their research the Manchester Metropolitan University has been contracted to produce a video, teacher's handbook and other materials to support the teaching of pupils with mild to moderate literacy difficulties in mainstream schools. A copy of the video and materials will be sent to the Literacy Consultant(s) in each Local Education Authority. Summaries of both research projects will be in the Department's research brief series which appears on the Internet and Intranet.

Further and Higher Education

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will give details of the Government's plans to monitor the impact of the new funding system on recruitment to higher education institutions of various categories of student, including mature students. [61932]

Mr. Mudie: Initial evidence shows that there is a small increase in the number of school and college leavers accepted for higher education, and that there is almost no change in the social composition of accepted applicants.

My Department has in place a programme of evaluation work to assess the impact of the new funding arrangements on participation in higher education by different types of student, examining for instance the social background, ethnic group, disability, age and gender of students. This work will draw on data produced by the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) and subsequently in the first half of next year by the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA). In addition we are commissioning an update of the Student Income and Expenditure Survey which will provide information about the impact of the new arrangements on student finances.

The key results of our monitoring and research will be published and available to Parliament.

Social Affairs Council

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the outcome of the Social Affairs Council held in Brussels on 1 and 2 December; and if he will make a statement. [62704]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I attended the first session of the Social Affairs Council and I attended the joint meeting of Social Affairs Ministers and Economic and Finance Ministers, both on 1 December 1998. My hon. Friend the Minister of State at the Department of Trade and Industry and I attended the second session of the Social Affairs Council on 2 December.

The first session of the Social Affairs Council discussed and agreed proposals for revisions to the Employment Guidelines for 1999 and the Joint Report on Implementation of the 1998 Guidelines. The joint meeting of Social Affairs Ministers and Economic and Finance Ministers adopted the Employment Guidelines for 1999 and the Joint Report on Implementation of the 1998 Guidelines, and both will now be submitted to the Vienna European Council on 11–12 December to be endorsed. The joint meeting also heard a presentation from Sir Brian Unwin, Chairman of the European Investment Bank, on the progress in implementing the programme agreed at the Luxembourg Jobs Summit for increased lending by the Bank to promote employment.

The second session of the Social Affairs Council on 2 December reached political agreement on a common position on the second amendment to the Carcinogens Directive and political agreement on a common position on a proposed Directive on Potentially Explosive Atmospheres.

The Council reached political agreement on the amendment to Regulation 1408/71 (social security for migrant workers) to extend certain elements to students.

The Council reached political agreement on the second reading of a Decision to encourage mobility between Member States for people in work-linked vocational training (Europass).

The Council was unable to reach agreement on the Worker Participation Directive element of the European Company Statute package.

The Council discussed a Presidency report on the follow up to the 1995 Beijing Women's Conference. The Council noted and endorsed the Commission's mid-term report on safety, hygiene and health at work. The Presidency reported on the November Social Dialogue Conference in Vienna. The Commission reported, without endorsement, on its three recent initiatives: on information and consultation of workers, where the social partners had failed to reach agreement; on a proposed extension of the Working Time Directive to excluded sectors; and on its Communication on work organisation.

European Union (Promotional Literature)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money the European Union is spending in the current year on providing literature about the EU in schools in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [62414]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 8 December 1998]: I understand that money from a number of sources may be used by the European Commission for this purpose. According to the Commission's Representation in the UK, I understand that, while the Commission can identify the cost of some specific publications intended for distribution to UK schools, it cannot provide a global figure.

Special Educational Needs

Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the 1997–98 annual report from the President of the SEN Tribunal will be published; and if he will make a statement. [63431]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The report has been published today, and copies have been placed in the Library.

The Tribunal provides a valuable and independent mechanism for considering parents' appeals against decisions of local education authorities. It is of credit to all those working with the Tribunal—the President, the members, and the secretariat staff—that the Tribunal has maintained its targets for dealing with appeals, in spite of the increased volume of such appeals. The Tribunal has earned a much deserved reputation for fairness and impartiality and for ensuring that its hearings are as informal as possible.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Livestock (Assessment and Classification)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what criteria are used (a) to measure the performance of British livestock and (b) to classify carcases of livestock. [63140]

Mr. Rooker: For livestock animals, the performance criteria used are growth rate, feed efficiency and reproductive rate. For carcases, the performance criteria used are conformation, fat cover and the finished weight of the carcase.

Pig Industry

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans the Government have to give financial assistance to pig producers. [62321]

Mr. Rooker: The EU pigmeat regime is very light and contains no provision for direct aids to producers of the sort introduced for beef and sheep farmers. Paying these as a state aid would contravene European law. Moreover, we generally oppose state aid schemes in the pig sector because they can distort trade, interfere with the market and risk prolonging a crisis.

The pig sector is benefiting from a number of market related measures which has been agreed within the EU and supported by the Government. These have been worth almost £100 million in market support across the EU this year. Measures include the re-introduction of refunds on exports of fresh and frozen carcases and cuts of pigmeat; two further increases in those refunds—including a 75 per cent. increase on exports to Russia; and the introduction of an aids to private storage scheme.

The Government continue to fund strategic R&D of assistance to the pig industry to the tune of £2.5 million per annum. An increasing proportion of this spend is on joint projects with the industry, a clear sign that the work we are funding is of value.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the British pig industry; and what plans he has to assist pig farmers to increase their trade within the European Union. [62322]

Mr. Rooker: Like their counterparts in the rest of the EU, the British pig industry is going through a difficult time at present, with market prices well below the cost of production. The crisis is due mainly to over-production, because of an exaggerated producer response to the BSE crisis and to a reduction in supply due to outbreaks of classical swine fever (CSF) on mainland Europe, principally in the Netherlands. This has led to a distorted version of the classic pig cycle, with the position being exacerbated by the strong pound, high production in the USA and a reduction in world demand, e.g. in Russia and the Far East.

The Meat and Livestock Commission (MLC) and Food from Britain have helped the British pig industry to establish a healthy export trade in pork and pork products with other EU countries. In 1997, over 200,000 tonnes were exported to the EU (up some 20 per cent. on 1996) and this figure is likely to be exceeded in 1998.

For their part, Government Ministers have directed their efforts at raising the profile of British pigmeat in the domestic market, particularly the catering market. We have spearheaded a campaign aimed at the catering and food service sector with the objective of increasing the use of pigmeat products in a sector which takes 30 per cent. of the pigmeat market.

In addition, the major retailers have given voluntary undertakings that all their own-label fresh pork, bacon, ham, sausages and pork pies will come from stall and tether and MBM free systems. In addition, they will not sell imported fresh pork processed or packaged in the UK, under a British label. These are major advances which will be welcomed by the British pig industry.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the degree of certainty about the link between the incidence of tuberculosis in cattle and the presence locally of badgers; and if he will make a statement. [62909]

Mr. Rooker: The Krebs report concluded that the sum of evidence strongly supports the view that in Britain badgers are a significant source of TB infection in cattle.

Aromatherapy Oils

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if aromatherapy oils are classified as agricultural products. [63048]

Mr. Rooker: Aromatherapy oils would not normally be classified as agricultural products but if the hon. Member writes to me with specific details about the products she is concerned with I will try to provide a more definitive answer.

Abattoirs

Mrs. Fiona Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce maximum line speeds in abattoirs. [62784]

Mr. Rooker: GB meat hygiene legislation provides the Meat Hygiene Service with powers to require the slowing of line speeds in individual abattoirs where, in the opinion of the Official Veterinary Surgeon, line speeds are such as to jeopardise the satisfactory inspection or the hygienic production of meat. I have no plans, however, for the blanket introduction of maximum line speeds in licensed abattoirs.

Calf Processing Scheme

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the proposed restoration of grant aid for the calf processing scheme. [63128]

Mr. Rooker: I refer the hon. Member to the statement given by my right hon. Friend the Minister to the House on 16 November 1998, Official Report, columns 624–26. The new rate of aid of £55.85 per calf came into force on 7 December.

Milk Prices

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to ensure that reductions in prices paid to milk producers are passed on to milk consumers. [63127]

Mr. Rooker: Pricing decisions at retail level in respect of produce, including milk, are matters for the commercial judgment of the various food retail companies, which operate in a fiercely competitive market. However, it must be remembered that a significant part of the final price of food to the consumer is accounted for by processing, distribution and marketing costs. So the proportional impact of raw material price changes would be expected to be much reduced at retail level.

Fallen Stock (Disposal)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to make an announcement of future arrangements for the disposal of fallen stock. [63139]

Mr. Rooker: The Government consider that it is the responsibility of the livestock industry to arrange for the disposal of its waste, including fallen stock.

BSE Inquiry

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the total cost of the current BSE inquiry; and how many staff have been allocated to it. [62950]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 7 December 1998]: The estimated direct cost of the BSE Inquiry is £10 million, excluding departmental costs and legal support for departmental witnesses. The number of staff allocated to the Inquiry has fluctuated according to need; it currently stands at 85.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Korean War Veterans

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the incidence of rheumatoid arthritis is amongst veterans of the Korean War; and how this compares with the incidence amongst the population as a whole. [62977]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available.

Devolution

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the programmes which it will be ultra vires for his Department to fund or have sole responsibility for after devolution; if he will list these programmes; and if he will make a statement. [63298]

Mr. Timms: Social Security, Child Support and pension matters are reserved to the Westminster Parliament by virtue of Head F of Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security will therefore remain responsible for these matters in Scotland after devolution.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much is spent annually by his Department on research programmes in Scotland; and what proportion of this funding will be transferred to the Scottish Parliament after devolution. [63296]

Mr. Timms: Social Security, Child Support and Pensions are reserved matters, and the research associated with them will also remain this Department's responsibility after devolution. Therefore none of the funding attributable to research in this Department will be transferred to the Scottish Parliament.

The cost of collecting data in relation to Scotland is an integral part of the cost of collecting data for Great Britain. The overhead costs of conducting the research are incurred on a Great Britain basis. It is not therefore possible to disaggregate the spending on research in Scotland from the total spending in Great Britain.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) by programme over £50,000 and (b) the total of spending by his Department in Scotland on the identifiable spending areas detailed in Table 7.6A of the Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis 1997–98 (Cmnd 3601); which of these programmes will fall solely or jointly under the responsibility of the Scottish Parliament; and what arrangements are in place to transfer control of funds for these projects to the Scottish Executive or Parliament. [63297]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury to the hon. Member for Tayside, North (Mr. Swinney) on 4 November 1998, Official Report, column 615, which sets out identifiable expenditure on Social Security benefits in Scotland. It does not include the costs of administration in or in respect of Scotland, or certain elements, e.g. benefits paid overseas which cannot be attributed separately.

Social Security is a reserved matter and expenditure on it will not therefore be the responsibility of the Scottish Executive or Parliament.

Supported Accommodation

Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the future of the funding arrangements for supported accommodation. [63667]

Mr. Darling: We are publishing today a consultation document "Supporting People" proposing new funding arrangements for support services. The proposals arise from the Inter-Departmental review of funding for supported accommodation.

Over the years Housing Benefit, which was designed to meet housing costs, has been used to meet other costs over which the Government have no control. As a result, Housing Benefit became the primary funding stream for support services that varied in standard from the very good to the very bad. There was no proper consideration of quality or standards.

Nor has there been an effective over-arching strategy of the work of the various government departments involved, or ownership of responsibility for ensuring that vulnerable people receive the support they require. This has resulted in a focus on dealing with problems once they emerge, sometimes pushing people into more acute services than they might have originally needed.

The new arrangements will enable many thousands of vulnerable people to get the cost-effective and high-quality services which they need.

We propose to replace the current complicated arrangements with one single budget targeted specifically at support services. This will ensure that the Government meet people's basic housing costs and at the same time that vulnerable people get the quality help they need to meet their requirements. This will be administered at the local level by Local Authorities. The new single budget will be preceded by a new, time-limited, transitional Housing Benefit scheme which will be implemented when current regulations expire; these regulations were introduced to protect many thousands of vulnerable people whose support services were jeopardised by a Court ruling in July 1997.

Our new proposals for delivering support to vulnerable people will operate in combination with community care, housing, and other existing policies to support vulnerable people in the community. Funding for support services will, for the first time, be clear and practical. This means that many vulnerable people—such as frail elderly people, people with mental health problems, and victims of domestic violence—will be able to remain independent within the community.

The proposals demonstrate the benefits of Inter-Departmental working, bringing together expertise across Government to develop policies that meet the needs of individuals. In carrying this work forward, the Government are keen to involve local government, the Housing Corporation, the providers and other stakeholders throughout the consultation process and beyond.

Copies will be placed in the Library.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Devolution

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much is spent annually by his Department on research programmes in Scotland; and what proportion of this funding will be transferred to the Scottish Parliament after devolution. [63287]

Mr. Chris Smith: Nil.

Television Education Channel

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Education and Employment over the establishment of a new television education channel. [63316]

Mr. Chris Smith: My Department is in regular contact with the Department for Education and Employment on a wide range of issues including broadcast educational material, and the Department for Education and Employment is discussing direct with broadcasters the development and broadcast of new specific digital educational services to support the GCSE National Curriculum.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will write in response to the questions tabled on 4 November by the hon. Member for East Surrey. [63325]

Mr. Chris Smith: I replied to the hon. Member in a letter dated 30 November and delivered to the House on 4 December 1998.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Ministerial E-mail Address

Mr. Brake: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his e-mail address. [62560]

Mr. Hoon: Hon. Members can e-mail the Lord Chancellor's Department's Ministerial Correspondence Unit at: mcu.lcd@gtnet.gov.uk. Members of the public can e-mail the Department at: enquiries.lcdhq@gtnet.gov.uk.

Maintenance Orders

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of reciprocal enforcement of maintenance orders; and if he will make a statement. [62357]

Mr. Hoon: Officials from my Department frequently review the effectiveness of internal procedures for transmitting applications for the enforcement of maintenance orders between the UK and overseas authorities to discuss improvements to these reciprocal arrangements.

Environmental Courts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will establish designated courts to deal with environmental issues. [62537]

Mr. Hoon: There are no plans to establish separate environmental courts. However, cases involving environmental issues will benefit, along with all other cases, from the regime of judicial case management to be introduced in April.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Road Traffic Law

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made over the last five years (a) within his Department, (b) in conjunction with other Government departments and (c) in conjunction with European bodies towards developing systems involving the use of new technology for safety-related road traffic law enforcement and the administration of penalties. [62544]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Road traffic law enforcement and the administration of penalties are mainly matters for my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary. However, my department, in conjunction with his, is interested in the potential of new technology to support its road safety and environmental objectives. To that end it has an extensive research programme and is also supportive of a wide range of research in the UK and in Europe which seeks to develop practical applications of new technology for road traffic law enforcement and the administration of penalties. Examples of this are the research projects on vehicle speed control being conducted on behalf of the Department by the Motor Industry Research Association and the Institute for Transport Studies at the University of Leeds, and the field trials conducted in Sweden and the Netherlands evaluating different systems and technologies to control vehicle speeds externally.

Donaldson Report

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to publish Lord Donaldson's report on command and control of major pollution incidents; and if he will make a statement. [62937]

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the report by Lord Donaldson relating to the 'Sea Empress' incident will be published. [63044]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We received Lord Donaldson's report on his review of marine salvage and intervention and their command and control on 20 November. Consideration is being given to the publication of the report.

Housing Benefits

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much housing benefit was paid to council tenants (a) in the UK and (b) of Portsmouth City Council in each of the last three years; and in each case, what proportion of that amount was funded from council rents. [63026]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is shown in the following table.

UK
HB paid to council tenants (£ million)	4,421	4,535	4,441
Percentage funded through rental surpluses	23.7	25.9	27.4
Portsmouth
HB paid to council tenants (£ million)	25.0	26.6	26.5
Percentage funded through rental surpluses	16.0	18.3	19.3

Housing Development (North-West)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the percentage and area of brownfield sites in the North West where the cost of reclamation is likely to make the site uneconomic for housing development. [63047]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is not currently available. Phase 1 of the National Land Use Database project, which we launched in May 1998, covers vacant and derelict sites and other previously developed land which may be available for redevelopment. Officials are currently working with English Partnerships, local authorities and the Ordnance Survey to collect the information for this first phase. Initial results should be available by the end of March 1999.

Railtrack

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the levels of capital investment by Railtrack for each year since it was established; what the figures were for comparable capital investment by British Rail in the five years before privatisation; and if he will make a statement. [62600]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Railtrack was established on 1 April 1994 and privatised on 20 May 1996. The table shows annual total rail infrastructure investment between 1989–90 and 1997–98.

Year	Annual total rail infrastructure investment (£ million cash)
1989–90	[1]603
1990–91	625
1991–92	769
1992–93	843
1993–94	708
1994–95	[2]661
1995–96	744
1997–98	1,250

[1] Investment figures for 1989–90 to 1993–94 cover BR investment on infrastructure, on buildings, and on new routes and new electrification. This approximates, but is not identical to, the types of investment now undertaken by Railtrack.

[2] In addition, investment figures from 1994–95 onwards, based on information provided by Railtrack and as reported in the company's Annual Reports and Accounts, are not directly comparable with figures for rail infrastructure investment in previous years due to changes in accounting definitions and the adoption of a new accounting practice by Railtrack.

Seat Belts and Child Restraints

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what steps he is taking to encourage motorists to use appropriate safety measures for child passengers; [62933]

(2) what plans he has to encourage motorists (a) to use seat belts and (b) to ensure that their passengers wear seat belts. [62984]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department's leaflet "Seat Belts and Child Restraints" which provides advice on the law, on selecting the right child restraint and on wearing by pregnant women is widely available. Advice is also provided in the 1996 version of the Department of Transport publication "Choosing Safety", published by the Stationery Office. Copies of both documents are in the Library of the House.

In the longer term, a standard method of attaching child restraints to cars will make fitting more straightforward. The UK has taken a leading role in the development of the ISOFIX system, which would provide standard attachment points on both child restraints and cars. We are keen for this system to be adopted as the European norm.

Following the successful campaign last July to encourage rear seat belt wearing we are considering further advertising in 1999. Surveys by the Transport Research Laboratory show an increase in rear seat belt wearing (children and adults) from 67 per cent. in April 1998 to 72 per cent. in October 1998, the highest figure yet reported by these regular surveys.

Great North Eastern Railway

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to encourage GNER to increase the speed and regularity of its services. [62983]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The franchise agreement, which governs the provision of services, includes a Passenger Service Requirement (PSR) which specifies a minimum level of service which GNER must plan to provide. The PSR includes maximum acceptable intervals between services and maximum acceptable end-to-end journey times. What services operate over and above the PSR is a matter for GNER. Ministers are considering recommendations from the Franchising Director about the future provision of capacity for East Coast Main Line services, and will make a statement about that in due course.

School Playing Fields (Redevelopment)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what monitoring his Department has carried out regarding redevelopments of school playing fields called in under the statutory consultee process. [62972]

Mr. Raynsford: Planning applications to develop school playing fields which are called in for the Secretary of State's determination are handled in the first instance by the Government Offices for the Regions. Four applications have been called in since June 1997.

Waste Transportation

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of (a) road, (b) rail and (c) water traffic can be attributed to the transportation of waste; and if he will make a statement. [62428]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 8 December 1998]: Waste accounted for some 7 per cent. of the total tonnage of domestic waterborne freight in 1997. No information is currently available for the percentage of road and rail traffic accounted for by waste. This limited information will be taken into account in the follow up to the Department's consultation paper "Less Waste, More Value".

Devolution

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how much is spent annually by his Department on research programmes in Scotland; and what proportion of this funding will be transferred to the Scottish Parliament after devolution; [63278]

(2) if he will list (a) by programme over £50,000 and (b) the total spending by his Department in Scotland on the identifiable spending areas detailed in Table 7.6A of the Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis 1997–98 (Cmnd 3601); which of these programmes will fall solely or jointly under the responsibility of the Scottish Parliament; and what arrangements are in place to transfer control of funds for these projects to the Scottish Executive or Parliament; [63279]

(3) what assessment he has made of the programmes which it will be ultra vires his Department to fund or have sole responsibility for after devolution; if he will list these programmes; and if he will make a statement. [63280]

Mr. Meale: Under the terms of the Scotland Act 1998, the Scottish Ministers will assume responsibility for a range of devolved functions which will in part depend on secondary legislation which has yet to be passed. My Department is reviewing its programmes, including the research components, in the light of the Scotland Act. It is too early to say to what extent programme expenditure which is currently administered by the Department may relate to functions which will transfer to Scottish Ministers. Work is taking place to establish the extent of any such expenditure and to assess the needs for any consequential transfer of funds to the Scottish Ministers. For the total spending by the Department in Scotland I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury to the hon. Member for North Tayside (Mr. Swinney) on 4 November 1998, Official Report, column 615.

Pesticide Tax

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the (a) environmental benefits and (b) costs to rural businesses of a pesticide tax. [63450]

Mr. Meale: The Department has commissioned extensive research work on the feasibility of an economic instrument to assist in delivering the Government's pesticide minimisation policy. This has included assessment of the potential environmental benefits of such an instrument, of the impacts on and costs to relevant agricultural sectors and on the manufacturers and distributors of pesticides.

Greater London Authority Bill

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to publish the explanatory notes to the Greater London Authority Bill. [63305]

Mr. Raynsford: Copies of the Explanatory note were published today.

Sea Stores, Yate

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what current use is made of the sea stores property at Yate, owned by the Property Services Agency; and what plans he has for its future use. [63256]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This property is in fact owned by the Highways Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from H. Parker-Brown to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 10 December 1998:

The Transport Minister, Glenda Jackson, has asked Lawrie Haynes, the Chief Executive, to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the sea stores at Yate. I am replying in Lawrie's absence from the office.

The stores are owned by the Highways Agency and are used to store mainly electrical equipment needed for the National Motorway Communications Network. There are no plans to change this use.

UK Safety Oversight System

Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to announce the results of the audit of the UK safety oversight system carried out by the International Civil Aviation Safety Organisation in April 1998; and if he will make a statement. [63665]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The United Kingdom was one of the leading nations in pressing the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO) to set up, in 1995, a programme of voluntary safety assessments of its member states. The objective of this programme was to seek to ensure that ICAO Contracting States are adequately discharging their responsibilities for safety oversight in certain specific areas: aircraft operations, the licensing and training of personnel and aircraft airworthiness.

This Government took the initiative in December 1997—the first major aviation state to do so—of asking ICAO to assess the UK safety oversight system. The audit took place from 14–24 April, this year, and focused to a large extent on the role of the Civil Aviation Authority. The final Report, which was agreed with ICAO on 30 October, finds that the 'CAA is an appropriately organised and funded organisation ... very effective and efficient for its purpose'.

There are 28 recommendations, relatively few compared with audits of other, smaller authorities, and none questions the performance of the Authority's fundamental safety work. The Government have accepted all but two of the recommendations, which could not have been met within the current legislative structure. We have agreed an Action Plan, drawn up by the CAA, to meet the recommendations; the Plan is included in the Report.

We have also been firm advocates of the need to make the results of ICAO audits more transparent and widely available to the international aviation community and to the public at large. Today, we are happy to make the full ICAO report available on the Internet at the DETR web-site. Printed copies have been placed in the House Libraries.

The UK is one of the leaders in safety oversight, with an excellent reputation world wide. But aviation safety needs constant vigilance; that is why both the Government and the Authority were keen to open its doors to ICAO. The Government welcome the audit results and the CAA's positive response, and will be following closely the implementation of the Action Plan. I am confident that the CAA, and the UK aviation industry as a whole, has benefited from this audit.

Roads Review

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress since the Roads Review on the Targeted Programme of Improvements and the programme studies. [63666]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My noble Friend the Minister for Roads and Road Safety announced today that we are able to provide further details of the construction programme for the schemes included in our Targeted Programme of Improvements listed in A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England.

As previously stated by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Transport, on 31 July 1998, Official Report, columns 653–75, all the schemes listed in the TPI will definitely start within the next seven years, subject only to the completion of any outstanding statutory procedures.

For those schemes where all the statutory procedures have been completed, the following are the planned start of works dates. Final confirmation of individual start dates within each year will be subject to the satisfactory completion of the necessary contract process.

2000–01

A1: Willowburn—Denwick

A6: Great Glen Bypass

A27: Polegate Bypass

A41: Aston Clinton Bypass

A43: Silverstone Bypass

A43: Whitfield Turn—Brackley Hatch Improvement

A1033: Hedon Road, Hull Improvement

2001–02

A5: Nesscliffe Bypass

A6: Clapham Bypass

A6: Rothwell—Desborough Bypass

A6: Rushden and Higham Ferrers Bypass

A10: Wadesmill-Colliers End Bypass

A11: Roudham Heath to Attleborough

A21: Lamberhurst Bypass

A23: Coulsdon Relief Road

A43: M40-B4031 Improvement

A46: Newark-Lincoln Improvement

A63: Selby Bypass

A66: Stainburn and Great Clifton Bypass

A120: Stansted-Braintree

A500: Basford/Hough/Shavington Bypass

A650: Bingley Relief Road

2002–03

M25: J 12–15 Widening

M60: J 5–8 (formerly M63 J 6–9 Widening).

We propose to take forward the following five schemes under Design, Build, Finance and Operate (DBFO) contracts. These provide bidders with the flexibility to decide their own start dates as a means of producing better value for money. In line with our new objectives for Trunk Roads the proposed payment mechanisms for these schemes will incentivise efficient road operation and will include rewarding improved safety and good service to buses and lorries. We will further keep under review the scope for additional public private partnerships to implement the TPI.

The DBFO Schemes are:

Contract Award Date

2002–03

A1(M): Ferrybridge to Hook Moor

A1(M): Wetherby to Walshford.

The following three schemes, which we propose taking forward under DBFO contracts, are still subject to statutory procedures. The next statutory procedures for these schemes, together with the planned dates, are:

1999–2000

A249: Iwade-Queenborough Improvement (Public Inquiry)

2000–01

A2: Bean-Cobham Widening Phase 2 (Public Consultation)

A2: A2/A282 Dartford Improvement (Order Publication).

I am not yet in a position to announce the final start of works dates for the remaining schemes listed in the TPI. I am however able to announce the next statutory procedure for the remaining schemes where applicable.

1998–99

A303: Stonehenge (Public Consultation)

1999–2000

A6: Alvaston (Order Publication)

A34: Chieveley/M4 J 13 Improvement (Order Publication—revised CPO)

2000–01

A2: Bean-Cobham Widening Phase 1 (Public Consultation)

A500: City Road/Stoke Road Junctions (Order Publication)

2001–02

A5: Weeford-Fazeley Improvement (Order Publication)

A14: Rookery Crossroads Grade Separated Junction (Order Publication)

A421: Great Barford Bypass (Order Publication).

At the same time as the TPI was published, a further seven schemes were listed which were not sufficiently advanced to be considered for the TPI but which are to be progressed through their statutory procedures and, if endorsed as a result of the Regional Planning Guidance procedure process, will be taken forward without delay, subject only to the availability of funds. They are, with dates of the next statutory procedure:

1999–2000

A30: Bodmin-Indian Queens Improvement (Public Consultation)

2000–01

A11: Attleborough Bypass (Public Consultation)

A11: Fiveways-Thetford Improvement (Public Consultation)

A63: Melton Grade Separated Junction (Order Publication)

2001–02

A45/A46: Tollbar End Improvement (Public Consultation)

A57/A628: Mottram-Tintwistle Bypass (Order Publication)

A66: Temple Sowerby Bypass and Improvement at Winderwath (Order Publication).

In A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England we also proposed a programme of studies to address the most urgent problems on the Trunk Road Network not addressed by schemes in the TPI. My Department is today beginning a consultation exercise with Regional Planning Bodies to agree the study programme and to seek views in particular on the timing of the studies. The provisional programme of studies is as follows:

Tranche one multi-modal studies: West Midlands to North West Conurbation; London Orbital; South West Yorkshire Motorway box; Tyneside; West Midlands Area; Access to Hastings; London to South West and South Wales; North-South Movements in East Midlands; and South East Manchester.

Work to begin in spring 1999.

Tranche two multi-modal studies: Cambridge to Huntingdon, A453 (M1-Nottingham); Southampton to Folkestone; Hull; London to South Midlands; West Midlands to Nottingham; London to Reading.

The start date for these studies will depend on the progress of tranche one studies in each region.

Roads-based studies: A1 Bramham to Barton; Norwich to Great Yarmouth; A5 Shrewsbury to Welsh Border; A38 Derby Junctions; M1 Junction 19; A3 Hindhead; Deeside Park Junctions; M40/A46 Longbridge roundabout; A419 Blunsdon; A66 Safety study.

We intend to begin these within the next two years.

A copy of the consultation document will be placed in the Library.

Right to Buy

Ms Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will announce the results of the consultation exercise on the changes to the right to buy maximum discount. [63772]

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will announce the results of the consultation exercise on the changes to the right to buy maximum discount. [63807]

Ms Armstrong: We intend the Right to Buy scheme to continue, and that eligible tenants should continue to buy at substantial discounts. The annual cost of the scheme to the taxpayer is currently around £400 million a year at net present value. Tenants are, and will continue to be, eligible to claim up to 60 per cent. discount on a house and 70 per cent. discount on a flat, but we want to provide value for money to the taxpayer so the maximum cash limit of £50,000 will be reduced.

We announced plans on 28 July 1998, Official Report, columns 124–25, to reduce the limit to a fairer level which reflected more closely the actual cost of buying a local authority home in each of the nine English regions. The consultation period ended on 30 September. We had 197 responses. The great majority of these welcomed the proposal to reduce the level of discount.

Today the Housing (Right to Buy) (Maximum Discount) Order 1998, SI 1998 2997 has been laid before Parliament for approval.

Subject to Parliamentary approval, the change will come into force on 11 February 1999. For anyone applying to buy on or after that date, the maximum cash limits on discounts available under the Right to Buy, the preserved Right to Buy and voluntary sales of council housing will range from £38,000 in London and the South East to £22,000 in the North East.

The limits are based on 70 per cent. of the average value of local authority houses and flats in each region, and 65 per cent. in London where pressure on social housing is currently greatest.

The Right to Buy scheme was reviewed as part of the Housing Comprehensive Spending Review. We are strongly committed to promoting sustainable home ownership so the Right to Buy scheme will still provide tenants with the opportunity to buy at generous discounts.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the President of the Council how many people in her Department are currently on secondment from private companies; and if she will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62825]

Mrs. Beckett: None of the current staff of my department is on secondment from a private company.

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the President of the Council if she will list the special advisers in her Department and the issues on which they specialise; and to what level they have been security cleared. [62834]

Mrs. Beckett: The Special Advisers in my Department are Ms Sheila Watson and Ms Nicci Russell. They support me on the full range of issues for which I am responsible. It would be inappropriate to give details about their individual levels of security clearance.

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the President of the Council if she will list (a) the (i) task forces, (ii) review panels and (iii) advisory groups her Office has, (b) the remit of each and (c) the members of each together with their principal employment and their level of remuneration. [62807]

Mrs. Beckett: My department has no task forces, review panels, or advisory groups.

HEALTH

Ritalin

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide figures for the last five years relating to the prescribing on the NHS of the drug Ritalin to treat children with attention deficit disorder. [62975]

Mr. Milburn: The number of National Health Service prescription items dispensed in the community and the net ingredient cost for methylphenidate hydrochloride are given in the table. Information about prescriptions dispensed in hospitals are not available centrally.

Methylphenidate hydrochloride NHS prescription items and net ingredient cost dispensed in the community England 1993 to 1997

Year	Prescription items (thousands)	Net ingredient cost (£000)
1993	3.5	25.7
1994	6.0	52.3
1995	14.7	253.0
1996	47.7	811.7
1997	92.1	1,636.5

Notes:

1. The data are from the Prescription Cost Analysis system and cover all NHS prescriptions for methylphenidate hydrochloride dispensed by community pharmacists and dispensing doctors in England. Methylphenidate hydrochloride is the approved non-proprietary name for Ritalin.
2. The net ingredient cost (NIC) is the basic cost of a drug. This cost does not take account of discounts, dispensing costs, fees or prescription charges income.
3. Total NHS prescriptions include prescriptions originating not only from general practitioners but also from hospital doctors where these are dispensed in the community. Also included are prescriptions written in Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man but dispensed in England.
4. It is assumed that the majority of prescriptions for methylphenidate hydrochloride relate to the treatment of children with attention deficit disorder, which is currently the only licensed indication of this drug. However, a small number of prescriptions may relate to the treatment of patients with narcolepsy (a licensed indication of the drug in the 1980s).

Operating Theatre Practitioners

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning a compulsory registration system for operating theatre practitioners; and if he will make a statement. [62115]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 3 December 1998]: We have received a representation from the Association of Anaesthetists of Great Britain and Ireland concerning a proposed compulsory registration system for operating theatre practitioners. The representation is now being considered.

Hospital Discharges

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which UK health authorities are meeting their target levels for the number of delayed discharges. [62976]

Mr. Milburn: There are no national targets levels for the number of delayed discharges for health authorities. Health authorities may set targets, but these are locally managed.

Established good practice in hospital discharge seeks to balance the needs and wishes of patients and their carers with the requirement to make the most effective use of available resources. It is in no-one's interest for patients to stay in hospital for longer than they need to and hospital discharge procedures need to be sensitive to individual needs. Delays in discharge can reflect a variety of factors and these will vary between health authorities, depending on a variety of factors.

Children's Homes (East Sussex)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private sector children's homes in East Sussex have been visited by social services inspectors in the last six months. [63032]

Mr. Hutton: In the last six months East Sussex County Council Inspection Unit has visited the two private children's homes in East Sussex registered under the Children Act 1989.

Widowers' Pensions

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost of backdating the pension arrangements for widowers of female doctors so that they are in line with the pension arrangements for widows of male doctors. [62509]

Mr. Milburn: The capitalised cost of backdating widowers' pensions to 1972 based on 1994–95 salaries has been estimated at around £350 million.

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will amend the pension rights of the widowers of female doctors to make them equivalent to the pension arrangements made for widows of male doctors. [62510]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service pension scheme provides the widowers of female doctors with the same pension rights as widows of male doctors.

Harefield Hospital

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he met Professor Sir Magdi Yacoub to discuss the future of Harefield Hospital; and if he will make a statement. [63267]

Mr. Milburn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met Professor Sir Magdi Yacoub on Tuesday 1 December 1998 to talk about services in West London and the regulation of clinical perfusionists. The Department recognises and pays tribute to the work undertaken by Professor Sir Magdi Yacoub and his colleagues at Harefield Hospital. My right hon. Friend gave Sir Magdi his assurance of the Government's determination not to allow planning blight to set in while the longer term reconfiguration of services was considered. The consequences of any reconfiguration of services would be properly explored. Any service changes at Harefield Hospital will be subject to full public consultation.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter dated 2 November concerning constituents: reference POH(2)5608/16. [63177]

Mr. Milburn: I replied to my hon. Friend today.

Councillors

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the local authorities which have informed him about the number and percentage of men and women councillors; if he will give the number and percentage of men and women councillors in each case; and if he will list those local authorities which have not informed him. [63254]

Ms Jowell: Copies of the information requested have been placed in the Library.

DEFENCE

Service Women (Compensation)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the costs of compensating servicewomen who left the services as a consequence of pregnancy (a) in each year since 1990 and (b) in the coming financial year. [62180]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Compensation payments to Servicewomen who left the Armed Forces because of pregnancy began in August 1992. Payments followed applications to industrial tribunals after the High Court ruled that to discharge women from the Armed Forces on the grounds of pregnancy was in breach of the European Equal Treatment Directive. The following amounts in compensation were awarded in each of the financial years shown:

Financial Year	Amount (£)
1992–1993	1,653,931
1993–1994	6,980,274
1994–1995	35,611,282
1995–1996	11,762,089
1996–1997	2,803,571
1997–1998	948,572
1998–1999 (to 30 November 1998)	520,063

No further compensation will be paid in the remainder of 1998–1999 or in 1999–2000, as all claims have now been settled.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the special advisers in his Department and the issues on which they specialise; and to what level they have been security cleared. [62842]

Mr. George Robertson: The two Special Advisers employed by my Department are Alasdair McGowan and Bernard Gray.

They advise me on the full range of issues for which I am responsible. They are subject to the usual security clearance arrangements.

Gulf War Veterans

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information is made available to doctors treating Gulf War veterans in relation to any exposure they may have had to materials which may have been toxic or hazardous, with particular reference to depleted uranium. [63033]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Any Gulf veteran who is concerned that his or her health has been adversely affected by Service during the Gulf conflict, including possible exposure to depleted uranium (DU), is entitled to seek a referral to the MOD's Medical Assessment Programme (MAP) for a full medical assessment. During this assessment, MAP patients receive a standard set of tests and are asked by the examining MAP physician to provide detailed information about possible factors, including DU, to which they may have been exposed during the Gulf conflict. Following the assessment, the examining physician will write to the doctor who referred the patient to the programme, to provide diagnostic information and recommend any appropriate treatment. It is then that doctor's responsibility to take forward and monitor the treatment as he or she would for any other patient. For veterans who have left the Armed Forces, their doctor will normally be a GP and any recommended treatment will therefore be carried out within the NHS.

In consultation with the Department of Health and the health departments of the Welsh, Scottish and Northern Ireland Offices, the Ministry of Defence has produced an information pack with the intention of providing General Practitioners and other health professionals with information which they may find useful in dealing with Gulf veterans' health concerns. This pack includes summaries of what is known about a number of possible factors to which veterans may have been exposed during their service in the Gulf, including DU. It also includes an overview of research which has been carried out in areas related to Gulf veterans' illnesses, together with a bibliography of key papers. The information pack has been placed on the MOD's internet site and is available in hard copy on request. My Department is currently considering how best to ensure further than this information reaches its target audience. A copy of the pack has been placed in the Library of the House.

Scammel Commander Tank Transporters

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Scammel Commander tank transporters loaded with Challenger I and Challenger II tanks meet the regulatory requirements in (a) Holland and (b) Germany; how many infringements have been reported in 1998; and if he will make a statement. [62072]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 8 December 1998]: Formal clearance is sought from both the Dutch and German authorities when moving these vehicles along specified routes and at agreed times. There have been no infringements of the requirements.

Sennybridge Army Field Training Centre

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) chemicals used (i) for ground maintenance and (ii) in the training of troops in chemical warfare and (b) training activities that took place on each day between 1 and 9 September at Sennybridge Army Field Training Centre. [62654]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 9 December 1998]: A number of non-toxic chemicals are used at Sennybridge Army Field Training Centre (AFTC) for the purposes of ground maintenance and training troops in chemical defence.

The approved chemicals used for ground maintenance are ROUNDUP, GARALON, and occasionally ASULOX.

During exercises to train troops for defence against chemical warfare, white smoke, CS Gas (Orthoclorobenzlidenmalononitrile), Chemical Agent Training Mixture Polyethyleneglycol 300, and Amyl Acetate are used, the latter to prove respirators prior to use.

The Nuclear Biological and Chemical Battle Run, the area of Sennybridge Training Area used for training in chemical defence, was used by 3 Commando Brigade, the Royal Marines for training on 2, 3, 4, 5 and 8 September 1998. The remainder of the training centre was used for a number of infantry patrolling, live firing, and other tactical training exercises over the period in question.

Missiles (China)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the acquisition by China of land-mobile intercontinental ballistic missiles and long-range cruise missiles was taken into account in the Strategic Defence Review. [62921]

Mr. George Robertson: Yes. These issues were fully considered in the Strategic Defence Review (Cm 3999) published in July 1998.

Regiments and Bands

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which regiments will be available to participate in the ceremonies for the opening of the Scottish Parliament; and what plans he has to ensure prominence is given to Scottish regiments and bands based in Scotland in the procession and ceremonies. [63304]

Mr. George Robertson: Initial planning has only recently begun for the ceremonies to mark the opening of the Scottish Parliament and it is not yet possible to confirm which regiments will participate. However, the 1st Battalion The Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders and the 1st Battalion The Black Watch will be assigned to public duties in Scotland during the summer of 1999 and it is likely that the soldiers who take part in the opening ceremony will be drawn from these regiments. It is anticipated that music for the occasion will be provided by Scottish military bands.

Armed Forces Pay Review Body

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the terms of reference for the Armed Forces Pay Review Body. [63669]

Mr. George Robertson: The Terms of Reference for the Armed Forces Pay Review Body have been revised, as follows, to reflect the key considerations of the Comprehensive Spending Review White Paper.

The role of the Armed Forces Pay Review Body is to provide independent advice to the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Defence on the remuneration and charges for members of the Naval, Military and Air Forces of the Crown.

In reaching its recommendations, the Review Body is to have regard to the following considerations:

the need to recruit, retain and motivate suitably able and qualified people taking account of the particular circumstances of service life;

Government policies for improving the public services, including the requirement on the Ministry of Defence to meet the output targets for the delivery of departmental services;

the funds available to the Ministry of Defence as set out in the Government's departmental expenditure limits; the Government's inflation target.

The Review Body shall have regard for the need for the pay of the Armed Forces to be broadly comparable with pay levels in civilian life.

The Review Body shall, in reaching its recommendations, take account of the evidence submitted to it by the Government and others. The Review Body may also consider other specific issues as the occasion arises.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Hinduja Group

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what grant applications his Department has received from the Hinduja group of companies since 1 May 1997; and what grants have been paid. [62239]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 3 December 1998]: We have no record of the Department receiving any application for grant from the Hinduja group.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant [illegible] answer to the hon. Member for Stratford-on-A[illegible] (Mr. Maples) of 7 December 1998, Official Report, columns 70–71, for what reasons the Minister of State was required to return from Liverpool to London for an urgent meeting. [63308]

Mr. Mandelson: The Minister of State was required to attend an unscheduled meeting with the Prime Minister and the then President of the Board of Trade.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 on which Ministers in his Department have taken flights in chartered private aircraft; what were the relevant origins and destinations; what was the cost to public funds on each occasion; and what were the reasons such a mode of travel was authorised. [63336]

Mr. Mandelson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Stratford-on-Avon (Mr. Maples) on 19 November 1998, Official Report, columns 889–90.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much money allocated to the United Kingdom for specific Objective I projects since 1994, has been (a) returned and (b) renegotiated for later use, because of the failure of agreed projects to materialise in the agreed time. [63154]

Mrs. Roche: All structural funds money allocated to the United Kingdom under Objective 1 since 1994 has been to programmes which cover the period 1994–99. No money from these programmes has been returned or renegotiated for later use.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on (a) the definition of the conditions laid down by the European Union in respect of Objective I structural funding, requiring an undertaking by the recipient member state Government to a substantial commitment to substantial spending over the whole period in delivering an agreed programme within the Community Support Framework and (b) the United Kingdom Government's interpretation of that definition. [63156]

Mrs. Roche: The European Union structural funds contribute only a proportion of the costs of individual projects. It is for Member States to ensure that matching funding is in place. In the United Kingdom, this responsibility lies with the end beneficiary.

Additionality is also a requirement of the structural funds regulations, and must be verified in respect of the whole territory covered by each Objective within each Member State. This means that UK expenditure on activities eligible for co-financing from the structural funds has to be maintained at least at the same level during the current programming period of 1994–99 as in the previous programming period. The United Kingdom has been able to demonstrate this to the Commission's satisfaction on an annual basis.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will announce further decisions on outstanding applications to build new gas-fired power stations. [63809]

Mr. Battle: I have today announced the following decisions:

Coryton Energy Company Limited (InterGen (UK) Ltd.)

A direction has been given under section 14(3) of the Energy Act 1976 that the proposed 750 MW gas-fired generating station at Coryton in Essex may only proceed subject to a condition limiting the use of gas to 10,668 million kilowatt hours (364 million therms) a year. The station already has consent under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 and deemed planning permission.

Medway Power Limited (AES Electric Ltd.)

Consent has been given under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 for a 20 MW oil-fired black start facility at the Medway power station in Kent. The facility has also today been given deemed planning permission and (as an oil-fired station) clearance under section 14 of the Energy Act 1976.

Keadby Developments Limited (Scottish Hydro-Electric plc.)

A direction has been given under section 14(3) of the Energy Act 1976 to prevent the building of a 770 MW generating station to be fuelled by natural gas, at Keadby in Lincolnshire.

Barking Power Ltd. (Thames Power Ltd.)

Section 36 consent has not been granted for an open cycle gas turbine generating station (130 MW) and black start facility (24 MW) at the Barking power station. The application will be put on hold unless an interested party satisfies the Secretary of State that it should be determined at this stage.

AES Partington Ltd. (AES Electric Ltd.)

Section 36 consent has not been granted for a 380 MW combined cycle gas turbine generating station at Partington, Old Trafford, Greater Manchester. The application will be put on hold unless an interested party satisfies the Secretary of State that it should be determined at this stage.

InterGen (UK) Ltd.

Section 36 consent has not been granted for a 800 MW combined gas turbine generating station at Spalding in Lincolnshire. The application will be put on hold unless an interested party satisfies the Secretary of State that it should be determined at this stage.

These decisions have been taken in accordance with the policy set out in the White Paper entitled "Conclusions of The Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation and Government response to fourth and fifth Reports of the Trade and Industry Committee" (Cm 4071). In the case of the decision on Coryton, the partial clearance arose from the unique circumstances and their impact on the interests of the developer.

In cases where section 36 consent has not been granted or a section 14(3) direction given, the Secretary of State would be prepared to review the position, if requested, when the stricter consents policy announced in the White Paper is relaxed.

Decisions on other applications under consideration will be announced in due course.

Copies of the relevant Press Notices and letters are being placed in the Library of the House.

Pesticides

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what studies his Department carried out into the impact of a pesticides tax on the costs of small and medium-sized distributors of such products. [63268]

Mr. Battle: My Department has been closely involved with the extensive research work which DETR has commissioned on the feasibility of an economic instrument to assist in delivering the Government's pesticides minimisation policy. The research has included assessment of the effects of such an instrument on the competitiveness of distributors.

My Department has not carried out any separate studies, but has asked the British Agrochemicals Association to work with the UK Agricultural Supply Trade Association, to provide information on the structure of the industry in order to further assess the impact on distributors and manufacturers.

Devolution

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will list (a) by programme over £50,000 and (b) the total spending by his Department in Scotland on the identifiable spending areas detailed in Table 7.6A of the Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis 1997–98 (Cmnd 3601); which of these programmes will fall solely or jointly under the responsibility of the Scottish Parliament; and what arrangements are in place to transfer control of funds for these projects to the Scottish Executive or Parliament; [63282]

(2) how much is spent annually by his Department on research programmes in Scotland; and what proportion of this funding will be transferred to the Scottish Parliament after devolution; [63281]

(3) what assessment he has made of the programmes which it will be ultra vires for his Department to fund or have sole responsibility for after devolution; if he will list these programmes; and if he will make a statement. [63283]

Mr. Mandelson: Under the terms of the Scotland Act 1998, the Scottish Ministers will assume responsibility for a range of devolved functions which will in part depend on secondary legislation which has yet to be passed. My Department is reviewing its programmes, including the research components, in the light of the Scotland Act. It is too early to say to what extent programme expenditure which is currently administered by the Department may relate to functions which will transfer to Scottish Ministers. Work is taking place to establish the extent of any such expenditure and to assess the need for any consequential transfer of funds to the Scottish Ministers. For the total spending by the Department in Scotland, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury to the hon. Member for North Tayside (Mr. Swinney) on 4 November 1998, Official Report, column 615.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Women's Prisons

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what new guidelines he plans to issue in respect of women prisoners applying for admission to the mother and baby unit in Holloway Prison; [63171]

(2) what are the current guidelines for women prisoners to apply for admission to the mother and baby units in (a) Styal, (b) New Hall and (c) Askham Grange prisons. [63170]

Mr. George Howarth: The women's policy group of the Prison Service are conducting a review of principles, policies and procedures for mothers and babies in prison. The review will be completed by 31 March 1999. The review, with recommendations for a future strategy, will be submitted to the Director General by 31 March 1999. This review will be published. A copy of the current guidance is available in the Library.

Prisoners (Repatriation)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to review procedures for the repatriation of prisoners serving a sentence in England and Wales to their country of origin; and if he will make a statement; [63050]

(2) how many foreign prisoners were repatriated to their country of origin in (a) 1995, (b) 1996, (c) 1997 and (d) the first nine months of 1998; and how many in each case were repatriated to the Republic of Ireland. [63051]

Mr. George Howarth: Details of prisoners who have been transferred from England and Wales to foreign jurisdictions under the Council of Europe Convention on the Transfer of Sentenced Persons over the period in question, and, of these, the numbers transferred to the Republic of Ireland, are set out in the table.

No prisoners were transferred from England and Wales under the Commonwealth Scheme for the transfer of Convicted Offenders or the United Kingdom's bilateral prisoner transfer agreements with Egypt, Thailand and Hong Kong.

Procedures for handling applications from prisoners in England and Wales who wish to serve out their sentence in their own country, including the criteria and arrangements for their removal, are kept under regular review.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisoners serving sentences of imprisonment in England and Wales were transferred under the Council of Europe Convention on the transfer of sentenced prisoners during (a) 1995, (b) 1996, (c) 1997 and (d) 1998 to date; and how many of these prisoners emanated from the Irish Republic; [63039]

(2) how many foreign nationals serving sentences of imprisonment in England and Wales are nationals of countries to which repatriation of prisoners from the United Kingdom may take place under the terms of the Council of Europe Convention on the transfer of sentenced prisoners. [63037]

Mr. George Howarth: The numbers of prisoners transferred from England and Wales to foreign jurisdictions under the Council of Europe Convention on the Transfer of Sentenced Persons, over the period in question, and of those, the numbers transferred to the Republic of Ireland, are set out in the table.

No prisoners were transferred from England and Wales under the Commonwealth Scheme for the Transfer of Convicted Offenders or the United Kingdom's bilateral prisoner transfer agreements with Egypt, Thailand and Hong Kong.

On 30 September 1998, the number of sentenced prisoners held in establishments in England and Wales recorded as being nationals of the 41 countries to which repatriation from the United Kingdom is possible under the terms of the Council of Europe Convention on the Transfer of Sentenced Persons was 1,424.

Prison Offences

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 41, if the figures for the total number of offences referred to the police for prosecution by prison governors in each year contained in table 2 are directly comparable; for what reason no figures are available for 1993; what assessment he has made of the increase in the number of offences in prison; and if he will make a statement. [63084]

Mr. George Howarth: The figures quoted in my response of 9 November are not directly comparable, as information for 1992–95 relates to cases referred by prison governors to the police which resulted in a prosecution, while figures for 1996 and 1997 relate to the number of cases referred to the police for prosecution but where the outcome is not known.

Comparable, revised figures regarding the number of cases referred to the police by prison governors but where it is not known if a prosecution resulted are given in the table.

Prisons (Costs)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the net operating cost figure for contracted out prisons per place per annum which is contained in the HM Prison Service Annual report for the last financial year was calculated; and if he will make a statement. [63049]

Mr. George Howarth: The statistical information about contracted-out prison costs shown on page 56 of the Prison Service Annual Report for 1997–98 was calculated by dividing the "net operating costs" by either the "average baseline certified normal accommodation" or the "average prisoner population". The data shown for individual prisons listed—Blakenhurst, Buckley Hall, Doncaster, and The Wolds—are correct. Unfortunately, the summary figures shown have been distorted by including the average Certified Normal Accommodation and average prisoner population data for the contracted prisons—Altcourse, Parc, and Lowdham Grange—which opened towards the end of the operational year. This error has also carried forward into the summary table shown on page 55 of the Report. I have arranged for corrected copies of these tables to be placed in the Library.

Despite these errors, the contracted-out prisons continue to provide good value for money. But, perhaps more importantly, the figures shown that the gap between the contracted-out prisons' costs and public sector prisons' costs continues to reduce.

Former Secretary of State for Wales

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much police time was expended investigating the complaint of the right hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) of assault and robbery in Brixton on the evening of 26 October, broken down by rank of officer involved. [62875]

Kate Hoey: The Commissioner tells me that some 656 hours of local officers' time were spent on the investigation, as set out in the table:

	Hours
Detective Constable/Police Constable	402
Detective Inspector	160
Inspector	14
Detective Chief Inspector	80
Total	656

Other, senior officers were also involved with the case from time to time, but it is not practicable to calculate the duration of their involvement.

Coldingley

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what loans Wackenhut has received from HM Prison Service in connection with prison workshops at HMP Coldingley; and if such loans have been repaid; [62928]

(2) what plans there are for the repayment of loans and debts owed to the Prison Service in respect of workshops at HMP Coldingley; [62925]

(3) if Wackenhut have paid HM Prison Service for public utilities they have used at HMP Coldingley since November 1997. [62829]

Mr. George Howarth: A loan of £105,000 was made to Wackenhut (UK) Ltd. in April 1998, of which £52,500 has been repaid. The Prison Service has asked for immediate repayment of the outstanding amount, together with amounts relating to utilities costs, which are payable by Wackenhut under the terms of the contract.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the efficiency of operation of laundry, metal workshop and sign-making facilities at HMP Coldingley since 1997. [62926]

Mr. George Howarth: The Prison Service is awaiting the production of audited accounts by the contractor, Wackenhut (UK) Ltd. to enable a full assessment to be made.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Wackenhut have paid HM Prison Service for plant and machinery used by them at workshops at HM Prison Coldingley since November 1997. [62930]

Mr. George Howarth: The contract with Wackenhut (UK) Ltd. for the management of the Coldingley Prison industries does not require a payment from the company for industrial plant and machinery.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what requests Wackenhut have made for renegotiation of the contract for providing workshops at HMP Coldingley. [62927]

Mr. George Howarth: Wackenhut (UK) Ltd. have expressed interest in re-negotiating the terms of the contract. The Prison Service is considering this.

Foreign Prisoners

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals were serving sentences of imprisonment in England and Wales at the most recent available date. [63038]

Mr. George Howarth: The latest available provisional information is for 30 September 1998. On that date, there were 3,545 sentenced foreign nationals (3,206 males and 339 females) in prisons in England and Wales.

Information on the number of sentenced foreign nationals in prisons in England and Wales is published in "Prison statistics England and Wales" (Table 6.4 of the 1997 edition, cm 4017), a copy of which is in the Library.

Common Criminal Justice System (European Union)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the steps taken within the European Union to promote a common criminal justice system; and if he will make a statement. [62639]

Kate Hoey: Neither the Commission nor any of the member states has tabled formal legislative proposals for a common criminal justice system in the European Union. The proposals which have been made are contained in a research study entitled "Corpus Juris", published in 1997 under the aegis of the European Commission, which recommends common penal rules and procedures to protect the financial interests of the European Community, and also the creation of an office of European Public Prosecutor. A further study is now being carried out for the Commission on the feasibility of these proposals.

Although the Government fully share the objective of fighting fraud against the Community budget, we disagree with many of the recommendations of the "Corpus Juris" study. None of the recommendations have been submitted to the Council of the European Union, but if this were to happen, unanimous agreement would be needed for them to be adopted and come into effect. The Government see no prospect that it could support proposals for a common criminal justice system.

Local Crime Strategies

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what letters or circulars have been issued by his Department to police authorities, chief constables or local police partnerships recommending what should be included in local crime and disorder strategies. [62876]

Mr. Boateng: The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 does not specify what should be included in the crime and disorder reduction strategies. This is a matter for local decision by the local authority and police, in partnership with a wide range of other bodies and in consultation with the community as a whole, based upon the priorities to emerge from local crime and disorder audits. The Home Office has, therefore, made no recommendation in this respect, although guidance dealing inter alia with the process of strategy development was issued to partnerships and other interested parties in July 1998.

Gaming Act 1968

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in response to the consultation paper on modernisation of the Gaming Act 1968. [63027]

Mr. George Howarth: We went out to consultation on 5 August on proposals to relax certain controls imposed by the Gaming Act 1968 on casino membership, advertising and jackpot machines. The consultation period ended on 21 October.

We received 37 responses, mostly in support of the proposals. We are discussing matters of detail with the industry and aim to make our intentions known in the New Year.

Crime and Disorder Act 1998

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will consult the National Association of Local Councils about the implementation of the provisions of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 as they affect town, parish and community councils in England and Wales. [62931]

Mr. Boateng: Home Office officials corresponded with, and talked to, representatives of the National Association of Local Councils during the early Parliamentary stages of the Crime and Disorder Act.

I would, of course, welcome the opportunity to further discuss the implications of the Act with representatives from the National Association of Local Councils, if they so wish.

Prison Visits

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the assisted prison visits scheme. [63768]

Mr. Straw: The assisted prison visits scheme exists to help prisoners maintain contact with their close relatives and partners. The scheme was established in 1988. To qualify for assistance in meeting the costs of travel to and from the prison, the visitor must be in receipt of a low income benefit as administered by the Benefits Agency.

The scheme does not distinguish between married and non-married partners, but financial assistance is extended to same-sex partners only at the expense of support for a prisoner's family members. In consequence, some prisoners, including young offenders, do not receive visits from parents or close relatives.

The Government are keen to encourage all prisoners to maintain family ties, and believe that same-sex partners should be treated fairly by the Prison Service. Therefore, both partners and relatives will, in future, be able to receive assistance with the cost of visiting, within the qualifying conditions of the scheme.

Devolution

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much is spent annually by his Department on research programmes in Scotland; and what proportion of this funding will be transferred to the Scottish Parliament after devolution. [63290]

Mr. Straw: The principal responsibilities of the Home Office in respect of the police, probation, fire and prison services, and in respect of the criminal justice system, relate only to England and Wales. Almost all the research conducted by the Home Office concerns, in one way or another, the operation in future of these services and systems in England and Wales. In view of the separate Scottish legal system, research in these areas has been the responsibility of the Scottish Office and the question of a transfer does not arise.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) by programme over £50,000 and (b) the total spending by his Department in Scotland on the identifiable spending areas detailed in Table 7.6A of the Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis 1997–98 (Cmnd 3601); which of these programmes will fall solely or jointly under the responsibility of the Scottish Parliament; and what arrangements are in place to transfer control of funds for these projects to the Scottish Executive or Parliament. [63291]

Mr. Straw: Work is in train to identify areas in which it might be appropriate to effect a transfer of funds. I will make a statement in the Official Report when this work has been completed.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the programmes which it will be ultra vires for his Department to fund or have sole responsibility for after devolution; if he will list these programmes; and if he will make a statement. [63292]

Mr. Straw: The position is being examined in the light of the Scotland Act 1998 and work is in train to identify cases where it may be appropriate to transfer functions. I will make a statement in the Official Report when the work reaches a conclusion.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Minimum Wage

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate she has made of the number of people in Northern Ireland who will benefit from the introduction of the minimum wage. [62261]

Mr. Ingram: Current estimates indicate that some 57,000 employees in employment in Northern Ireland will benefit directly from the introduction of the national minimum wage in April 1999.

Floyd and Palmer (Judicial Review)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will place a copy of the judgment in the judicial review case of Floyd and Palmer in the Library; and if she will ensure that the provision of reading and writing materials for suspects held under counter or anti-terrorist legislation is dealt with in the review of legislation presently in progress. [62264]

Mr. Ingram: I have made arrangements for the Lord Chief Justice's Judgment in the Judicial Review case of Damien Floyd and Pauline Palmer to be placed in the Library of the House today. There is no statutory requirement for the provision of reading and writing materials for detainees held under the emergency legislation. However, the consultation paper on new counter-terrorism legislation will open for discussion the general regime for the detention of terrorist suspects, and interested parties will have an opportunity to comment.

Compensation (Wrongful Convictions)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been paid during each of the last 10 years in compensation to persons wrongly convicted; and what was (a) the highest, (b) the lowest and (c) the average sum awarded. [62267]

Mr. Ingram: During the relevant period, the total amounts of compensation paid to persons whose convictions have been quashed were, by year:

Year	Amount awarded (£)
1993	75,000.00
1994	25,000.00
1995	650,000.00
1997	263,969.50
1998	82,936.21

Only one application for compensation has been paid in full, amounting to £456,905.71. It is not possible, therefore, to provide information about the highest, lowest and average amounts awarded.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps she has taken to make available the published guidelines on compensation for miscarriages of justice to interested parties. [62268]

Mr. Ingram: The guidelines on compensation for miscarriages of justice are automatically made available to the legal representatives of all persons the Secretary of State has determined to be eligible for such compensation. They are also available on request to other interested parties.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people whose convictions have been quashed over each of the last 10 years have (a) applied for and (b) received compensation. [62266]

Mr. Ingram: (a) The numbers of persons who have applied for statutory compensation after their convictions had been quashed during the relevant period were, by year:

Year	Applicants
1997	1

(b) All of these persons have been paid compensation in full or have been paid interim amounts.

Designated Police Stations

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will (a) list designated police stations and their approximate location, (b) indicate the number of interview rooms currently available in each and (c) estimate and break down the cost of fitting one room in each station with video recording equipment, indicating capital costs for equipment, building works (alterations), installation and running costs for the first year and subsequent years. [62262]

Mr. Ingram: Designated police stations and the number of interview rooms available in each are shown.

Division	Station	Number Interview Rooms
A	Musgrave Street, Belfast	2
B	Grosvenor Road, Belfast	3

The cost of fitting out one room is broken down as follows:

Capital costs for equipment:
1 x video interview recording system	4,400
2 x fixed colour cameras	700
Building works (alterations):
Electrical work	3,000
Building work	1,550
Contingencies @ 10 per cent.	450
Installation:
16 hours labour @ £24.30 per hour	389
Cabling, brackets, domes	300
Estimated total:	10,789

Note:
Maintenance is estimated at £400 per annum together with the cost of video tapes at £6.00 each.

Judicial Review (Holding Centres)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what response has been made by the RUC Chief Constable to the request of the Independent Commissioner for the Holding Centres that he be given copies of court papers served in the course of judicial review cases involving the holding centres. [62265]

Mr. Ingram: This matter was raised in the Independent Commissioner's fifth Annual Report, with the recommendation that the applicant be ordered to serve the Independent Commissioner with the appropriate Court papers. As there is no provision in the Rules of the Supreme Court to allow for this, it was suggested that the Commissioner take the matter up directly with the Chief Constable. I am advised that the Chief Constable has not received any request from the Commissioner to be given copies of court papers in the circumstances described.

Millennium (Emergency Cover)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans her Department has to contract with the armed services to provide emergency cover over the millennium period; and what estimate she has made of the cost of that cover. [62571]

Mr. Ingram: At present no Government Department can have firm plans involving military support over the millennium period because these will need to be considered in a co-ordinated manner and priorities identified if the demand is too great. The Ministry of Defence have invited Departments to identify by Easter 1999 predictable demands. By then most Departmental plans should be advanced enough to enable potential problems, which may require military aid, to be identified.

At this stage no estimate can be made of likely costs.

Ministerial E-mail Address

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is her e-mail address. [62877]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The E-mail address for the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland is mm@nics.gov.uk.

Lagan Valley Regional Park

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many planning applications of a residential and commercial nature have been made in the Lagan Valley Regional Park, within the Borough of Lisburn, since the commencement of the Lagan Valley Regional Park Local Plan; and how many of these applications have received planning permission. [62904]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Planning Service under its Chief Executive, Mr. T. W. Stewart. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from T. W. Stewart to Mr. Jeffrey Donaldson, dated 10 December 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Question about planning permissions granted for residential and commercial developments in the Lagan Valley Regional Park, within the Borough of Lisburn, since the commencement of the Lagan Valley Regional Park Local Plan.

Details of the number of applications submitted since the Plan was adopted on 13 March 1995 are set out in the table below.

Type of Application	No. of Applications	No. Approved	No. Refused	No. Pending
Industrial-Commercial	15	14	—	1
Housing development (more than one dwelling)	8	5	1	2
Single dwellings	9	6	3	—
Extensions to dwellings	29	27	2	—

You may wish to note that the vast majority of those applications approved are located within the Belfast Urban Area of the Park or in existing settlements.

I do hope this provides all the information you require.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the special advisers in her Department and the issues on which they specialise; and to what level they have been security cleared. [62848]

Marjorie Mowlam: My Special Advisers are Nigel Warner and Andrew Lappin and they advise me on the full range of issues for which I am responsible.

Special Advisers are subject to the usual security clearance arrangements. It is not appropriate to give details about particular individuals level of security clearance.

Police Complaints Procedures

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list (a) the steps she is taking to increase public confidence in police complaints procedures, (b) the measures taken to assure complainants that they may supply information confidentially and without fear of intimidation and (c) in cases where an interview is required to obtain further information, what choices are offered to a complainant with regard to (i) the time, date and location of interview, (ii) the gender of interviewer and (iii) whether a non-uniformed or civilian interviewer is preferred. [61970]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 9 December 1998]: (a) The Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998 provides for the establishment of a new office of Police Ombudsman to handle complaints against the police. The Ombudsman will have complete control of the complaints process. The Ombudsman will independently investigate all serious complaints against the police and will decide how others are to be investigated. The new system is designed to secure the confidence of both the public and the police. The Ombudsman will be appointed on 1 March 1999 and the new body will be functioning by summer 1999.

(b) Information and statements provided by complainants are confidential documents. They are disclosed only in circumstances considered necessary to the investigation and in accordance with:

(i) the RUC (Discipline and Disciplinary Appeals) Regulations 1988;

(ii) NIO Guidance to the Chief Constable on Police Complaints and Discipline Procedures;

(iii) the code and legislation dealing with disclosure in respect of criminal prosecutions;

(iv) rules relating to disclosure in civil proceedings.

If, of course, there was intimidation, then this would be grounds for a complaint.

(c1) The initial letter forwarded to the complainant by the RUC Investigating Officer usually offers an interview, at a specified date and time, at the most suitable and convenient Police Station. The letter also invites the complainant to telephone, or reply by returning a proforma in an addressed and prepaid envelope.

Should a complainant, or their solicitor, wish the interview to take place elsewhere, every effort is made to accommodate their request. Interviews can take place at the offices of the Independent Commission for Police Complaints and at other mutually acceptable locations, including solicitors' offices, homes of complainants and third parties and Church or Community Halls.

(c2) Whilst no choice is offered on gender of the interviewer, the RUC do ensure that the most appropriate Investigating Officer is appointed having regard to the circumstances of the case. In supervised cases, it is open to the Independent Commission for Police Complaints, to approve, or otherwise, the appointment of a particular officer.

(c3) The 1998 regulations require that Investigating Officers are police officers. These officers operate in plain clothes.

In future, under the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998, there will be greater opportunity for interviews at neutral venues, and by the independent investigators of the Police Ombudsman.

Fair Employment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many certificates have been issued under section 42 of the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989 in each year since its enactment. [61971]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 9 December 1998]: This information is not recorded centrally but a check of our records shows that 43 certificates have been issued, in respect of 39 individuals, under section 42 of the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1976. The table gives a breakdown by year.

Year	Number
1978	3

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate she has made of the level of benefit fraud within the social security system; and what plans she has to tackle it. [63176]

Mr. McFall: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. Chris Thompson, and I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Chris Thompson to Mr. Nigel Evans, dated 10 December 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the estimated levels of fraud within the social security system and plans to tackle such fraud.

The Social Security Agency is in the process of estimating the levels of fraud in the benefit system. The Agency is using a methodology, known as Benefit Review, which as been successfully used by the Benefits Agency to estimate the levels of fraud in Great Britain.

As regards its plans to tackle fraud the Agency is committed to minimising opportunities for fraud and abuse within the social security system. In recent years the Agency has been working even more closely with a wide range of colleagues and other parties to provide a coherent and focused effort in combating fraud and abuse. These include the Benefits Agency in Great Britain, Child Support Agency and Housing Executive in Northern Ireland as well as counterparts in the Department of Social, Community and Family Affairs in the Republic of Ireland.

The Agency is undertaking a wide range of initiatives, which mirror similar work in the Benefits Agency, designed to provide an estimate of the level of fraud within benefit systems, to secure the gateway to benefit systems and to detect and prosecute those who seek to defraud the system. This programme of initiatives is being closely monitored and updated on a regular basis to take account of new developments which may emanate from the Benefits Agency or from new Ministerial objectives. I have recently set up a new Benefit Security Directorate to provide a greater focus and to co-ordinate the programme of work.

I can assure you that the Agency will continue to seek new ways of ensuring that resources are targeted effectively at known areas of risk and that expenditure loss through fraud is kept to a minimum.

I hope this explains the position for you but I would be happy to provide any further information you require.

SCOTLAND

Millennium (Emergency Cover)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans his Department has to contract with the armed services to provide emergency cover over the millennium period; and what estimate he has made of the cost of that cover. [62574]

Mr. McLeish: The Scottish Office has no specific plans for involving the military over the millennium period. There are procedures in place, however, through the standing military aid arrangements, which would be invoked in the event of any requirement for assistance.

It is quite normal for military aid to be sought by local authorities, particularly over the winter, but as yet it is too early to identify any specific requirements which they or other bodies may have over the millennium period.

HIV-AIDS

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the cost of treatments for Aids-related conditions over the next financial year. [62529]

Mr. Galbraith: Health Boards in Scotland are expected to meet the cost of such treatments from within the general allocations of funds provided to them each year. In order to assist Boards in planning services for HIV/AIDS patients, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State recently set up an expert group to recommend treatment protocols and to estimate the numbers of HIV/AIDS patients likely to be eligible for treatment with the new anti-retroviral drugs in the next few years. The group's report should be available shortly.

Forestry

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he intends to prepare a strategy for forestry in Scotland. [63808]

Mr. Macdonald: Forestry is an important part of the rural scene in Scotland. Its importance will grow as timber production doubles over the next 15 years and Scotland's forests and woodlands become more valuable for recreation and wildlife. We believe that it is important to have a strategy for forestry in Scotland which will provide a context for forestry policies and programmes. This will ensure that forestry integrates well with other aspects of the rural economy and plays its full part in the future well-being of Scotland.

Clearly, the Scottish Executive will want to determine the form and content of a Scottish Forestry Strategy. Nevertheless, we consider that it would be helpful to prepare an issues paper which could form the basis for consultation on a strategy.

We have therefore asked the Forestry Commission to set this work in hand, in liaison with other relevant Government Departments and Agencies, with a view to publishing an issues paper early next year.

Devolution

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with his ministerial colleagues regarding the transfer of funding for United Kingdom programmes operating in Scotland where sole or joint responsibility transfers to the Scottish Parliament or Executive; if he will list the projects he has identified as being within the sole or joint competence of the Scottish Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [63302]

Mr. McLeish: Under the Scotland Act 1998, Scottish Ministers will take over the delivery of public services that currently fall within the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Scotland. In addition, devolution will bring extra responsibilities to Scotland in areas such as transport and environment. Officials are currently discussing the details, including the issue of additional transfers of funding. There may also be cases where it is agreed by all concerned that the best course is a shared programme, which continues to be funded on a UK or GB basis.

Regiments and Bands

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has made to the Secretary of State for Defence concerning requests for regiments to participate in the ceremonies for the opening of the Scottish Parliament; and what steps he is taking to ensure prominence is given to Scottish regiments and bands based in Scotland. [63303]

Mr. Dewar: I have made no such representations to the Secretary of State for Defence. However, the Services are represented on The Scottish Parliament Opening Ceremony Working Group which is taking forward the detailed planning of the event. In its deliberations, the Group will be considering to what extent military personnel, including Scottish regiments and bands based in Scotland, should be involved.

PRIME MINISTER

Performance and Innovation Unit

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Prime Minister what progress has been made with the establishment of the Performance and Innovation Unit. [63769]

The Prime Minister: The Performance and Innovation Unit (PIU) is now firmly established as an integral part of the new structure for the Cabinet Office that I announced on 28 July 1998, Official Report, columns 132–34.

The Unit is beginning its work to improve the capacity of Government to identify and address strategic, cross-cutting issues and promote innovation in the development of policy and in the delivery of the Government's objectives. Its first five projects will focus on:

Developing Electronic Commerce in the UK

How to achieve the Government's goal of making the UK the world's best environment for electronic commerce, ensuring that the UK benefits fully from the single fastest growing market place in the global economy;

Active Aging

How to improve the well-being and quality of life of older people by helping them to remain active. The study will identify ways of increasing the employment opportunities for older people, by examining the incentives for businesses to employ and retain older people and for individuals to remain in paid or voluntary work;

Central Government's Role at Regional and Local Level

Getting the right arrangements in place for joined-up delivery of central Government policies in regions and communities;

Accountability and Incentives for Joined-Up Government

Examining whether current accountability arrangements and incentive systems can be reformed to facilitate joined-up policy-making and delivery, for example by promoting the achievement of joint objectives which require co-operation between departments; and

Objectives for rural economies

Examining the differing needs of local rural economies, and the key factors affecting performance, so as to establish clear objectives for Government policies influencing the future development of rural economies.

The PIU's review teams will be drawn from both inside and outside Government, to ensure that we bring new thinking and a wide range of experience to bear on the issues. The aim is to complete most of these reviews by next summer. Decisions flowing from the PIU's work will be announced in the normal way.

House of Lords

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals he has to set up a committee of both Houses of Parliament charged with undertaking a wide-ranging review of the House of Lords and to bring forward proposals for reform. [63257]

The Prime Minister: The Government have decided to build on their Manifesto proposal for a committee of both Houses of Parliament to consider further reform of the House of Lords, by first appointing a Royal Commission to undertake a wide-ranging review and to bring forward recommendations. A joint committee would be set up after the Royal Commission had reported.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list (a) the (i) task forces, (ii) review panels and (iii) advisory groups her

Department has, (b) the remit of each and (c) the members of each together with their principal employment and their level of remuneration. [62814]

Mr. Foulkes: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Eastleigh (Mr. Chidgey) on 30 July 1998, Official Report, column 462.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

BSE (Offspring Cull)

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will report on the progress of the BSE offspring cull. [63771]

Mr. Nick Brown: Before exports of British beef can resume under the Date Based Export Scheme (DBES) the UK must slaughter all offspring born after 1 August 1996 to BSE cases confirmed before 25 November 1998 (the date of the Commission Decision on the DBES). When new cases of BSE occur any offspring born after 1 August 1996 must be slaughtered without delay.

We have known for some time that this cull would be necessary and started it on a voluntary basis in August. We have been waiting for formal adoption of the Commission Decision in order to make it compulsory and ensure that the cull is properly carried out. Regulations are being laid before the House today for this purpose.

Since the cull started on a voluntary basis in August we have, with the co-operation of the farming community, culled over 1,000 animals. The compulsory cull, which will come into force in January, will ensure that all remaining offspring animals are slaughtered and clear the way for the resumption of beef exports.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Lety Concentration Camp

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Government of the Czech Republic concerning the building of a pig farm on the site of the Lety Concentration Camp in contravention of the Helsinki Accord. [62692]

Ms Quin: We are aware of the ongoing discussions concerning an appropriate future for the site at Lety and hope that the Czech Government will soon reach a decision that is acceptable to all parties.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the (i) task forces, (ii) review panels and (iii) advisory groups his Department has, (b) the remit of each and (c) the members of each together with their principal employment and their level of remuneration. [62803]

Mr. Fatchett: The information is as follows:

Task Forces: Nil

Review Panels: Nil

Advisory Groups:

1. Panel 2000

Panel 1000 was established on 1 April 1998 to:

- produce a strategy to improve the way Britain is seen overseas;
- look at the methods and tools available to do this;
- make sure that the public and private sectors are working together to do this; and
- modernise the way the Foreign and Commonwealth Office communicates with the public.

Panel members:

Chairman: Derek Fatchett MP

Members (Private Sector):

- Lord Alli—Plant 24
- Zeinab Badawi—Journalist
- Martin Bell MP

Sebastian Payne—wine buyer

Mark Savage—wine merchant

John Avery—wine merchant

Committee members receive no remuneration, although expenses are payable.

Edgar Fernandez Case

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department has taken to encourage the Maltese and Turkish authorities to pursue and bring to a conclusion extradition proceedings relating to Mohammed Abdel Abbas Ali. [62599]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer my hon. Friend to my answers of 29 October 1998, Official Report, column 271. Our staff in Valletta and Ankara continue to remind the Turkish and Maltese Governments of the importance we attach to this extradition being processed as quickly as possible. My noble Friend the Under-Secretary raised the matter with the Turkish Ambassador on 2 December and the Vice-Consul in Valletta spoke to the Maltese Attorney General's office on 3 December.

China

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to China regarding the deaths of prisoners at Drapchi Prison in May who had chanted slogans during a visit by EU ambassadors. [63137]

Mr. Fatchett: When EU Ambassadors visited Drapchi prison on 4 May there was no evidence of any disturbances having occurred. Prisoners did not chant slogans. News of disturbances reached the Ambassadors only after their return to Beijing. We are very concerned about the reported deaths of prisoners and we have raised the incident with the Chinese authorities, both bilaterally and in conjunction with EU partners.

Angola

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department has contacted UNITA in order to obtain information about Jason Pope, a missing British citizen in Angola. [63770]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: As an exception, and for the humanitarian purpose of obtaining information about the whereabouts and welfare of Jason Pope, we have sought and obtained an exception to paragraph 12(a) of Security Council resolution 1173. The United Nations Angola Sanctions Committee has granted this exemption to enable our Embassy in Luanda to contact UNITA in areas of Angola not under state administration. A full report of these contacts will be supplied to the Committee.

Our Embassy in Luanda are already in contact with UNITA representatives in Luanda for the same purpose. We have also authorised our Embassy in Washington to approach the UNITA representative in Washington for assistance. Such contacts are not prohibited under UNSCR 1173.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if any officials in his Department saw a copy of Peter Penfold's letter of 30 December 1997 to Miss Grant prior to 6 April 1997. [63269]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Sir Thomas Legg's Report (paragraph 5.29) states that "in spite of searches there, it [Mr. Penfold's letter of 30 December 1997] cannot be traced at the FCO, and seems never to have arrived".

Legg records (paragraph 6.59) that the FCO (Equatorial Africa Department) finally obtained a copy from Freetown on 6 April.

Overseas Price Mechanism

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to review the overseas price mechanism; and if he will make a statement. [63082]

Mr. Fatchett: Officials in the FCO and HM Treasury are conducting a review into the operation of the OPM calculation. It is expected that this will be concluded shortly.

Belarus

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's relations with Belarus. [63134]

Ms Quin: Ministerial contacts with Belarus were suspended in 1997 by HMG and EU Partners following concerns about a constitutional referendum which failed to meet democratic norms, human rights abuses and lack of press freedom. EU member states have also withdrawn their Ambassadors from Minsk in response to the Belarusian Government's effective exclusion of certain Ambassadors from their residences. HMG are keen not to isolate Belarus. We continue to support the OSCE's Advisory and Monitoring Group's efforts to promote democracy in the country.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received about the freedom of individual Belarus MPs to conduct their duties and about their parliamentary immunity; and what representations have been made in this regard to (a) the Belarus President and (b) the OSCE. [63133]

Ms Quin: We and the EU regard the 13th Supreme Soviet as the legitimate parliament. It was disbanded following the 1996 constitutional referendum which failed to meet democratic standards. In its place, the National Assembly was appointed which is not genuinely representative. However, National Assembly members are free to conduct their parliamentary duties. Together with our EU partners, HMG have regularly raised their concerns with Belarusian Ministers about the flawed constitutional situation and human rights abuses. The OSCE Advisory and Monitoring Group was set up in Minsk in February 1998. It helps Belarus to promote democracy and comply with OSCE commitments. HMG support its work and receive regular reports from the OSCE and the British Embassy in Minsk on the situation.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many people in his Department are currently on secondment from private companies; and if he will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62824]

Mr. Kilfoyle: At 30 November 1998, the Cabinet Office employed three secondees from private companies, details as follows:

Mr. H. S. Rolfe of Marks and Spencers PLC working in the Efficiency Unit;

Ms A. Jordan of the NatWest bank PLC working in the Social Exclusion Unit; and Mrs M. Pye of BT working in the Office of the Civil Service Commissioners.

No secondees from private companies are currently employed in any of the Cabinet Office agencies, or in the Central Office of Information which is a separate Department reporting to me.

WALES

Farming

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the amount of Government funding given to the farming industry in each of the last three years. [62912]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Government expenditure on agriculture in Wales was £225.8 million, £265.3 million and £198.5 million in 1995–96, 1996–97 and 1997–98 respectively. The fall during 1997–98 is mainly accounted for by the reduction in expenditure on the EU's Sheep Annual Premium Scheme. This scheme provides for annual deficiency payments, measured in ECUs, on eligible breeding ewes. The reduced expenditure reflects both a strengthening of European sheep prices and the revaluation of the green pound.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the sum currently allocated to the farming industry for each of the next three financial years, including extra moneys announced this autumn; and if he will make a statement. [62913]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales will announce his spending plans for agriculture for the next three years shortly.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many farms there are in Wales. [62915]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: There are currently 35,500 farm holdings registered in Wales; 27,900 main farm holdings and 7,600 minor holdings.

NHS Waiting Lists

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on NHS waiting lists in Wales. [62696]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: I am pleased to announce that the inpatient waiting list has fallen for 2 consecutive months and currently stands at 73,037—the lowest figure since February 1998. The numbers waiting over 12 months and over 18 months have also fallen, by 309 and 86 respectively.

Outpatient lists to end-October also fell, by 1.6 per cent. to 133,210, the first fall in outpatient lists since January 1998. Although the number waiting over 6 months for an appointment rose by 487, this was a smaller increase than the 1,535 reported in September.

Sheep

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the size of the sheep flock of Wales in (a) 1993, (b) 1996 and (c) currently. [62916]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The information required has been taken from the annual June Agricultural and Horticultural Census and is shown as follows:

Total sheep and lambs in Wales [1]

Year	Number
1993	11,256,200
1996	10,874,000
1998 [2]	11,609,300

[1] Includes estimates for minor holdings
[2] Provisional estimate

GP Fundholding

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to abolish GP fundholding; and if he will make a statement on his proposed alternative arrangements. [62698]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: We shall include provisions to abolish the GP fundholding scheme in the Bill to modernise the NHS. Although a fundholding scheme must remain available until that Bill reaches Royal Assent, this need not take the form of the existing standard and community fundholding schemes. The Department is therefore about to consult the GP representative bodies on proposals to bring these existing arrangements to an end on 31 March 1999 and substitute a residual scheme. This residual scheme would meet the requirements of the current primary legislation, should that still be in force on 1 April 1999, while minimising any disruption to the development of Local Health Groups. No new primary legislation is needed to implement our plans to establish Local Health Groups as Committees of Health Authorities from 1 April 1999.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are employed by the Welsh Development Agency. [62914]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh Development Agency currently employs 424 permanent staff.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the allocation of funds to grant-maintained schools in Wales in 1999–2000. [62981]

Mr. Hain: Grant-maintained schools in Wales will be funded in 1999–2000 in accordance with the Financing of Maintained Schools Regulations 1998 which were laid before Parliament on 3 December.

Welsh Arts Council

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his plans for the appointment of a new chair to the Welsh Arts Council. [63155]

Mr. Michael: The selection process for a new chair of the Arts Council of Wales began in July with an advertisement in the national press. A shortlist of candidates has been drawn up and interviews will take place as early as possible in the New Year.

A487

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take steps to avoid the closure of the A487 across the Cob at Porthmadog, during rebuilding of the retaining walls; and what arrangements he has made for the alternative routing of trunk road traffic during the rebuilding. [63175]

Mr. Hain: The Department is presently in discussion with The Rebecca Trust concerning the condition of the retaining walls on either side of the cob at Porthmadog. Ownership of the walls above the A487 rests with the Trust. The Department's Agents, the North West Wales Trunk Road Agency, have been instructed to inspect the walls and consider possible strengthening schemes, which need to minimise traffic disruption. Some temporary closures may, however, be inevitable due to the narrowness of the A487 across the cob. Only on receipt of the strengthening proposals will the need for alternative routes be developed.

Disability Wales

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made in addressing the issues raised in the report of the Welsh Office Social Services Inspectorate in August 1998 on the problems of Disability Wales; and what plans he has for the future funding of Disability Wales. [63149]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The final report of the Management Review of Disability Wales was published on 19 November and I have sent a copy to the right hon. Member. I am now awaiting a formal response to the report from the Trustees of Disability Wales.

The Government have a very positive agenda for disabled people, including the establishment of a Disability Right Commission. It is therefore essential that Disability Wales can play a strong and cohesive role during this important period. I hope that the report's recommendations will provide a sound foundation from which the organisation can develop. Welsh Office funding for Disability Wales is secured until 31 March 1999 and I will consider funding for the 1999–2000 financial year in the light of the response from the Trustees to the report by the Social Services Inspectorate for Wales.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people in his Department are currently on secondment from private companies; and if he will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62826]

Mr. Mudie: The Department for Education and Employment currently has 8 centrally managed staff seconded from the private sector. The details are as follows:

Secondee	Seconded from	Current position
Prof. Michael Barber	Institute of Education	Head of Standards and Effectiveness Unit
Ms Juliette Brown	Aqument Services	Private Finance Division
Mr. Richard Edwards	The Next Company	National Disability Council Secretariat
Mr. Anil Kumar	Glaxo Wellcome PLC	Higher Education Funding and Organisation Division
Ms Lindsay Oliver	Institute of Education	Effectiveness Division
Mr. Steve Pollock	British Broadcasting Corporation	University for Industry Transition Team
Mr. Europe Singh	British Broadcasting Corporation	University for Industry Transition Team
Mr. Alun Thomas	Royal National Institute for the Blind	National Disability Council Secretariat

Asian Women (Employment Rights)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps the Government are taking to increase the amount of advice and information available to women from the Pakistani and Bangladeshi communities on employment rights and opportunities. [62282]

Ms Hodge [holding answer 8 December 1998]: First and foremost, the Government fund the Equal Opportunities Commission and the Commission for Racial Equality to advise all individuals on employment rights. More specifically, the DfEE has adopted a Race Equality Strategy committing it, in all its policies and programmes, actively to promote equality between all ethnic and racial groups. The key principles of the strategy are built into all Employment Service programmes, notably the New Deal. This programme is designed to take account of the particular needs of ethnic minorities, including Pakistani and Bangladeshi women, to ensure that ethnic minority young people have advice and support that meets their particular needs. The Employment Service issues multi-lingual publicity leaflets to publicise its programmes.

We also require Government-funded Training and Enterprise Councils to ensure that all sections (ie by ethnic group, gender and disability) of the eligible local population are fully represented on the programmes they run and the services they deliver. If not, the TEC must increase its participation by identifying and tackling whatever barriers exist to recruitment.

Following a recent Social Exclusion Unit report, the Government have set up an Action Team on jobs to look at the particular difficulties facing people from ethnic minorities looking for work and to identify better ways of helping into jobs people like Pakistani and Bangladeshi women, who face some of the toughest barriers to work. It will report to the SEU in July 1999.

Careers Services are also developing imaginative schemes to support ethnic minority women and prepare them to find suitable work. In Bradford, for example, Pakistani and Bangladeshi women are helped by the local Careers Service with information and advice, providing both reassurance and practical assistance, eg with language, to support entry for daughters onto work experience schemes. The local Careers Service also operates a mentoring scheme which draws upon the skills of experienced Pakistani and Bangladeshi community members to train and support young people into jobs.

I recognise that people from ethnic minorities face particular difficulties in moving from education into work. It is because we must find ways of overcoming them that I have made this an early priority for my advisory group, the Race Employment and Education Forum, which met for the first time on 20 October.

Education Council

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the outcome of the Education Council held in Brussels on 4 December; and if he will make a statement. [63164]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Enfield, Southgate (Mr. Twigg), on 8 December 1998, Official Report, column 181.

Performance League Tables

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what research he has commissioned on the impact of socio-economic factors on school performance tables. [62584]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 9 December 1998]: No research has been commissioned on the impact of such factors specifically on performance tables, but in its internal analyses of performance information for school improvement purposes the Department does undertake investigations of the relationship between socio-economic factors and school performance.

Teachers' Pensions

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the review of teachers' pension arrangements and its impact on opportunities for early retirement. [63230]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Working Group on the Review of the Teachers' Pension Scheme has considered all of its terms of reference. These included whether teachers should be allowed to retire early with an actuarially reduced pension at their own request. The Working Group will cover this in its report which I expect to receive in January.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will report on progress being made by the Working Group on the Review of the Teachers' Pension Scheme; and when he expects it to report. [62923]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Working Group on the Review of the Teachers' Pension Scheme has considered all of its terms of reference. I expect to receive its report in January.

Job Creation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to increase local powers (a) over job creation and training programmes and (b) to co-ordinate different publicly funded regeneration and employment projects. [62344]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 9 December 1998]: (a) We are committed to the principle that local partnerships should be able to develop solutions to identified local needs. Initiatives such as the Single Regeneration Budget and New Deal for Communities offer vehicles for this, and people, jobs and skills are at their heart. It is crucial that all partners involved in activities focused employability work closely together to ensure that local programmes fit as effectively as possible with national programmes such as New Deal.

The Government support the Local Government Association New Commitment to Regeneration Initiative which is seeking a more co-ordinated and flexible approach to regeneration in 22 pathfinder areas. The Government will work wholeheartedly with the pathfinder areas as they seek new and effective ways of meeting the needs and priorities of their localities.

(b) Helping people in deprived communities to obtain jobs is a high priority in all regeneration initiatives. The 17 New Deal for Communities Pathfinders have been asked to put this at the centre of their plans. Guidelines for Round 5 of the Single Regeneration Budget emphasised the importance of employability.

I also refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister gave on 28 October 1998, Official Report, columns 168–69, which gives detailed information on steps taken by this Government to improve the co-ordination of area-based initiatives.

Devolution

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how much is spent annually by his Department on research programmes in Scotland; and what proportion of this funding will be transferred to the Scottish Parliament after devolution; [63299]

(2) if he will list (a) by programme over £50,000 and (b) the total of spending by his Department in Scotland on the identifiable spending areas detailed in Table 7.6A of the Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis 1997–98 (Cmnd 3601); which of these programmes will fall solely or jointly under the responsibility of the Scottish Parliament; and what arrangements are in place to transfer control of funds for these projects to the Scottish Executive or Parliament. [63300]

(3) what assessment he has made of the programmes which it will be ultra vires for his Department to fund or have sole responsibility for after devolution; if he will list these programmes; and if he will make a statement. [63301]

Mr. Mudie: Under the terms of the Scotland Act 1998, the Scottish Ministers will assume responsibility for a range of devolved functions which will in part depend on secondary legislation which has yet to be passed. My Department is reviewing its programmes, including the research components, in the light of the Scotland Act. It is too early to say to what extent programme expenditure which is currently administered by the Department may relate to functions which will transfer to Scottish Ministers. Work is taking place to establish the extent of any such expenditure and to assess the need for any consequential transfer of funds to the Scottish Ministers. For the total spending by the Department in Scotland I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury to the hon. Member for North Tayside (Mr. Swinney) on 4 November 1998, Official Report, column 615.

Education Channel

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the cost (a) in total and (b) to public funds of establishing a new broadcast education channel. [63322]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Department has no plans to establish a new broadcast education channel and no estimate of possible costs has accordingly been made.

Funding

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money has been allocated in each of the next three financial years for (a) the Standards Fund, (b) the New Opportunities Fund, (c) the Service Development Fund and (d) the Small School Support Fund. [63250]

Mr. Blunkett: The Standards Fund programme will be over £900 million in 1999–2000. This includes the DfEE grant and the local education authority contribution. Announcements of the size of the programme in future years will be made in due course.

The Service Development Fund will be £750 million in 2000–01 and £1,000 million in 2001–02.

Details for the Small School Support Fund will be announced in due course. Questions on the New Opportunities Fund are for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport.

Headteachers

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects to publish details of the proposed resources which are to be made available within the school improvement grant element of the Standards Fund for the replacement of headteachers in underperforming schools. [63248]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Green Paper "Teachers—Meeting the Challenge of Change" (Cm 4164) indicates that additional resources will be made available within the Standards Fund to help underperforming schools to get the strong leadership they need. Details of this allocation will be announced in due course.

Virtual Staff College

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the Virtual Staff College for Senior Education Officers. [63251]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Virtual Staff College is a project, led by the Society of Education Officers with support from my Department, for the training and development of local education authority officers. The project includes a competence framework which forms the basis for several newly developed Master's degree courses. Students can mix and match modules from difference universities and combine on-site tuition with distance learning. The project leader is on secondment from the Department. The DfEE is also providing £30,000 for the development of the competence framework, training materials and information.

Teachers

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the recurrent cost of providing funding to guarantee all new teachers the reduced teaching load and programme of support referred to in the Green Paper, "Teachers Meeting the Challenge of Change". [63249]

Mr. Charles Clarke: In 1999–2000 my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will make available £251.5 million in the School Improvement Standards Fund grant to support activity designed to improve standards of pupil performance in order to meet school, LEA and national targets.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many advanced skills teachers have been appointed to date to each salary band. [63246]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information is not available.

Pupils (Spending)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the standard spending assessments for education per pupil for each English local authority for 1999–2000. [63255]

Ms Estelle Morris: The following table shows, for each local education authority,

(a) its Primary education SSA per primary pupil;

(b) its Secondary education SSA per secondary pupil; and

(c) its total education SSA.

Sixth Forms

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what guidance his Department has issued on the optimum size of sixth form classes; [62506]

(2) if he will make a statement on the average size of sixth form classes in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Norfolk. [62507]

Ms Estelle Morris: The average size of sixth form classes in England is 10.7 and in Norfolk is 10.2. The size of classes in the rest of the United Kingdom is a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales.

The Department has issued no guidance on the optimum size of sixth form classes. In deciding what courses to offer in their sixth forms, schools must weigh up issues such as quality of provision, demand for particular courses, breadth of curricular choices accessible to students across the area, cost effectiveness and financial implications for the school as a whole.

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance his Department has issued on the optimum size of a sixth form college so that it is able to provide an appropriate choice of subjects. [62508]

Mr. Mudie: The Department has not issued guidance on the optimum size of sixth form colleges.

TREASURY

Tax Harmonisation

15. Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how he proposes to ensure that Britain's taxation will not be harmonised with that of the rest of the EU when Britain joins European Monetary Union. [61760]

Dawn Primarolo: Decisions in this area are subject to unanimity. This would not be affected if the UK joined EMU.

29. Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his use of the veto in respect of EU tax harmonisation measures relating to (a) corporate and company taxation, (b) VAT, (c) income tax, (d) taxes on investment and (e) capital taxes. [61775]

Dawn Primarolo: Decisions in all these areas are subject to unanimity. The Government will not support any action at European level that will threaten jobs or the competitive position of British business.

35. Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the Government's policy on proposals for tax harmonisation in Europe. [61782]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government will not support any action at European level that will threaten jobs or the competitive position of British business. Tax harmonisation is not the way forward for Europe. The priority for Europe is the promotion of employment reforms and competitive markets to achieve higher levels of employment and prosperity.

37. Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he intends to take to prevent tax harmonisation in the European Union. [61784]

Dawn Primarolo: Decisions in this area are subject to unanimity. The Government will not support any action at European level that will threaten jobs or the competitive position of British business.

Debt Relief (Developing Countries)

16. Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to accelerate debt relief programmes for developing countries. [61761]

Ms Hewitt: At the annual meetings of the IMF and World Bank the Chancellor maintained momentum towards his Mauritius Mandate targets and has subsequently taken initiatives to help post-catastrophe countries.

NHS Expenditure

18. Mr. McNulty: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his public expenditure plans for the NHS for the next three years. [61764]

Mr. Byers: In the Comprehensive Spending Review on 14 July 1998, Official Report, columns 187–211, we announced an extra £21 billion for health in the UK for the next three years.

This is the biggest cash increase in the history of the NHS and, combined with our programme of reform, will provide the stable funding base needed to deliver the Government's commitment to modernise the NHS.

Coupled with the £250 million for the UK this year, which my right hon. Friend the Chancellor announced in the House on 3 November 1998, Official Report, column 688, of which £209 million is for England, this means health spending in England will rise by 3.8 per cent. a year over the lifetime of this Parliament. Figures for other countries of the United Kingdom are a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland.

Public Spending

19. Mr. Plaskitt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about his priorities for public spending for the next three years, with particular reference to the balancing of budgets across the economic cycle. [61765]

Mr. Byers: The Government are committed to spend an extra £40 billion on health and education over the next three years, and will double net public investment.

The Government's prudent approach to managing the public finances ensures that these commitments will be honoured while meeting the Government's two strict fiscal rules.

Public Services Expenditure

20. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his plans to increase non-capital expenditure on public services over the next three years. [61766]

Mr. Byers: Spending plans for the next three years were set out in the Comprehensive Spending Review White Paper, published in July.

Work Incentives

22. Ms Ward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about his policy to increase the incentive to work. [61768]

Dawn Primarolo: The Budget contained a number of measures to help ensure that work pays, including the Working Families Tax Credit and reform to National Insurance Contributions. These changes will ensure a guaranteed minimum income of at least £190 a week for working families. And, as the Pre-Budget Report stated, we will also introduce a 10p starting rate of income tax, when it is economically right to do so. In addition, the Welfare to Work programme will, through the New Deal, help people to make the move from welfare into work.

Tax Revenue Statistics

23. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest estimate of total annual tax revenue per person in the United Kingdom; and what was the total (a) five and (b) 10 years ago. [61769]

Mr. Byers: Figures for the total annual tax revenue per person in the United Kingdom were £2,812 in 1987–88; £3,574 in 1992–93; and £5,023 in 1997–98.

Pensioners (Taxation)

24. Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the taxation of dividends paid to non-taxpaying low-income pensioners. [61770]

Dawn Primarolo: Having listened carefully to all interested parties, the Government confirm the arrangements set out in the July 1997 Budget for phasing out payable credits in order to correct a bias in the tax system against the retention of profits for investment. Individuals have time to consider their investments before the new rules take effect—for example, they can move to tax-favoured investments should they wish to do so.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he is proposing to improve the tax position of pensioners. [61778]

Ms Hewitt: In his statement to the House on the Comprehensive Spending Review, 14 July 1998, Official Report, columns 187–211, the Chancellor announced that, as part of a £2.5 billion package of support for pensioners, the Government would set a minimum tax guarantee, so that no pensioner would pay income tax unless their income rose above a specified level. The pre-Budget report confirmed that this level would be determined in the next Budget.

Duty-free Sales

25. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the continuation of duty-free sales after 30 June 1999; what transitional measures he proposes to introduce; and if he will make a statement. [61771]

Dawn Primarolo: I have received a number of representations on the continuation of duty-free sales after 30 June 1999. This matter was discussed at the ECOFIN Council meeting on 1 December where a minority of Member States, supported by the UK, called for a fresh look at the decision to end intra-EU duty free sales on 30 June 1999. However, unanimity amongst Member States is required and there was no consensus for change. The Government are continuing to consider the arrangements which should apply after 30 June 1999.

Euro

26. Mr. Townend: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to the United Kingdom Government of conversion from sterling to the euro. [61772]

Ms Hewitt: The cost of the changeover should the UK decide to join the euro would depend on the manner in which businesses and other organisations were to approach the changeover and the extent to which organisations had incorporated euro compatibility into investment decisions before joining.

ECOFIN

28. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent consultations he has had with his European Union counterparts on the co-ordination of taxation policies. [61774]

30. Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with EU finance ministers on the subject of EU tax harmonisation. [61776]

Mr. Hood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the outcome of the ECOFIN Council held in Brussels on 1 December; and if he will make a statement. [62329]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor attended the Economic and Finance Council—ECOFIN—of the European Union in Brussels on 1 December. I accompanied him. ECOFIN was followed by a joint meeting of ECOFIN and the Social Affairs Council.

I, as Chair of the Code of Conduct Group, presented the Group's first interim report to ECOFIN. The Council took note of the report, endorsed the further work and asked the Group to endeavour to complete its work as rapidly as possible. Commissioner Monti gave a brief presentation of the Commission's combined first annual report on the implementation of the Code of Conduct for Business Taxation and fiscal state aid and a progress report on the work concerning the taxation of income from savings and a common system of taxation from interest and royalty payments between associated companies.

The Council noted a presentation by Commissioner Van Miert on the Commission's Communication on the application of state aid rules to direct tax measures.

The Commission put forward a draft mandate for a study on company taxation which was not agreed.

Commissioner Monti requested that ECOFIN consent to the Commission and the Presidency Troika initiating exploratory talks with third countries on the external dimension of the taxation of savings. ECOFIN agreed the mandate.

The Presidency proposed that the Financial Questions Group continue its discussions on a framework for energy taxation based on the Commission's draft Energy Products Directive. This was agreed by the Council, with a view to the Council being able to assess the prospects for such a framework by May 1999.

The Presidency put forward a draft progress report entitled "Reinforced tax policy co-operation". The agreed report will be submitted to the Vienna European Council.

The Council agreed a report to the Vienna European Council on Agenda 2000.

ECOFIN discussed the Stability Programme of the Netherlands and the Convergence Programme of Denmark. The Council adopted opinions on these programmes.

ECOFIN agreed that the Commission would adopt on 9 December a proposal that allowed for only very limited access for credit institutions in Monaco to the French payments system. France is to discuss this measure further with the European Central Bank and the Commission.

The Council agreed a report to the European Council on the external representation of the euro area. The Council also agreed a report taking forward initiatives to reform the international financial institutions.

The composition and statutes of the Economic and Financial Committee were agreed.

ECOFIN agreed a statement on facilitating the reconstruction efforts in Central America following Hurricane Mitch.

The abolition of intra-EU duty free shopping on 30 June 1999 was raised. Several Member States asked that this decision be looked at again. The request did not achieve the necessary unanimous support of Member States. The Presidency concluded that no further action would be taken.

At the joint meeting of ECOFIN and the Social Affairs Council, agreement was reached on the Joint Employment Report and on amendments to the 1999 Employment Guidelines. Both texts will be sent to the Vienna European Council. The Chairman of the European Investment Bank gave a report on the progress made in implementing the programme agreed at the Luxembourg jobs summit.

European Economy

31. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on progress toward the co-ordinated expansion of the European economy. [61777]

Ms Hewitt: Articles 103 and 104c of the Maastricht Treaty provide a basis for coordination and surveillance of budgetary and economic policies in EMU. The Government believe that growth and high employment in the EU will be best served by policies which promote economic stability and improve the performance of labour, product and capital markets. As part of this process, Member States are currently submitting Progress Reports on Product and Capital Markets which will be discussed in the new year.

Balance of Payments

32. Mr. Spring: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the balance of payments. [61779]

Ms Hewitt: A small current account deficit is expected this year, and the Pre-Budget Report shows that, as a proportion of GDP, it is forecast to remain modest by historical standards over the next few years.

VAT Village Halls

33. Mr. David Heath: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his policy with regard to VAT reclamation by parish councils on building projects undertaken by village hall committees. [61780]

Dawn Primarolo: A parish council is not entitled to recover VAT incurred by a village hall committee. However, where a parish council owns, or is the sole trustee of, a hall and it incurs VAT in respect of works to the hall, this is normally recoverable. In addition, VAT may be recoverable where a parish council uses its own resources to undertake work to other halls.

Economic Stability

34. Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he has taken to ensure economic stability. [61781]

Ms Hewitt: We have put in place new frameworks for monetary and fiscal policy, and have taken tough action to deliver low inflation and sound public finances. These are essential for economic stability and sustainable growth.

Pension Mis-selling

36. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the role of independent financial advisers in respect of pension mis-selling. [61783]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my statement of 5 November 1998, Official Report, column 685.

Monetary Policy Committee

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Monetary Policy Committee. [61767]

Ms Hewitt: The task of the Monetary Policy Committee is to set short-term interest rates to meet the Government's inflation target. The success of the new monetary framework is demonstrated by the fact that inflation is at its target, long-term interest rates are currently at their lowest level for over 35 years and inflation expectations have fallen.

Debt Relief (Honduras and Nicaragua)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Governments of Honduras and Nicaragua regarding debt relief; what steps he has taken to secure debt relief for those countries; and if he will make a statement. [61773]

Ms Hewitt: The UK has already written off all of its aid loans to Honduras and Nicaragua. Last month, the Chancellor and Secretary of State for International Development called on the International Financial Institutions to look at mechanisms that could mitigate the debt service burdens on Honduras and Nicaragua and announced a £10 million contribution to a multilateral Trust Fund to help meet debt service payments to the IMF and World Bank.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the quarterly levels and changes in the United Kingdom employed labour force since 1990, identifying separately (a) employees in employment, (b) armed forces and (c) self-employment, with a breakdown of these categories by (i) full-time and part-time and (ii) sex. [62308]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 10 December 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on the labour force.

The statistics you have requested (where available) can be accessed via the Central Shared Database (CSDB) in the House of Commons Library.

Figures for males and females are available for Employee jobs (the new name for employees-in-employment), Self-employment jobs and HM Forces in the United Kingdom. However, a full-time and part-time breakdown is only available for the Employee jobs component, and only from December 1992.

When accessing the database you will need to know the CSDB 'identifiers' for each of the series of figures sought. These are as follows:

Male Full-time Employee jobs: YEJN

Male Part-time Employee jobs: YEJO

Female Full-time Employee jobs: YEJP

Female Part-time Employee jobs: YEJQ

Male Self-employment jobs: YEJR

Female Self-employment jobs: YEJS

Male HM Forces: YEJT

Female HM Forces: YEJU

These estimates are subject to revision after 16th December 1998, when the short-term estimates will be benchmarked against the Annual Employment Survey (AES) results for September 1997. You may also wish to know that these figures are published in table B.11 of Labour Market Trends each month—copies of which are placed in the House Library.

Registration (Births, Deaths and Marriages)

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the options paper on registration of Births, Deaths and Marriages will be presented by the Registrar General to Ministers, as stated in his written answer to the hon. Member for Tewkesbury (Mr. Robertson) of 30 June 1998, Official Report, column 175, and when he expects to publish proposals for reform. [62552]

Ms Hewitt: The Registrar General expects to present the options paper to Ministers shortly.

Proposals for reform will be included in the consultation document arising from the Civil Registration review announced in the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Preseli Pembrokeshire (Ms Lawrence) on 7 December 1998, Official Report, columns 27–28.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average weekly gains from the introduction of the working families tax credit will be by decile of (a) benefit unit income and (b) household income. [62244]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 3 December 1998]: The table shows estimated average gains arising from the introduction of Working Families Tax Credit for those eligible for the credit. The overall average gain including childcare costs is estimated to be £17.20 per week. Individual decile gains do not include gains arising from the changes to the treatment of childcare costs in Working Families Tax Credit or other behavioural changes arising from the introduction of the credit, as they can not be reliably apportioned across deciles.

Average gain of gainers from introduction of Working Families Tax Credit by decile

£ per week

Decile	Benefit unit income	Household income
Lowest	[1]—	14.40
2nd	17.40	18.60
3rd	16.10	12.40
4th	12.20	15.20
5th	14.90	12.60
6th	12.00	[1]—
7th	[1]—	[1]—
8th	[1]—	[1]—
9th	[1]—	[1]—
Highest	[1]—	[1]—

Note:
Deciles are defined in terms of equivalised income on a benefit unit and household income basis using the McClements scale; decile boundaries are higher for households than benefit units.

Revised Earnings Index

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which sectors of the workforce were re-allocated between the public and private sectors of the economy in the now suspended revised earnings index. [62905]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 10 December 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on the public and private sectors of the economy in the now suspended revised earnings index.

Reclassification mainly affected privatised parts of public transport. The introduction of legal status rather than nature of business led to a very small number of reclassifications of individual enterprises. Confidentiality restrictions prevent me from naming these.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many vehicles qualified for the exemption from vehicle excise duty for historic and classic cars in each of the last 10 years. [62691]

Ms Hewitt: The exemption for vehicles over 25 years of age dates from November 1995.

Thousand

Year	Exempt: Tax class 88 vehicles	All vehicles	Cars
1995[1]	over 25 years of age	120.0	90.8
1996[1]	over 25 years of age	278.4	173.3
1997[1]	built before 1 January 1973	325.7	203.4

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in his Department are currently on secondment from private companies; and if he will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62830]

Ms Hewitt: At present, 13 staff in the Treasury and the Debt Management Office are on secondment from private companies. Details of the seconding authorities and the secondees' Departmental responsibilities are shown in the table. It is our normal policy not to disclose the names of individual officials.

Details of private sector firms currently seconding staff to HM Treasury and staffs' responsibilities as at 1 December 1998

Seconding organisation	Responsibilities
Barclays Capital	Export and export credits policy and oversight of the Export Credits Guarantee Department.
Midland Bank	Provision of advice and guidance on small and medium sized enterprises; business associations and representative bodies; business links and other intermediaries.
Tarmac plc	Private Finance Initiative (PFI) Adviser in the Procurement Group with responsibility for: links between PFI and mainstream procurement; support to departmental Procurement Units on PFI issues; and support to Treasury led Taskforce on procurement issues.
Pannell Kerr Forster Associates	Provision of commercial, financial and accounting advice on private sector companies, and public and private sector commercial undertakings. Support to other work areas in the Treasury, as well as support to OFGAS, OFFER, OFTEL and OFT.
Ernst & Young	Developing policy on aspects of public private partnerships, including the guidance on selling services into wider markets and on parts of the Treasury's on-going work on productivity.
Manpower plc	Provision of advice and guidance on strategic issues relating to supply chain management, electronic commerce and procurement business plans, to central Government Departments and Treasury officials.
Securities Investment Board	Deals with money laundering, financial crime and subjects in the wider area of regulatory policy.
PricewaterhouseCoopers	Provision of economic advice on housing and urban regeneration planning policies and programmes. Works on social exclusion.

Details of private sector firms currently seconding staff to HM Treasury and staffs' responsibilities as at 1 December 1998

Seconding organisation	Responsibilities
Arthur Andersen	Provides policy support where necessary to the leading Department on the Public-Private Partnerships for National Air Traffic Services (NATS) and the London Underground. Maintains Treasury interests on the completion of the Jubilee Line extension and oversees progress on the Belfast Port Public/Private Partnership.
PricewaterhouseCoopers	Monitoring and control of expenditure commitments in relation to PFI; assurances of funding and other expenditure issues; value for money/public sector comparators; management and measurement of risk; payment mechanisms; tax and accounting matters; reduction of bid costs; international interest including liaison with international financial institutions.
Arthur Andersen	Provides advice and guidance on corporation and capital tax policy issues.
Arthur Andersen	Encourages enterprise and economic growth in industry.
PricewaterhouseCoopers	Provision of accountancy advice and guidance to the Treasury, including accounting implications of PFI projects.

Charity Tax Review

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Government expect to conclude their review of charity taxation; and if he will make a statement. [62907]

Ms Hewitt: The Government received over 3,000 replies in the first phase of the Review and are determined to consider carefully all the options before launching the next phase. We intend to publish a Consultation Document as soon as possible.

EU Budget

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) amount and (b) proportion of revenues raised by VAT have been earmarked for financing the EU budget. [63099]

Dawn Primarolo: The latest estimate for the gross UK VAT contribution to the EU budget is £4,034 million in 1998–99. The amount paid is related to a notional harmonised VAT base, covering the same goods and services in all EU member states, and is not directly proportional to VAT revenues raised in the UK. UK VAT revenues are forecast to be £52.6 billion in 1998–99.

Informal Economy

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the size as a proportion of gross domestic product of the informal economy (a) in the United Kingdom, (b) in each region and (c) in each nation; and what assessment he has made of trends in the size of the informal economy. [62906]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 10 December 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on the informal economy.

Definitions of what is included in the informal economy are not entirely clear, and therefore no official estimates are available for the UK. However, the ONS has done work based on the following three definitions:

The UN System of National Accounts 1993 (SNA93) defines the informal sector as comprising own-account enterprises (household enterprises owned and operated by own-account workers, which may employ contributing family workers and employees on an occasional basis) and enterprises of informal employers (who operate below a certain size or are unregistered). The SNA says that the concept of informal sector activities should be distinguished from the concept of activities of the hidden or underground economy.

In the context of household satellite accounts, 'movement between the formal and informal economy' is movement between the economy measured by GDP and unpaid household production.

Illegal economic activities are also sometimes described as 'informal'.

The activity of informal own-account enterprises, who are registered with the Inland Revenue, are included in National Accounts estimates of mixed income. Adjustments are made in the National Accounts to allow for the incomes of those who are not registered for income tax. However, this evasion adjustment does not claim to measure the total size of the 'hidden economy'. Section 14.20–24 from the 1998 National Accounts Concepts, Sources and Methods describes these adjustments, and I enclose a copy of this. Estimates for the value of household production were published in October 1997, based on Time Use data from 1995—a copy of the article is enclosed. The results of some research into the illegal economy were published in Economic Trends in July 1998—a copy of that article is also enclosed.

There is no regional or sub-national breakdown for any of these data. Because much of the work is developmental, there are no time series, so it is not possible to assess the rate and direction of any change.

Euro Preparations Committee

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those members of the House who have been nominated to date for membership of the new Euro Preparations Committee; and if he will make a statement. [62281]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 7 December 1998]: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer wrote to the Treasury spokesmen of each Parliamentary Party on 10 November inviting nominations for representatives for the new Cross-Party Advisory Group on preparations for the euro.

To date, the right hon. Member for Haltemprice and Howden (Mr. Davis) and the hon. Members for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) and for North Tayside (Mr. Swinney) have been nominated for membership.

Given the importance of preparations for the euro, I hope that every Parliamentary Party will wish to be represented on the Group.

Company Cars

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to reform company car taxation so as to remove the incentive to increase business mileage. [62423]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 8 December 1998]: The Chancellor announced in the March Budget that he would be considering, in relation to income tax charged on company cars, the case for replacing the existing business mileage discounts with discounts for driving fewer private miles. People were invited (Budget 98 Press Release Inland Revenue 6) to send comments to the Inland Revenue. As stated in the Pre-Budget Report (paragraphs 5.52 to 5.54), in the light of the views expressed, we are continuing to review how the company car tax regime might be altered to send better environmental signals.

Community Finance Initiatives

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans his Department has (a) to encourage the growth of community finance initiatives to promote regeneration in poorer areas and (b) to ask banks to disclose information on their servicing of poorer areas. [62284]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 9 December 1998]: As part of the Government's Social Exclusion agenda, I have established two Policy Action Teams looking at 1) Business and 2) Access to Financial Services in poorer neighbourhoods, which are due to report in July 1999. As part of its remit, the team looking at Business will consider a wide range of methods to improve the availability of finance for small and start-up businesses in deprived areas. The Access to Financial Services team will also consider the service banks provide to customers in poorer areas and consider with the Banks possible measures for improvement.

Tax Receipts

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the taxes in respect of which he receives monthly estimates of receipts from the Inland Revenue. [61762]

Dawn Primarolo: Monthly receipts of taxes collected by the Inland Revenue are published in the monthly "Public Sector Finances First Release". Forecasts of receipts are published in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" and in the "Pre-Budget Report".

VAT (Tourism)

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress HM Customs and Excise has made on its assessment of the recent British Tourist Authority report on the implication of a reduced VAT rate on hotel accommodation and other tourism-related services. [61757]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs have just completed their analysis of this detailed report and will shortly report to me with their findings.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Council Tax

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will place in the Library a table showing the Band D council tax increase for each (i) billing authority and (ii) notifiable authority in England, (a) in cash terms and (b) in percentage terms, based on the assumption that all councils apply his 1998–99 capping principles and spend up to the limit that would imply; [62853]

(2) if he will place in the Library a table showing the Band D council tax increase for each (i) billing authority and (ii) notifiable authority in England, (1) without applying council tax benefit limitation and (2) showing the extra increase that would arise from council tax benefit limitation (a) in cash terms and (b) in percentage terms, based on the assumption that all councils apply his 1998–99 capping principles and spend up to the limit that would imply. [62854]

Ms Armstrong [holding answer 7 December 1998]: I have today placed in the Library of the House tables showing the information requested. The figures are entirely speculative. Councils will each take their own decision about their budget requirements for 1999–2000, in the light of the substantial increases in funding announced on 2 December 1998, Official Report, columns 883–86. Each will look at its own circumstances and consider very hard the need for any council tax increase at all. There is no reason for the capping principles used in 1998–99 to be part of a council's budgeting decisions. The figures for some councils are particularly distorted by an assumption that they would increase their spending up to SSA even where they have in the past consistently spent below that level.

Local Government Finance (Essex)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reasons Government grant support for Brentwood Borough and Epping Forest District Councils is to decline in the next financial year. [63041]

Ms Armstrong: Brentwood Borough Council and Epping Forest District Councils will receive central support reduction grant for 1999–2000. This ensures that their income from redistributed non-domestic rates and central government support under various grants to be paid for 1999–2000 will not be less than the income from redistributed non-domestic rates and various grants payable to them for 1998–99.

Both local authorities will, however, face a reduction in revenue support grant (RSG) for 1999–2000.

The main reason for the reduction is RSG for Brentwood Borough Council in 1999–2000 is the change to the method of calculating the element of the Standard Spending Assessments (SSAs) for local authorities' own expenditure on Flood Defence. The calculation is to be based on outturn expenditure instead of budgeted expenditure. Brentwood's budgeted expenditure has been substantially greater than what it has actually spent on flood defence. Other reasons include the adjustment of Capital Financing national totals to allow for the effect of reserved receipts on financing costs and a decrease in the values of some of the indicators used in the calculation of the 'District services' element of the Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services SSA.

The main reason for the reduction in RSG for Epping Forest District Council in 1999–2000 is the adjustment of Capital Financing national totals to allow for the effect of reserved receipts on financing costs. Other reasons include a decline in its assumed level of debt, and a decrease in the values of some of the indicators used in the calculation of the 'District services' element of the Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services SSA.

Road Accidents (Tranquillisers)

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the number of road (i) deaths and (ii) accidents each year which would not occur if people taking tranquillisers did not drive. [62685]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions is presently conducting a three-year survey, which started in October 1996, into the incidence of drugs (legal or illegal) in fatal road accident victims. A report on interim results to 7 January 1998 was published on 11 February 1998. My written answer of that date, Official Report, column 233, explained that a copy was being placed in the Library.

This survey will not provide evidence of accident causation but it will help to establish the extent of drug use among road users. the interim results show that medicinal drugs were present in some 6 per cent. of road accident fatalities (drivers, passengers, pedestrians, cyclists).

Retail Outlets

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance he has given to county councils on the setting up of retail outlets; and if he will make a statement. [63315]

Mr. Raynsford: Government policy on town centres and retail development is set out in Planning Policy Guidance note 6.

Night Flights

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the percentage of night flights at Gatwick by QC4 and QC8 aircraft (a) between October 1993 and September 1994 and (b) for the latest available 12 month period. [63456]

Ms Glenda Jackson: 8,651 night flights were counted against the noise quotas and movement limits in the period 24 October 1993 to 23 October 1994, of which 4 were by aircraft classified QC/8 and 420 (4.85 per cent.) were by aircraft classified QC/4.

11,470 night flights were counted against the noise quotas and movement limits in the period 26 October 1997 to 24 October 1998, of which one was by an aircraft classified QC/8 and 731 (6.37 per cent.) were by aircraft classified QC/4. The figures included in the above for the summer 1998 season are provisional.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many night flights were permitted at Heathrow and Gatwick airports in the year October 1992 to September 1993; and how many are due to be permitted in the year October 1998 to September 1999. [63454]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Prior to 24 October 1993, night flights at Heathrow and Gatwick were restricted on the basis of movements quotas. Since then, the night restrictions have been based on a system of movements limits and noise quotas. The night restrictions have always been set on a seasonal basis and details are available on that basis. The seasons change with the clocks.

The number of night flights permitted under the relevant restrictions in Winter 1992–93 (October-March) and Summer 1993 (March-October) were as follows:

Airport	Winter 1992–93	Summer 1993	Total
Gatwick
Delayed Departures[1]	20	30	50
NN/B[2]	815	1,780	2,595
NN/C	1,542	3,410	4,952
Total	2,377	5,220	7,597
Heathrow
Delayed Departures	30	60	90
NN/B and NN/C	3,000	2,750	5,750
Total	3,030	2,810	5,840

[1] Prior to October 1993, aircraft were classified into four groups depending on their noise performance on take-off. The noisiest types, NN/A, could not normally operate at night, apart from a small quota for delayed aircraft.

[2] At Gatwick, the movement quotas were subdivided between NN/B and NN/C aircraft as a further control on the number of take-offs and landings by the next noisiest types of aircraft. The movement quotas at Heathrow were not subdivided in this way but NN/B aircraft were barred from taking off between 0030—0500.

The number of night flights permitted under the relevant restrictions in Winter 1998–99 (October-March) and Summer 1999 (March-October) are as follows:

	Season
Airport	Winter 1998–99	Summer 1999	Total
Gatwick
Movements Limit	5,250	11,200	16,450
Noise Quota	6,820	9,550	16,370
Heathrow
Movements Limit	2,550	3,250	5,800
Noise Quota	5,000	7,000	12,000

The current restrictions comprise a maximum number of movements which can be made each season with a quota, related to an aircraft's noise classification on take-off or landing, as a supplementary measure designed to encourage the use of quieter aircraft. Each aircraft (landing or take-off) counts as one against the movement limit; it also counts against the noise quota according to its noise quota classification.

Both night restrictions regimes additionally permit movements by exempt types of aircraft, although far fewer types of aircraft are exempt under the present regime than previously. Both night restrictions regimes also include provisions for some movements to be given dispensations. The latest guidelines on dispensations were published in the second stage consultation paper on Night Restrictions at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted, which was announced on 17 November 1998, Official Report, columns 492–93.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the effect of the night flight noise point quota system at Gatwick in encouraging the use of quieter aircraft. [63457]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This is considered in the second stage of the consultation on Night Restrictions at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted issued on 17 November 1998, Official Report, columns 492–93.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what were the number of night noise quota points used at Gatwick Airport (a) between October 1993 and September 1994 and (b) in the latest available 12 month period; and to what extent the number of noise quota points used is proportional to the volume of noise at night. [63455]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Since October 1993 the night noise quotas set for Gatwick Airport have been 6,820 quota count (QC) points for each winter season and 9,550 QC points for each summer season, making an annual total of 16,370 QC points. The usage made of these quotas in the periods 24 October 1993 and 23 October 1994 inclusive was 8963.5 points; and that in the period 26 October 1997 and 25 October 1998 inclusive was 12413 points.

The figures included in the above for the summer 1998 season are provisional.

For the purposes of the night restrictions, aircraft are classified into seven QC bands, in most cases according to the noise certification data collected when the aircraft was tested to show that it met the internationally agreed noise levels. The metric EPNL (Effective Perceived Noise Level) is used for noise certification purposes, and each aircraft, depending on the engines fitted, is classified into one of seven 3EPNdB-wide QC bands. They are classified separately for take-off and landing. Therefore, the number of quota points used is proportional to the volume of noise according to the following scale.

Quota Count	Noise Classification
QC/0	less than 87 EPNdB, but in the case of jet aircraft, those having a maximum certificate take-off weight not exceeding 11,600kg.
QC/0.5	90–92.9 EPNdB
QC/1	90–92.9 EPNdB
QC/2	93–95.9 EPNdB
QC/4	96–98.9 EPNdB
QC/8	99–101.9 EPNdB
QC/16	Greater than 101.9 EPNdB

Aircraft (Disabled Access)

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he has taken to ensure that all aircraft in public service are accessible to people with disabilities. [63397]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department is leading discussions at European level to draw up common standards of access to air services for disabled people. We are also involved in similar discussions at the International level.

With our statutory advisers, the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee, and the Access to the Skies Committee, we are working too with the air industry in this country, to improve their understanding of the needs of disabled people and to encourage better provision of facilities to meet those needs.

Channel Tunnel—Liverpool Link

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the new proposals from Central Railway for opening a railway line between Liverpool and the Channel Tunnel. [63475]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Ministers have seen only the consultation documents which Central Railway recently issued. We have therefore not taken a view on the scheme.

Brown-field Sites

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his Department's definition of brown-field sites. [63615]

Mr. Raynsford: There is no specific definition of "brownfield" land. However, it is usually taken to mean land previously developed for 'urban' uses. For statistical purposes, as defined by the Department's Land Use Change Statistics, "previously-developed urban" uses include residential, transport and utilities, industry and commerce, community services, previously-developed vacant land and derelict land. Land is classified according to its use and not its location, therefore the 'urban' use can occur in rural areas.

Information on land that may be available for redevelopment is currently being collected in order to compile the first phase of the National Land Use Database. The scope of this is wider than the definition of previously-developed land used in Land Use Change Statistics.

Open-top Sightseeing Buses (London)

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of open-top sightseeing buses operating in London per day and of the average payload per bus in each of the last 12 months. [63682]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This information is not held centrally.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will provide a breakdown of the changes to the criteria for calculating the other education SSA block in the local government settlements for 1999–2000. [63830]

Ms Armstrong: The national total for the Other Education SSA for 1999–2000 has been decided in consultation with the Secretary of State for Education and Employment. The same indicators are used to distribute the other education SSA in 1999–2000 as were used in 1998–99. The unit costs for each indicator have been adjusted to take account of rescaling the unit costs to reflect the overall total of other education SSA for 1999–2000 and any updating of the data used in the calculations. In addition, a small correction has been made to the population data for 1991 used in the underlying statistical analyses.

A14 (Cambridgeshire)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from national motorway and road haulage organisations concerning the A14 in Cambridgeshire; and if he will make a statement. [63527]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We consulted very widely on our Integrated Transport Policy and Review of Trunk Roads and received a large number of comments. Organisations at national, regional and local level made it clear the problems in the Cambridge-Huntingdon area were very severe and the need for solutions was seen as a very high priority.

John Bridge, Chairman of the Road Haulage Association, met with the Highways Agency's Chief Executive, Lawrie Haynes, and John Pearman, the Area Manager, on 8 September to press the case for an early start to the multi-modal A14 study.

Improvements to the A14 north of Cambridge were withdrawn by the previous administration and proposed improvements between the M11, Junction 14 and the A1/A14 junction had not even reached public consultation stage so they were not contenders for the Targeted Investment Programme that we announced in July. We are proposing to carry out a multi-modal study of the Cambridge-Huntingdon Corridor to bring forward a comprehensive solution to the problems including looking at the potential for transfer of traffic on to other modes. Confirmation of this study was given last week and a provisional date for its start is 2000–01; this timing, as with the timing of all multi-modal studies arising from the roads review, is subject to progress on consultation with the regional planning conference.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what reports he has received from the Highways Agency concerning recent fatal accidents on the A14 in Cambridgeshire; and if he will make a statement. [63529]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Highways Agency has the facts available on all personal injury accidents. There is in place a system of reporting the most serious incidents to Ministers. The recent fatal accident reported on this basis covers the accident at Lolworth on 18 November.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will institute contingency plans for the design and routing of an upgrade of the A14 in Cambridgeshire, pending the outcome of multi-modal study for that traffic corridor. [63526]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Secretary of State has a statutory duty to review the needs of the network. We have already identified a number of safety related improvements for the Huntingdon to Cambridge section of the A14 which stem from a specific earlier study exercise. The Highways Agency will be implementing these measures by the Spring of 1999.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has held with the standing conference of East Anglian local authorities on terms of reference for a multi-modal study of the A14 corridor in Cambridgeshire. [63530]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government Office of the Eastern Region is working closely with the Standing Conference of East Anglian Local Authorities (SCEALA) on the technical work leading to the public exhibition of the Draft Regional Planning Guidance for East Anglia, which takes place in February. On 10 December we published our formal consultation with the Regional planning conference on the study programme announced in "A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England". This consultation seeks the Conference's views on the timing, coverage, and scope of the studies. The consultation paper proposes that the Cambridge-Huntingdon study should fall in the second tranche of multi-modal studies. There is a wide range of issues in the corridor including congestion, safety, environment, possible road, bus and rail proposals as well as proposals for significant development that will have to form part of any broad assessment of potential transport solutions.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what safety improvements on the A14 in Cambridgeshire have been commissioned by the Highways Agency. [63535]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The whole of the A14 (from M6 to Felixstowe) is being considered as an integral route. As part of that a package of measures along the length of the A14 in Cambridgeshire is being progressed:

West of A1 conversion of four existing single level junctions to two level;

Between Huntingdon and Cambridge—package of safety measures as described in my answer today to PQ63531, at column 314; between Cambridge and Newmarket—package of safety measures as described in my answer today to PQ63531, at column 314.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what studies he has evaluated concerning the potential for improvements in safety on the A14 in Cambridgeshire; and what action he proposes to take on those studies. [63531]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Studies and improvements can be broken down into three distinct lengths, working from east to west as follows:

(a) The Highways Agency is carrying out studies to identify what safety improvements can be made to the Histon (B1049) and Milton (A10) interchanges north of Cambridge. As an interim measure, the Agency is providing 'queue warning signs' on both carriageways of the trunk road approaching each junction. The signs will be in place by the end of January 1999.

(b) In 1995 a study was commissioned from consulting engineers, Thorburn Colquhoun, to investigate accidents and congestion on the A14 between Huntingdon and Cambridge. This study suggested measures that could be taken to improve safety on the A14. The first stage of these improvements was carried out in 1995–96 when speed cameras were provided to help reduce traffic speeds. Since that time, and from that study, the Highways Agency has further developed a strategy of safety related improvement measures which will shortly be implemented. These focus on particular problems at specific locations which will be carried out by Spring 1999:

(i) Improvement to various junctions by small scale widening, replacing existing chevrons with yellow backed signs, install bend warning signs with advisory speed limits, laying anti-skid at the ends of the diverge tapers and providing countdown markers on the approaches to the diverge tapers;

(ii) Improvements within Girton Interchange to improve lane discipline and the flow of traffic;

(iii) The construction of an acceleration lane to Hemingford Abbots eastbound carriageway.

(c) Further studies are already in place to look at additional safety improvements at various locations;

(d) Schemes are being prepared to change four existing single level junctions to two level between Thrapston and Brampton. They comprise the provision of bridges with full connections to the A14 at Polopit Road, the B663, Leighton Bromswold and Wooley/Easton junctions together with an overbridge at Chainbridge Lane. The Little Meadow crossing will be closed and alternative access arrangements for land and property owners made. All other central reserve gaps will be closed and the present footpath/bridleway crossing diverted to the proposed structures. All direct access points will be closed and alternative means of access put in place.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what increase in (a) noise and (b) pollutant emissions has occurred along the A14 in the last five years. [63528]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No readings are available to determine the increase in noise and pollution.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his estimate of the growth of (a) HGV traffic and (b) all road traffic on the A14 between Huntingdon and Cambridge in the last three years. [63533]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Over the last three years the total growth in traffic on this section of the A14 has been recorded as follows:

(a) HGV traffic—approximately 7.5 per cent.

(b) All vehicles—approximately 9.0 per cent.

Dual Carriageways (Traffic Levels)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which two-lane dual carriageways in England, not of motorway standard, currently carry the highest levels of road traffic. [63532]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In 1997 the highest level of road traffic on non-motorway, two lane dual carriageways, in England, recorded as an Annual Average Daily Traffic (AADT) flow was 84,000 vehicles on the A1. From readily available records, the ten busiest sections are listed. Lengths of two lane dual carriageway less than 2.5km, which predominantly occur in Urban areas, have been excluded:

Road	Location	Road class	AADT
A1	Gateshead Western By-pass	Trunk	84,000
A1	Newcastle Western By-pass	Trunk	79,000
A27	Havant-Chichester	Trunk	75,000
A127	M25-Southend	Principal	72,000
A45	M1-Northampton	Principal	71,000
A66	Darlington-Middlesborough	Principal	67,000
A14	Hungtingdon-Cambridge	Trunk	66,000
A23	Brighton-Crawley	Trunk	65,000
A312	Hayes By-pass	Principal	61,000
A34	Oxford-Abingdon	Trunk	61,000

Public Refuse Incinerators

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance his Department has issued to local authorities regarding the siting of public refuse incinerators. [63410]

Mr. Raynsford: Government guidance on the siting of incinerators is included in Planning Policy Guidance note 23 "Planning and Pollution Control". This will be updated soon when Planning Policy Guidance note 10 "Planning and Waste Management" is published. the Department also issued a guidance note to local authorities in August, 1997, on the provision of incinerators in connection with the slaughter of cattle under the "Over Thirty Months Scheme".

Rail Services (Punctuality)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each train operating company the number of days in the last 12 months which the company excluded from its calculation of punctuality statistics on the ground that there was no effective service. [63419]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No days are excluded from the OPRAF incentive schemes on the grounds of failure to provide an effective service. Neither are days taken out of the OPRAF contractual enforcement regime governing the relationship with operators on these grounds.

However, the Passengers Charter allows for days to be declared "Void" in a particular Charter Group if no effective service is provided on a particular day. If this happens, season tickets of one month or more will be extended or similar compensation arranged. The OPRAF Bulletin includes punctuality statistics based on the Passenger Charter and from the next edition will include details of the number of void days. Currently void days are generally listed at stations on the Charter Performance Posters.

For the 12 months up to the end of Period 8 (14 November) the following days have been declared void.

Local Authority Housing (Resource Accounting)

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to consult on the introduction of resource accounting for local authority housing. [64079]

Ms Armstrong: We will be publishing a consultation paper "A New Financial Framework for Local Authority Housing: Resource Accounting in the Housing Revenue Account" on 15 December, allowing until 19 March for comments. The statement on Housing and Regeneration Policy following the Comprehensive Spending Review, on 21 July 1998, Official Report, column 468, made clear our intention that local authorities should take a more business-like approach to managing their housing. Local authority housing is a valuable asset. Introducing new-style housing revenue accounts based on a form of resource accounting is one of a number of proposals, including our plans to introduce a Best Value regime for local authorities, to modernise the approach to housing management and encourage greater tenant involvement.

The proposed new financial framework will show clearly the value of housing, the expenditure needed to maintain it and the subsidy required to keep rents below market levels.

Countryside (Public Access)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place copies of the responses to his consultation document on Access to the Open Countryside in England and Wales in the Library. [63784]

Mr. Meacher: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo) on 27 October 1998, Official Report, column 103.

Rail Passengers (Illness)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many incidents of passengers being taken seriously ill on train journeys have occurred in each of the past five years. [63810]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information requested is not collected by train operating companies.

Sellafield

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his plans for further public consultation on the application by BNFL to operate its MOX plant at Sellafield. [63904]

Mr. Meale: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment on 3 November 1998, Official Report, column 454.

Oil Production (Safety)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the relative risk of oil spillage from a production and distribution system using (a) floating production storage and offloading facilities and tankers to transport oil and (b) fixed production platforms and pipelines. [63087]

Mr. Battle: I have been asked to reply.

The Licensing conditions and the Merchant Shipping (Oil Pollution Preparedness, Response and Co-operation Convention) Regulations which were implemented earlier this year require a risk-based assessment to be made of each offshore production facility prior to production taking place.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in what ways the emergency infrastructure is being modified to deal with a potential pollution incident in the Atlantic Frontier Region following the granting of licences for oil production there. [63053]

Mr. Battle: I have been asked to reply.

The Merchant Shipping (Oil Pollution Preparedness, Response and Co-operation Convention) Regulations implemented in May this year require a risk-based assessment of any potential pollution incident before the operation can be carried out, regardless of where the operation is taking place.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will make an announcement about the membership of the boards of the regional development agencies. [64082]

Mr. Prescott: The board members of the eight Regional Development Agencies outside London will be as follows:

These boards fulfil the commitment we gave in our White Paper "Building Partnerships for Prosperity" to reflect an appropriate balance of regional interests. We have already announced that the boards will be led by chairmen with solid business backgrounds. As regards the main regional stakeholders, within each board business experience dominates; four members are drawn from local government reflecting a balance between type and size of authority, geographical spread and party balance; and at least one member on each board can offer a strong rural perspective together with others who have relevant rural experience. Each board also offers expertise from the field of education and the trades union movement and, across the country as a whole, the boards offer significant experience of the voluntary sector. The White Paper had envisaged boards of twelve but, while it has proved possible to constrain the potential size of the board by choosing members who can offer a range of expertise, we have decided that the full range of expertise necessary can only be achieved, at this stage, with boards of thirteen.

All boards will have at least three women—women represent about a quarter of the membership overall. This compares well with other business focused NDPBs. Ethnic minorities make up about 5 per cent. of the board membership.

I have today published a Departmental press release which gives biographical details of the board members. Copies have been placed in the Library.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Holding Centres (Lay Visitors)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she received a report on the outcome of consultations between the Police Authority and the Independent Commissioner for the Holding Centres on the role of lay visitors' access to suspects detained under emergency legislation; and if she will make a statement. [62263]

Mr. Ingram: The Secretary of State has received no such report. The Government did however consult on the Independent Commissioner's recommendation that Lay Visitors should have their sphere of operation extended to include the Holding Centres. It concluded that no change should be made to the remit of the Lay Visitors, not least because an extension of their role of the nature proposed might leave them open to duress and intimidation.

The Government look forward to the day when the Holding Centres are no longer needed. Meanwhile the Government do not envisage any merging of the roles of the Independent Commissioner and the Lay Visitors.

Prisoner Releases

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the prisoners who have been released under the terms of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998 by (a) name, (b) organisation, (c) length of sentence actually served and (d) category of offence. [62941]

Mr. Ingram: On 8 December 1998 the total of prisoners who have been released under the provisions of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998 has reached 221. Of those released, 68 are life sentence prisoners (36 loyalist, 29 republican and 3 others) and 153 fixed term prisoners (64 loyalist, 84 republican and 5 others).

The Northern Ireland Prison Service does not release the names or the perceived affiliation of individual prisoners. The category of offences committed could only be given at disproportionate cost.

Football

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations her Department has received from (a) the Association of Football Premier League and (b) Premier League clubs about basing a Premier League club in Belfast. [62693]

Mr. Paul Murphy: No representations have been received by my Department from either organisation.

Discussions are ongoing between officials and a private sector consortium, on the consortium's proposal to build a new sports stadium in Belfast, which could host a Premier League club. There has been no direct contact between officials and either the football authorities in England or any Premier League club.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in her Department are currently on secondment from private companies; and if she will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62819]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The information for the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments is as follows:

Number	Company	Current responsibilities within government
2	British Telecom	Development of Electronic Service delivery
—	—	Special Adviser on Software Development
1	Capita Business Consultants	Industrial Accountancy
1	Helm Corporation Moore Stevens (Accountants)	Assisting Local Government Audit Branch with the completion of the statutory audits of local authority
1	Manufacturing and Technology Partnership	Green Economy—grant applications in Environmental Management Audit Scheme
2	Short Brothers PLC	Enhancing the continuous improvement unit's expertise in the drive to improve the level of take-up across the NICS and other customer organisations of self-assessment under the Business Excellence Model
—	—	Local Sourcing consultant

Victims of Violence

Mr. Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the Government will be taking to implement Sir Kenneth Bloomfield's recommendation that effective targeting of the special needs of victims of violence forms part of the Targeting Social Need objective (para. 5.17). [62686]

Mr. Ingram: As Minister with responsibility for Victims, I have established the Victims Liaison Unit to take forward implementation of the recommendations in Sir Kenneth Bloomfield's report. The Unit has just concluded a period of extensive consultation with victims, their families and their representatives on Sir Kenneth's recommendations. The responses to that consultation are now being considered and will inform the process of prioritising the next steps in addressing the needs identified in the report. I intend to make further announcements on the way forward in the New Year, once the outcome of the consultation exercise is known.

Mr. Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the review of compensation arrangements will cover the treatment of relatives of people who were not financially contributing to a household. [62677]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 7 December 1998]: The Review has been asked to advise the Government on the fitness for purpose of the criminal injuries compensation arrangements in Northern Ireland. It is for Sir Kenneth Bloomfield, who is chairing the Review, to decide precisely what needs to be examined to fulfil this wide-ranging remit. I understand, however, that the whole question of compensation for the relatives of victims is being looked at as part of the Review Body's deliberations on the future of criminal injuries compensation arrangements in Northern Ireland.

Housing

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the assessment of the responses to the housing policy review consultative document, Building on Success, has been completed; what further provision will be made relating to the safety and quality of houses in multiple occupancy in Northern Ireland; and if she will make a statement. [63238]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The assessment of the responses to the Housing Policy Review conducted under the previous Government, was completed in early 1996. Decisions based on that assessment were published in July 1996, in a document 'Building on Success—the Way Ahead'. With one exception, the decisions were subsequently endorsed by the present Government.

With specific reference to Houses in Multiple Occupation, it was proposed to monitor the introduction of the proposals in England and Wales, before considering the implications for Northern Ireland. That remains the case, in order to inform decision making by the Assembly, which will have responsibility for housing matters in future.

Mixed-sex Hospital Wards

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many mental health hospitals or psychiatric units in Northern Ireland have mixed-sex wards; and if she will list them. [63788]

Mr. McFall: The following mental health hospitals and psychiatric units have mixed sex wards:

Hospitals	Units
Holywell, Antrim	Whiteabbey Hospital, Whiteabbey
Gransha, Londonderry	Ross Thompson Unit, Ballymoney
Tyrone and Fermanagh, Omagh	Ards Hospital, Newtownards
Downshire, Downpatrick	Belfast City Hospital, Belfast
St. Lukes, Armagh	Lagan Valley Hospital, Lisburn
	Mater Hospital, Belfast
	Craigavon Area Hospital, Craigavon

Northern Ireland Compact

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the launch of the Northern Ireland Compact. [64124]

Marjorie Mowlam: The Compact between Government and the Voluntary and Community Sector in Northern Ireland will be laid before the House on Monday 14 December and launched the same day. It is a jointly-prepared, agreed statement of the general principles and the shared values which will govern the further development of the relationship between Government and the voluntary and community sector in Northern Ireland.

The Northern Ireland Compact complements recently launched sister Compacts in England, Scotland and Wales and fulfils another of the Government's pre-election commitments. It will cement a partnership based on shared values and mutual respect, enabling us better to identify and tackle needs, to strengthen communities and to build a more tolerant, participative, inclusive and peaceful society in Northern Ireland.

DEFENCE

Departmental Land, Lymington

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of his Department's land at Beckley Marsh, Lymington. [62774]

Mr. Doug Henderson: My Department has no record of any land holdings at Beckley Marsh and cannot identify the piece of land in question.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people in his Department are currently on secondment from private companies; and if he will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62822]

Mr. Doug Henderson: My Department is keen to build links with industry and commerce and believes the Whitehall-wide Interchange programme which encourages outward and inward secondment can assist this process. We encourage a range of options including non-executive advisory appointments to MOD boards, joint training, short attachments and secondments of three months or more. As at 1 December the MOD has twenty-one inward secondees from private companies as follows:

Name of secondee: (in alphabetical order)	Name of private company from which seconded	Responsibilities on secondment
Mr. Brian Bowden	Johnson Controls Calibration	Calibration Technician, DERA
Mr. David Bridge	Tarmac ServiceMaster Ltd.	Management of non-clinical services for The Health Alliance British Forces Germany
Mr. Stephen Cobb	British Aerospace plc	Supporting project work in the Directorate of Future Systems (Air)
Mr. Leslie Cooke	Johnson Controls Calibration	Calibration Technician, DERA
Mr. Stanley Dawes	Johnson Controls Calibration	Calibration Technician, DERA
Mr. Tony Edwards	TI Group plc	Head of Defence Export Services
Mr. James Evans	Johnson Controls Calibration	Manager and Head of Laboratory, DERA
Mr. Peter Farmer	British Aerospace plc	To assist with the development of the MOD's Continuous Acquisition & Life Cycle Support) (CALS) policy for the PE
Mr. Bruce Harmsworth	PA Consulting	Financial and Commercial adviser to the Procurement Executive Private Finance Unit
Mr. Steven Jones	Johnson Controls Calibration	Calibration Technician, DERA
Mr. Stephen Kenny	Wragge & Co.	Banking adviser to the Procurement Executive Private Finance Unit
Mr. Andrew Maltby	Devonport Royal Dockyard Ltd.	Project Manager in the Directorate of Nuclear Propulsion
Mr. John Martlew	Johnson Controls Calibration	Calibration Technician, DERA

Name of secondee: (in alphabetical order)	Name of private company from which seconded	Responsibilities on secondment
Sir Charles Masefield	British Aerospace plc	Head of Defence Export Services[1]
Mr. Christopher Miller	Johnson Controls Calibration	Technical Manager, DERA
Mr. Moolamkuhzhiel Nair	Post Office Support Services, Concept 2000	To deal with the advise on Intellectual Property Rights issues
Mr. Robert Potts	Rolls Royce Ltd.	To assist with the maintenance and monitoring of the Electric Ship Programme in the Ship Support Agency
Mr. David Scargill	Johnson Controls Calibration	Head of Laboratory, DERA
Mr. Paul Sharman	Johnson Controls Calibration	Technical Manager, DERA
Mr. Colin Shead	GEC Marconi Radar and Defence Systems	To develop and assist in the implementation of MOD's Continuous Acquisition & Life Cycle Support (CALS) Policy
Ms Miranda Voyle	Simmons & Simmons	To provide legal advice in the Commercial and Legal Section of the Procurement Executive's Private Finance Unit

[1] Sir Charles Masefield's appointment is due to end on 13 December 1998

Scammel Commander Tank Transporter

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the minimum number of axles permitted for United Kingdom civilian use under Category 3 of the authorisation of Special (General) Orders; if the Scammel Commander Military Transporter complies; and if Scammel Commander transporters carrying (a) Challenger I tanks and (b) Challenger II tanks are permitted to use public highways in the United Kingdom. [62083]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 8 December 1998]: The minimum number of axles permitted for United Kingdom civilian use under Category 3, Article 18, of the authorisation of Special (General) Orders is currently 6. The Scammel Commander Military Transporter has 5 axles but under the military exemption granted by Special Types (General) Orders Article 6, schedule 1, is permitted to carry challenger tanks on public highways in the United Kingdom.

Low-flying Aircraft

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the number of complaints from members of the public about low-flying military aircraft in England and Wales in each of the last three years. [63241]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The number of inquiries and complaints received from addresses in England and Wales about aircraft operating within the UK Low Flying System and recorded centrally are shown in the table.

Year	England	Wales
1996	4,290	908
1997	3,714	617
1998 (January-November)	3,512	545

Danish Tour Guide (Cyprus)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the British soldiers convicted of causing the death of the Danish tour guide in Cyprus have been dismissed from the Army; and if he will make a statement. [63264]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The three soldiers convicted of causing the death of the Danish Tour Guide in Cyprus were discharged on 22 April 1996 under paragraph 9.404 of Queen's Regulations for the Army for misconduct, having been sentenced by a Cypriot civilian court to imprisonment.

Gulf War Veterans

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to involve the National Regional Poison Centres in the medical assessments of veterans of the Gulf War and their families. [62957]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 9 December 1998]: Physicians at the MOD's Medical Assessment Programme (MAP) conduct a full medical examination, including a standard range of physical tests, on Gulf veterans who are referred there. Additional tests or referrals to other consultants or specialists may be required on a case by case basis. In these circumstances, MAP patients are sent for further tests or referrals according to the clinical judgment of the examining physician. Accordingly, the MAP may make use of the National Poisons Information Service (also known as National Regional Poison Centres) in the medical assessment of Gulf veterans as appropriate but has no plans to do so as a matter of routine.

The MAP was established in July 1993 to examine UK Gulf veterans who were concerned that their health had been adversely affected by service in the Gulf conflict. It is open to all Service personnel and MOD civilians who served in the Gulf region at any time between August 1990 and July 1991. Individuals who worked for contractors providing direct support to UK operations during the Gulf conflict may also attend the MAP. The vast majority of those who have attended the MAP are Gulf veterans themselves. However, where medically appropriate, veterans' partners are also welcome to attend and a small number have done so.

Applications (Armed Services)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with (a) ministerial colleagues and (b) others on reforming the entry requirements for the armed services. [63160]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Eligibility criteria for entry into the Armed Forces are kept under constant review. A review of all nationality eligibility rules was carried out at the beginning of this year, during which officials in my Department consulted with their counterparts in the Cabinet Office, Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Home Office. The results of the review were conveyed to the House on 18 February 1998, Official Report, columns 665–66.

A review of all other basic eligibility criteria is nearing completion. The aim of this review has been to determine whether any eligibility criteria are unnecessarily restrictive, and could therefore be relaxed.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many applications to join the armed services have been refused in each of the last five years. [63161]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Details of the number of applicants who were refused entry into the Armed Forces are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However, the numbers of applicants and enlistments for each Service in the last five financial years were as follows:

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98
Naval Service
Applications	[1]—	[1]—	9,696	12,879	14,252
Enlistments	1,535	1,301	2,337	3,959	4,600
Army
Applications	36,388	53,333	43,491	40,491	42,247
Enlistments	9,576	10,684	12,911	15,522	15,379
RAF
Applications	13,304	15,398	17,213	15,510	12,767
Enlistments	841	1,022	2,424	2,684	3,526

Note:
[1] Details of number of Naval Service applicants not available

Applicants may not subsequently be enlisted for a variety of reasons. For example, they may be ineligible under one or more of the basic eligibility criteria, have criminal convictions that are not acceptable, may fail the recruiting test, prove unsuitable at interview, or perhaps fail their medical. Additionally, a number of applicants for each Service voluntarily withdraw their applications before they are enlisted.

Defence Export Services Organisation

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will state the salary, pension entitlement and present compensation rights for early termination of contract of the new head of the Defence Export Services Organisation from the Government, what top-ups to those provisions have been made by external sources; and which external sources are providing the top-ups. [62922]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 10 December 1998]: Mr. Tony Edwards, the new Head of Defence Export Services, will receive a salary from the Ministry of Defence of £165,000 a year, plus an annual performance related bonus of up to £15,000. In addition, the Department will contribute towards his superannuation up to a maximum of 28 per cent. of the Ministry of Defence salary element.

The Defence Industries Council, acting on behalf of the defence industry as a whole, are providing a top-up element so that his basic remuneration package will remain on a par with what he was receiving from TI Group plc.

Mr. Edwards is on loan to the Department from TI Group plc. for the duration his appointment as Head of Defence Export Services; under the terms of the secondment agreement, compensation rights for early termination of the agreement do not apply.

REME (Chorley)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what day and by whom the decision was taken to move 101 Battalion REME from Chorley Barracks to Queensferry. [63650]

Mr. Doug Henderson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence announced his decision on the future structure of the Territorial Army to the House on 17 November 1998, Official Report, columns 749–52.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what alternative attachments he proposes for 101 REME army cadets, Chorley, following the transfer of 101 Battalion REME from Chorley to Queensferry. [63616]

Mr. Doug Henderson: New sponsorship and affiliation arrangements for the Chorley Cadets will be arranged with Territorial and Regular Army units in the area.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evidence he has received from Land Command that the decision to move 101 Battalion REME from Chorley to Queensferry will bring value for money. [63651]

Mr. Doug Henderson: As my hon. Friend will be aware from our previous correspondence concerning Territorial Army restructuring, the decision to move 101 Battalion REME from Chorley to Queensferry was not financially motivated. An assessment has nevertheless been made that the move should provide value for money.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the REME cadets based at the Devonshire Road Barracks, Chorley, will continue to operate from that barracks; [63625]

(2) what are his plans for the future army cadet presence at the Devonshire Road Barracks in Chorley. [63626]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Plans for the future of the cadets currently housed at the Devonshire Road Barracks in Chorley are being developed at present. I will write to my hon. Friend when the plans are complete, and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Defence Medical Services

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Defence Medical Services. [63988]

Mr. George Robertson: The Strategic Defence Review, SDR, acknowledged the importance of medical support for defence, and identified a number of shortfalls, both in peacetime care and in operational medical support.

As a result of the SDR, I announced plans for significant investment in additional medical personnel and equipment of about £140 million over the next four years.

Although the SDR provided funding for substantial improvements to our medical capabilities, this did not by itself solve all the immediate problems. The Defence Medical Services, DMS, organisation continues to suffer from a number of interrelated difficulties which are hindering it in fulfilling its objectives and which are also affecting morale. In particular, serious staffing shortages combined with a high level of operational deployment have led to increased turbulence for DMS staff and their families. There is also serious concern about the continued viability of the Royal Hospital, Haslar.

I therefore set work in hand in July with the aim of producing a strategy for the resolution of these problems and to give DMS personnel a clear and positive vision of the future. I will today be publishing a summary of our findings in a booklet "The Defence Medical Services—A Strategy for the Future", copies of which will be placed in the Library of the House.

The key proposals include:

A major recruiting campaign, properly co-ordinated and targeted, aimed at both new entry Regulars and Reserves, and at a small number of direct entry ready-trained personnel to fill the most pressing shortfalls.

Tackling a range of key personnel issues to address the main problems felt by people in the DMS, including identifying the causes of overstretch and more effective ways of reducing it, harmonising different conditions of service within the DMS and addressing concerns about the need to maintain military standards and ethos while working in NHS hospitals.

Restructured Secondary Care arrangements including: a new Centre for Defence Medicine to act as a focal point for the DMS and a centre of excellence for training and research; a new Ministry of Defence Hospital Unit in Portsmouth; the eventual closure of the Royal Hospital Haslar once these new arrangements are in place; and a clearer responsibility for the Defence Secondary Care Agency to co-ordinate treatment for Service personnel.

A reorganisation of the DMS to improve management and financial co-ordination, including the creation of a new Chief of Staff post on the Surgeon General's staff to co-ordinate planning, personnel management, training, finance and the implementation of change.

Developing closer relations with the NHS, including NHS representation on the two key DMS management boards, and improved arrangements at local level.

These proposals will have a significant impact both within the DMS and outside Defence, particularly in the Portsmouth area. We will immediately begin a period of consultation on our proposals and will listen closely to the views of others, including the local community around Gosport, and the Trade Unions that represent our civilian staff. We will be working closely with the National Health Service in taking our proposals forward.

Together the proposals represent a new strategy for the DMS which addresses the very difficult problems being experienced at the moment and looks ahead to the future. We value the DMS, and we plan to rebuild it to meet the needs of our Armed Forces both on operations and in peacetime. It will provide a more attractive and rewarding career not only for those already serving but also for those thinking of joining. Above all, it will be a service in which all concerned can have confidence for the future.

Research Fellowship Scheme

Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's new post-doctoral research fellowship scheme. [63989]

Mr. George Robertson: I am pleased to announce the launch of the MOD's new Post-Doctoral Research Fellowships. The aims of this scheme are to encourage new talent in the defence field; maintain interest in defence studies in the academic community; and encourage informed debate on defence issues. Each fellowship is awarded for a three-year period and funded jointly by the MOD and the academic institution at which the fellow is based. The cost to the MOD is £15,000 per annum for each fellow.

From a strong field, we have been able to select three outstanding fellows. A dedicated Defence Diplomacy Fellowship has been awarded to Dr. Irene Isakova, a Russian national. Dr. Isakova will undertake her research with the Centre for Defence Studies at King's College London, where she will focus on the impact and effectiveness of our Defence Diplomacy initiative in and with Russia. A further two fellowships have been awarded to Dr. Asifa Hussain from the Scottish Centre for War Studies at Glasgow University, and Dr. Tanya Ogilvie-White from the Mountbatten Centre at Southampton University. Dr. Hussain's research will focus on the recruitment of ethnic minorities, race relations and equal opportunities in the Armed Forces, and Dr. Ogilvie-White will undertake research into nuclear proliferation issues. Each of these candidates is ideally placed to provide the MOD with a broader, alternative perspective on these key issues.

It is our intention that additional fellowships will now be awarded on an annual basis.

Phoenix Programme

Mr. Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the current status of the PHOENIX programme. [64001]

Mr. Spellar: I am pleased to announce that the PHOENIX Unmanned Aerial Vehicle system has now entered service with the Army, following successful conversion training by both 32 and 39 Regiments Royal Artillery and use of the system in exercises, where it performed well. PHOENIX will provide an important new surveillance and target acquisition system for the British Army.

Defence Bills Agency

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the outcome of the periodic review of the Defence Bills Agency. [64087]

Mr. Spellar: The Periodic Review showed that the Defence Bills Agency, DBA, had performed well against the targets set in the initial Service Level Agreement between the Agency and its MOD customers. The Agency has contained its operating costs with an increased volume of business, achieved higher standards of quality and responded to considerable challenges in the development of Resource Accounting and Budgeting. Following initial operating cost savings of 25 per cent. in the first year, the Agency has realised further efficiencies and is now focusing on transaction costs as the key benchmark for future operations. A summary of this report is being placed in the Library of the House.

The Review was carried out in accordance with the Government's policy of securing best value for money in the provision of Services. We have concluded that this aim can best be achieved by extending Agency status for DBA for a further five years from 1 April 1999. The Agency will be given new and more challenging targets to make progressive reductions in transaction costs, while maintaining and further improving the quality of service, and meeting the Government's commitment to the prompt payment of bills. These targets will be included in a revised Framework Document which will be published in due course.

Chile

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the names of each Royal Navy vessel which has visited Chile in the last five years and the dates and duration of the visits; and what future visits to Chile by Royal Navy vessels are planned. [63409]

Mr. George Robertson: The following visits have been made to Chile by Royal Navy vessels in the last five years:

SCOTLAND

Driving (Tranquillisers)

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research the Government have evaluated into driving whilst prescribed (a) anxiolytic benzodiazepines and (b) the sleeping tablet Zopiclone. [62682]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have not commissioned specific research about the drugs mentioned, but a full evaluation of relevant research is being undertaken by the Medicines Control Agency.

The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions is presently conducting a three-year survey, which started in October 1996, into the incidence of drugs (legal or illegal) in fatal road accident victims. A report on interim results to 7 January 1998 was published on 11 February 1998. My written answer of that date, Official Report, column 306, explained that a copy was being placed in the Library.

This survey will not provide evidence of accident causation but it will help to establish the extent of drug use among road users. The interim results show that medicinal drugs were present in some 6 per cent. of road accident fatalities (drivers, passengers, pedestrians, cyclists).

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures the Government have taken to encourage GPs to issue warnings concerning the danger of driving when using (a) Valium, (b) Librium, (c) Ativan and (d) other types of tranquilliser. [62683]

Mr. Galbraith: Where there is the possibility that certain medicinal products may cause deterioration of the skills required for driving, the product information provided to doctors and pharmacists recommends that patients should be warned that they may suffer side-effects which may impair their ability to drive. Although these side-effects may wear off, the patient should ensure that they are not affected before driving.

In addition, the British National Formulary (BNF), which provides doctors, pharmacists and other health-care professionals with sound up-to-date information about the use of medicines, advises prescribers to warn patients if treatment is likely to affect their ability to drive. It also recommends that pharmacists provide cautionary and advisory labels with certain medicinal products.

The Medicines Control Agency is aware of public concern that the side-effects of some medicines may be causing road traffic accidents. In response to recent publications they are currently reviewing all available evidence to determine whether there may be a case for strengthening product information, ensuring that Patient Information Leaflets and packaging are updated if necessary.

Registers of Scotland

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Registers of Scotland are prohibited from providing copies of documents relating to registered interests other than those referred to in the title sheet; if he plans to reform the Land Register so that land certificates disclose information about previous proprietors and the prices paid by them; if the rights of access of members of the public and firms of private searchers to all information contained in the Land Register of Scotland, the Register of Sasines and the Register of Inhibitions and Adjudications are to be maintained; and if he will make a statement. [63117]

Mr. McLeish: Section 6(5) of the Land Register (Scotland) Act 1979 requires the Keeper to issue to any person applying, a copy, authenticated or otherwise, of any Title Sheet or part thereof or of any document referred to in a Title Sheet. There are no plans at present to reform the Land Register so that Land Certificates disclose information about previous proprietors and the prices paid by them.

The existing statutory rights of access to the Land Register, the Register of Sasines and the Register of Inhibitions and Adjudications will continue to be maintained. The ability to exercise these rights will be enhanced by remote electronic access to be provided early in 1999.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recommendations the Scottish Law Commission has made regarding the abolition of the diligence of inhibitions on the dependence of Court actions; what was the total sum (a) paid by Registers of Scotland in respect of legal expenses of the petitioners and (b) incurred by Registers of Scotland to the Scottish Officer in relation to the action of Judicial Review raised by Millar & Bryce Ltd. and two other firms against Registers of Scotland. [63118]

Mr. McLeish: The Scottish Law Commission recently published its Report on Diligence on the Dependence and Admiralty Arrestments (Scot. Law Com. No. 164). This Report contains the Commission's recommendations for reform of the diligence of inhibition on the dependence of actions.

The total sums paid by Registers of Scotland in relation to the action of Judicial Review raised by Millar & Bryce Ltd. and 2 other firms of private searchers were as follows: (a) an agreed settlement of £25,000 in respect of the judicially awarded expenses of the petitioners and (b) £36,807.21 in respect of Registers of Scotland expenses.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many of the registration counties in Scotland for the purpose of registration of deeds are currently operational; and when the remainder are to become operational. [63119]

Mr. McLeish: There are currently 14 countries operational under the Land Register of Scotland. These are: Renfrew, Dumbarton, Lanark, Glasgow, Clackmannan, West Lothian, Stirling, Fife, Aberdeen, Kincardine, Ayr, Dumfries, Wigtown and Kirkcudbright. The programme for the completion of the extension of the Land Register programme is as follows:

1 April 1999: Perth, Angus, Kinross

1 October 1999: Berwick, East Lothian, Roxburgh, Selkirk, Peebles

1 April 2000: Argyll and Bute

1 April 2001: Midlothian

1 April 2002: Inverness and Nairn

1 April 2003: Banff, Moray, Ross and Cromarty, Caithness, Sutherland, Orkney, Zetland.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial return is required to be made by the executive agency Registers of Scotland in terms of percentage return on capital, taking account of the average cost of first registration under the Land Registration (Scotland) Act 1979 and the average income for registration due in respect of each transaction; if the report of the quinquennial review currently being carried out by KPMG Consultants will be made available for consultation with those interests affected by its conclusions; and if he will make a statement. [63120]

Mr. McLeish: In terms of its status as a Trading Fund under the Government Trading Funds Act 1973, the Agency is required to make a 6 per cent. return on capital employed across the range of its activities. This target will be reviewed from time to time.

The final report resulting from the Quinquennial Review of the Registers of Scotland Executive Agency will be made available to interested parties once the Secretary of State has announced the outcome of the review.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in his Department are currently on secondment from private companies; and if he will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62823]

Mr. Dewar: There are currently seven people on secondment from private companies in The Scottish Office. Their names, companies and current responsibilities within government are detailed as follows:

Name	Company	Current responsibilities
Barrie Allison	Balfour and Manson Solicitors	Solicitors Office
Lorna Fleming	Balfour and Manson Solicitors	Solicitors Office
Julia Jamieson	Fife Careers Ltd.	Education Department—Skills and Life Long Learning
Valerie Mathieson	Shepherd and Wedderburn Solicitors	Solicitors Office—participating in reciprocal trainee scheme
Douglas Middleton	Bank of Scotland	Department of Health—Private Finance Unit
Martin Mustard	Project Management International PLC	Parliament Building Division
Terry Kirchin	British Petroleum PLC	Personnel Division—Devolution Planning

The Scottish Office is committed to increasing the quality and quantity of its interchange activity, in all its forms, and this year saw a good deal of activity, both at Senior Civil Servant level and below.

Insurance (Genetics)

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures his Department will take to encourage the insurance industry to develop alternative options for those applicants whose genetic status makes it difficult to purchase standard products. [62684]

Mr. Galbraith: The Government recently published their response to the Human Genetics Advisory Commission (HGAC) "Report on the Implications of Genetic Testing for the Insurance Industry", and are currently in discussions with the insurance industry and others on the necessary follow-up action.

It is already a requirement of the Code of Practice on Genetic Testing issued by the Association of British Insurers that insurance companies must consider whether constructive alternatives can be offered to an applicant where a genetic risk is too great to insure. It is sometimes possible for existing products to be adapted to suit individual circumstances and enable people with genetic disorders to obtain insurance. The Government believe it important that people with a family history of a genetic disorder discuss their insurance needs with insurance companies and do not assume they are uninsurable.

Secondary School Pupils

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when advanced higher qualifications will be available to secondary school pupils in Scotland. [62980]

Mrs. Liddell: The first Advanced Higher courses will run in the 2000–01 session, leading to awards in 2001.

Coalfield Regeneration

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to increase the sums available for the regeneration of former coalfields; and if he will make a statement. [62679]

Mr. Macdonald: My right hon. Friend is currently considering how best to support the regeneration of former coalfields in Scotland, including the resources to be made available for this, and will make a further announcement shortly.

Scottish Parliament

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to recruit additional civil servants to service the demands of the Scottish Parliament. [62680]

Mr. Dewar: Action is in hand by The Scottish Office to recruit around 170 staff to service the Scottish Parliament. After devolution, staff carrying out these duties will be employees of the Scottish Parliament Corporate Body.

Acute Beds

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many acute beds were available in each health board area in Scotland in each year since 1990–91. [63131]

Mr. Galbraith: The information is set out in the table:

Criminal Records

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for implementing Part V of the Police Act 1997 in Scotland providing for extended access to criminal record checks for employment vetting and other purposes. [64214]

Mr. McLeish: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary is announcing today that in order to implement Part V of the Police Act 1997 in England and Wales the Home Office will set up a Criminal Records Bureau. In Scotland the work of disclosing criminal record information will be carried out by the Scottish Criminal Record Office (SCRO), which is already well established as a central vetting authority.

The Government's main objective in introducing these arrangements is to strengthen the safeguards for the protection of children. In line with this and to ensure a smooth transition from the current arrangements for employment vetting checks, the SCRO will phase in the issue of three new types of certificates provided for under the Act. Top priority will be given to the issue of certificates for those seeking positions that will involve regular unsupervised access to children. The scheme is to be self-financing with all applicants for certificates being charged a fee which, depending on the level of certificate sought, is currently estimated at being between £5 and £10.

We expect that it will take some two years to equip the SCRO for the new much expanded system of checks. In this time we intend to consult widely in order to ensure that the system will meet the needs of the community it serves.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a monthly breakdown of the outbreaks of food poisoning in each of the last five years. [63331]

Mr. Galbraith: Information about numbers of outbreaks is not collected centrally. The tables show the numbers of notified cases of food poisoning by four-week period.

Mixed-sex Hospital Wards

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many mental health hospitals or psychiatric units in Scotland have mixed-sex wards; and if he will list them. [63787]

Mr. Galbraith: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Arms Exports

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when her Department was given new powers to object to proposed arms exports; what these powers entail; and if she will make a statement. [63846]

Clare Short: Licences to export arms are issued by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (DTI). The Export Control Organisation of the DTI is the licensing authority. A number of Departments provide advice; DFID has done so since September 1997. The Department for International Development's (DFID) interest in export licence applications is primarily that the proposed export does not seriously undermine the economy of the recipient country; and also that the equipment is not used for purposes of internal repression or external aggression. We focus our efforts on examining applications to poor countries.

World Disability Report

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if her Department will provide financial assistance to the International Disability Foundation to disseminate their world disability report. [63693]

Clare Short: Yes. A grant of £15,000, the sum requested by the International Disability Foundation was approved on 3 December, the World Day of Disabled People.

Good Governance

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will set out the basic principles of good governance required by her Department of a country in which she is considering aid provision. [63790]

Clare Short: Our commitment is to reduce poverty through sustainable development. We work with governments who have a commitment to working for the elimination of poverty. This requires effective economic management, efficient government systems, the reduction of corruption, and investment in human development. We engage in dialogue with government where possible. Where we cannot work with government we will find other channels including parts of government, local government and NGOs which share our commitment.

Trade

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her Department's policy on promotion of United Kingdom trade in developing countries. [63849]

Clare Short: We believe that increasing trade in the poorest countries will contribute to economic growth and poverty elimination. The Department for International Development (DFID) works to improve the trading environment by encouraging open markets, good regulation, reduced corruption and strong education and health systems.

We support specific trade and investment initiatives where there is a clear development outcome. For example DFID is promoting links between UK small and medium enterprises and small businesses in South Africa.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action she has taken to work with British business to strengthen support for investment and trade which contributes to sustainable development. [63646]

Clare Short: We have greatly strengthened the links between the department and British business since May 1997. We have established a Business Partnership Unit for this purpose and now consult with Business when preparing our strategies for working with individual countries or multilateral development agencies: we also seek to improve the operating environment for investment and trade (for example, through consultative forums on regulatory constraints); help business meet their corporate responsibility objectives (for example, through joint projects to tackle social and environmental issues and invest in the health and education of the workforce) and through partnerships which deepen the impact of business on the local economy (for example, through projects to help large business source from local suppliers). These initiatives all contribute to sustainable development and assist British businesses to invest and trade with the poorest countries.

China

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her Department's policy on concessional financing in China. [63847]

Clare Short: The White Paper on International Development (Cm 3789), published in November of last year, announced the abolition of the Aid and Trade Provision (ATP) and set out our policy on possible assistance to the private sector in paragraph 2.35. Any potential assistance would be subject to the strategy and sectoral focus agreed for each country and the standard procedures for quality control. We also made clear that all ATP projects previously agreed and still under implementation would be completed. This policy applies in China and elsewhere.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress she has made in the promotion of human rights in China; and if she will make a statement. [63845]

Clare Short: The Government seek to support all the human rights contained in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, in China and elsewhere, which means that we are concerned with economic and social rights as well as civil and political rights. We are engaged in dialogue with the Chinese authorities and have increased the frequency of formal talks. These have provided the opportunity for us to raise concerns about issues such as China's one child policy, imprisonment without trial, freedom of religion and executions.

As an additional means to addressing the economic and social rights of poor people in China, we are currently designing a range of projects (in basic health, education and water development) with a probable value of some £40 million. Meanwhile, we have approved a £670,000 project to help improve the lives of orphaned children in Shanghai through the introduction of a foster care system and are exploring the scope for further co-operation in the field of prison management reform and measures to combat corruption.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what consultations she carried out with the private sector when preparing her country strategy for China. [63544]

Clare Short: In preparing the China country strategy, my officials sought the views of companies with interests in China through the China Britain Trade Group and the British Chamber of Commerce in Beijing. Views were also sought from institutions, including the International Finance Corporation and the Commonwealth Development Corporation, which have strong private sector interests. In addition to the private sector, officials consulted civil society organisations, the academic community and a wide range of Chinese interlocutors.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the Commonwealth Development Corporation's investments in China. [63848]

Clare Short: At present the Commonwealth Development Corporation (CDC) does not have any investments in China.

Country Strategies

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what consultations she has carried out with the private sector when preparing her country strategies. [63545]

Clare Short: Consultations with the private sector and other elements of civil society have been part of the process of developing country strategies since May 1997. The channels used vary depending on country circumstances. Country strategy papers which have been finalised since the Government's White Paper on Development contain an annexe which sets out the process of consultation, including consultation that has taken place with the private sector. The papers are published and are also available in the Libraries of the House. They are also available to the public.

Commonwealth Development Corporation

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the countries in which the Commonwealth Development Corporation currently invests. [63791]

Clare Short: Commonwealth Development Corporation currently has investment in the following countries:

Anguilla
Bangladesh
Barbados
Belize
Bolivia
Botswana
British Virgin Islands
Cameroon
Cayman Islands
Costa Rica
Cote d'Ivoire
Cuba
Dominica
Dominican Republic
Ecuador
El Salvador
Fiji
Gambia Ghana
Grenada
Guatemala
Guyana
Honduras
India
Indonesia
Jamaica
Kenya
Laos
Lesotho Liberia
Malawi
Malaysia
Mauritius
Mozambique
Namibia
Nicaragua
Nigeria
Pakistan
Papua New Guinea Philippines
St. Lucia
Seychelles
Sierra Leone
Solomon Islands
South Africa
Sri Lanka
Sudan
Swaziland
Tanzania
Thailand

Trinidad and Tobago
Uganda
Vanuatu
Vietnam
Zambia
Zimbabwe.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what has been the total expenditure and the breakdown of expenditure in her Department since May 1997 on (a) public opinion research, (b) television, radio and newspaper advertising and (c) direct mail. [63919]

Clare Short: Since May 1997 the Department for International Development has spent:

(a) around £43,000 on public opinion research; and

(b) around £1.2 million on recruitment advertising in newspapers and journals.

(c) No expenditure on direct mail.

Multilateral Development Projects

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she has taken to ensure that multilateral development projects make full use of the skills of United Kingdom business. [63543]

Clare Short: We work with the Department of Trade and Industry's Development Business Team, which has specific responsibility to help UK business secure trade opportunities from multilateral development projects. DFID staff ensure that DTI has access to good information about the pipeline and strategies of the multilateral organisations.

British firms do well from multilateral procurement. For example, in fiscal year 1996, British firms secured contracts worth around £458 million from the World Bank, over twice the amount of the British government's annual contribution to the Bank in that year.

PRIME MINISTER

Devolution

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister where responsibility will lie for determining what programmes and bodies will be ultra-vires for the purpose of UK-wide funding after the establishment of the National Assembly for Wales and the Scottish Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [63659]

The Prime Minister: Under the terms of the Scotland Act 1998 and the Government of Wales Act 1998, Scottish Ministers and the National Assembly for Wales will assume responsibility for a range of functions which will depend, in part, on secondary legislation which has yet to be passed.

In the case of Scotland, Government Departments are reviewing their programmes in the light of the Scotland Act to determine the extent of programme expenditure which may relate to functions which will transfer to Scottish Ministers.

In the case of the National Assembly for Wales, the Transfer of Functions Order, which was published in draft form for public consultation on 12 November, will transfer certain ministerial functions to the National Assembly for Wales. Work continues on finalising the draft Order and determining the programme expenditure which relates to those functions which will transfer.

Following devolution, the question of whether or not expenditure by UK Ministers is ultra vires will rest primarily with those Ministers acting on the advice of their Accounting Officers. In the unlikely even that there is a disagreement over whether such funding is ultra vires for UK Ministers, as defined by both primary and secondary legislation, the disagreement would usually be resolved through discussion between the relevant administrations. Failing this, the final arbiter would be the courts.

Privy Council

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister if he will review the criteria used in formulating advice on appointments to the Privy Council. [62165]

The Prime Minister: Membership of the Privy Council is normally reserved for those who are involved in affairs of State and who have a close and confidential relationship with the Crown. In practice, this means those who have obtained high office in the executive or the judicial branches of the State either in this country or in one of the countries of which The Queen is Head of State. It follows that most new Privy Councillors are serving Ministers, Judges or Commonwealth appointments. I have no plans to review the criteria.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Chile

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Attorney-General which law officers have met the Foreign Minister of Chile in the past two months; and for what purpose. [63524]

The Attorney-General: Neither.

TREASURY

Fuel Duty (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what schemes he has evaluated to assist petrol retailers in Northern Ireland to cope with differential rates of excise duty in Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland. [62236]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 3 December 1998]: The lead on this is being taken by HM Customs & Excise which, in conjunction with other authorities, including the Royal Ulster Constabulary, is acting to counter the threat posed to legitimate petrol retailers, the wider business community and the collection of revenue. While my right hon. Friend sees no grounds for specific assistance to Northern Ireland petrol retailers, some of the measures in the £315 million Economic Initiative he announced last May are likely to be directly beneficial to Northern Ireland petrol retailers. The measures included the extension of 100 per cent. capital allowances on expenditure by small and medium enterprises on machinery or plant used in Northern Ireland and a substantial and extensive capital investment in Northern Ireland's road network.

Economic Cycle

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the length of the current economic cycle. [62439]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 8 December 1998]: The Pre-Budget Report (cm. 4076) reported that the economy is estimated to have been on trend in the first half of 1997 (paragraph A39), and is not assumed to reach an equivalent point until 2002 (paragraph A54, chart A4 refers).

Abortion

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what area of residence, other than health authorities, statistics are collected on abortions performed by the NHS. [63606]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Neil Gerrard, dated 14 December 1998:

As Director of the Office of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent question on the areas for which abortion statistics are collected.

Under Section 2(2) of the Abortion Act 1967, registered medical practitioners must notify the Chief Medical Officer of every completed termination of pregnancy, and the ONS undertakes the statistical processing of the abortions data. Data is currently published at NHS Executive Regional Office level and health authority level.

Wages

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were in April the number and proportion of (a) male, (b) female and (c) all (i) full-time manual, (ii) full-time non-manual and (iii) full-time employees on adult rates earning less than (1) £181.40, (2) £241.86 and (3) £261.46 per week excluding overtime in (A) each county and unitary authority in England, (B) each unitary authority in Wales, (C) each London borough, (D) each unitary authority in Scotland, (E) Great Britain as a whole, (F) England as a whole and (G) each Government office region. [63496]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply. A copy of the tables referred to will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Huw Edwards, dated 14 December 1998:

As the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent question requesting earnings information for a range of geographical areas.

The latest available information, from New Earnings Survey (NES) April 1998, is contained in the attached tables.

I will arrange for a copy of this letter to be placed in the Library.

Paymaster General

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the areas of tax policy in which the Paymaster General has been involved since 2 May 1997; and if he will make a statement; [63498]

(2) which Minister is responsible for the review of corporate taxation; and if he will make a statement; [63499]

(3) what are the reasons for changes in the policy responsibilities of the Paymaster General in relation to tax matters in the last eight months; and if he will make a statement. [63497]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I am responsible for all decisions on matters of tax policy.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes he plans in the responsibilities of the Paymaster General. [63511]

Mr. Gordon Brown: None.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Modernisation of the House

39. Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Council what progress she has made in modernising the procedures of the House. [62170]

Mrs. Beckett: The House recently approved the Modernisation Committee's proposals on the scrutiny of European documents and will consider its report on the parliamentary calendar this Wednesday.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Millennium Compliance

37. Mr. Chope: To ask the President of the Council when she intends to publish the next quarterly return on the progress of Government Departments towards millennium compliance. [62167]

Mrs. Beckett: I announced the results of the latest quarterly review in a statement to the House on 2 December 1998, Official Report, columns 902–05. Copies of the individual return from Departments and agencies have been placed in the Libraries of the House and published on the internet.

38. Helen Jones: To ask the President of the Council if she will make a statement on the progress being made in terms of the preparedness of the national infrastructure to cope with the millennium date change. [62169]

Mrs. Beckett: Responsible departments and regulators are working with the major infrastructure providers to ensure that they are taking proper steps to tackle the Millennium bug.

We have also set up through Action 2000 a National Infrastructure Forum. The Forum brings together the main providers and users of infrastructure services to share best practice and information about their state of preparedness.

A key part of the Forum's work is an Independent Assessment Project to assess the state of preparedness of key infrastructure services, including the electricity, water, fuels, telecommunications and financial sectors. The results of the first assessment of the water industry were announced by OFWAT on 22 October. The first results for the other key sectors should be available early in the New Year.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Digital Television

15. Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plan he has to ensure that digital television will be available to the most remote communities in Britain. [62142]

Janet Anderson: Digital terrestrial television services began on 15 November and will reach 90 per cent. of the UK population by the end of next year. Digital satellite services currently reach much of the UK and digital cable services are likely to begin next year. Extending digital services beyond the terrestrial launch phase to other parts of the UK, including remote communities, was one of the issues raised in our consultation paper "Television: the Digital Future". The responses to that paper are currently being evaluated. Once that process is complete the Government will be in a position to consider with the broadcasters the next steps towards extending digital services across the UK.

Millennium Fund

16. Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what contribution the millennium fund will make to tackling social exclusion. [62143]

26. Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what contribution the millennium fund plans to make to projects to tackle social exclusion. [62154]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Government have sought to ensure that the Millennium celebrations will be inclusive, involving people from all religious and cultural backgrounds, all social groups and all areas of the United Kingdom. We also want to see a lasting legacy from the celebrations. Many of the projects funded by the Millennium Commission—particularly through their Awards scheme—will strengthen local community infrastructure and encourage active citizenship in both urban and rural areas.

Strategic Authority for Tourism

17. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the role of a strategic authority for tourism in England. [62144]

Janet Anderson: My Department launched a consultation exercise on 24 July which sought views on a variety of issues, including a strategic authority for English tourism. (The main conclusions of the consultation were made public this morning). A majority of the responses we received confirmed my view that there is a need for a national body of this type to support the new tourism strategy.

Broadcasting Standards

18. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what measures he is taking to reduce the number of profane and iewd broadcasts on television. [62146]

Janet Anderson: Broadcasters are subject to the general law and are required to comply with the regulators' guidelines on programme content. It is a long-standing and, I believe, a fundamental principle that Government do not intervene directly in issues of broadcasting content. Responsibility for enforcing the rules lies with the regulators, who are charged with safeguarding the public interest.

New Opportunities Fund

19. Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of the funding of the new opportunities fund between 1997 and 2005. [62147]

Mr. Chris Smith: I have announced New Opportunities Fund programmes of £1.4 billion to date. I have made no estimate of the Fund's income beyond the life of the current licence, which expires in September 2001.

Culture (Devolved Responsibility)

20. Mrs. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proposals he has to devolve responsibility for culture to the regions. [62148]

Mr. Alan Howarth: A new body will be established in each region to provide a strong, strategic voice for all cultural interests. A number of the public bodies sponsored by my Department are also delegating more responsibility to the regions. Further details are contained in the announcement which my right hon. Friend made earlier today on the results of the Department's Comprehensive Spending Review.

National Lottery

21. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has for the selection procedures for an operator for the national lottery when Camelot's licence expires. [62149]

Mr. Chris Smith: The selection procedures for the next Lottery operator will be determined by the National Lottery Commission, which will take over the functions of the Director General of the National Lottery next year. The Commission will make its decision in line with its statutory responsibilities and my directions.

Lottery Awards (Distribution)

22. Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received about the equality of distribution of lottery awards. [62150]

Mr. Chris Smith: I frequently receive representations about different aspects of the National Lottery, including the equality of the distribution of awards.

We are determined to ensure that Lottery money is allocated more fairly and equitably in the light of need across the whole of the United Kingdom and between different groups in society. The National Lottery Act 1998 requires distributors to show how they will achieve this in their strategic plans.

Performing Arts (Social Exclusion)

23. Miss Begg: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the contribution the performing arts can make to reducing social exclusion. [62151]

28. Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the contribution of the performing arts to measures to reduce social exclusion. [62156]

Mr. Alan Howarth: One of my Department's principal objectives is to promote the role of the Department's sectors, including the performing arts, in combating social exclusion. The New Audiences Fund will continue to support projects which broaden access for young people and others who would not normally have an opportunity to experience the arts. Furthermore, as part of our contribution to the Government's forthcoming strategy for neighbourhood renewal, my Department is chairing an action team which will report on best practice in using the arts and sport to combat social exclusion.

Good Causes (Distribution of Funds)

24. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of the amount of money available to be distributed for each of the good causes for (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000 and (c) 2000–2001 and the percentages these represent of total funds available for distribution by the good causes. [62152]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Lottery is now set to raise £10.6 billion for good causes over the licence period, £600 million above previous forecasts.

As I have explained to the hon. Member previously, we are currently discussing with the distributing bodies how best to adjust their percentage shares in order to achieve the intended allocation of the extra £600 million. Until these discussions are complete, the annual income assumptions for the good causes cannot be finalised. We plan to lay an Order as soon as possible giving effect to these adjustments.

Arts (Public Funding)

25. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he will take steps to ensure the more equitable geographical distribution of public funding for arts. [62153]

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend announced this morning an extra £123 million for the Arts Council of England over the next three years. The Arts Council will be announcing later this week how they propose to allocate these extra funds among the Regional Arts Board.

International Sports

27. Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on his policy for promoting success for Britain in international sports competitions. [62155]

Mr. Banks: The package of reforms we announced in July to establish the Sports Cabinet and strengthen the United Kingdom Sports Council will ensure our top sportsmen and women receive the very best support which will enable them to continue competing successfully on the international stage.

Writers (Financial Assistance)

29. Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to provide financial assistance to writers of works of non-fiction. [62158]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Arts Council of England, which my Department funds, supports writers of literature including writers of biography and autobiography.

Television Coverage (Sports)

30. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to ensure that a higher proportion of major sporting events, with particular reference to rugby union, is accessible to all television licence payers. [62159]

Janet Anderson: Following my Department's review of listed events earlier this year, we revised the list to allow the ITC to protect free-to-air coverage of more events than ever before. The list now includes international rugby union for the first time. Matches involving the home countries in the Five Nations tournament and the whole of the Rugby Union World Cup finals tournament were included in the new list which my right hon. Friend announced on 25 June 1998, Official Report, columns 600–01.

Football Regulator

31. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will appoint a football regulator. [62160]

Mr. Banks: The management and development of individual sports is the responsibility of the appropriate governing bodies. We have recognised the special role football plays in this country by establishing the Football Task Force to investigate issues of concern to all those involved with the game. The Task Force is currently considering the complex issues associated with the commercial aspects of the game, which may include whether some kind of football regulator is required. I look forward to receiving the Task Force's commercial report.

Sponsorship (Sports)

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions he has had with sporting governing bodies about sponsorship. [62127]

Mr. Banks: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and I held meetings last year with sports likely to be affected by the ban on tobacco sponsorship. Since then my officials have been in regular contact with them. We have been seeking detailed background information on the sports and current contracts with the tobacco companies, so the expert group I have set up can judge how best to help the sports attract alternative sponsors.

Industrial Heritage

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent steps he has taken to support Britain's industrial heritage. [62139]

Mr. Alan Howarth: I was very pleased to be able to announce to the House on 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 59, that my Department will pay an annual revenue subsidy grant to the National Coal Mining Museum for England from next year. The Museum, based at the former Caphouse Colliery near Wakefield, has a fascinating story to tell about an industry which, both economically and socially, has been of enormous importance to this country.

Hinduja

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what grant applications his Department has received from the Hinduja group of companies since 1 May 1997; and what grants have been paid. [62240]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 3 December 1998]: I am not aware that any grant applications to my Department have been submitted by the Hinduja group of companies. However, to confirm that there have been no such applications would entail disproportionate cost to the Department, given the number of Grant Schemes administered by the Department and the fact that the Hinduja Group consists of a large number of companies with different names.

Television Licences

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of the number of units of accommodation for which there should be a television licence; how many licences were issued for (a) monochrome and (b) colour receivers; and how many people were reported for failing to possess a television licence in the last year for which figures are available. [63314]

Janet Anderson: The estimated number of premises requiring a television licence as at 31 March 1998 was 23.6 million. At that date, there were 21.3 million colour television licences and 379,000 black and white television licences in force. During the year to 31 March 1998, 364,000 prosecution statements were taken in respect of television licence fee evasion and there were 112,000 prosecutions.

Scottish Devolution

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if he will list (a) by programme over £50,000 and (b) the total of spending by his Department in Scotland on the identifiable spending areas detailed in Table 7.6A of the Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis 1997–98 (Cmnd 3601); which of these programmes will fall solely or jointly under the responsibility of the Scottish Parliament; and what arrangements are in place to transfer control of funds for these projects to the Scottish Executive or Parliament; [63288]

(2) what assessment he has made of the programmes which it will be ultra vires for this Department to fund or have sole responsibility for after devolution; if he will list these programmes; and if he will make a statement. [63289]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 10 December 1998]: Under the terms of the Scotland Act 1998, the Scottish Ministers will assume responsibility for a range of devolved functions which will in part depend on secondary legislation which has yet to be passed. My Department is reviewing its programmes in the light of the Scotland Act. It is too early to say to what extent programme expenditure which is currently administered by the Department may relate to functions which will transfer to Scottish Ministers. Work is taking place to establish the extent of any such expenditure and to assess the need for any consequential transfer of funds to the Scottish Ministers. For the total spending by the Department in Scotland I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury to the hon. Member for North Tayside (Mr. Swinney) on 4 November 1998, Official Report, column 615.

"A New Approach to Investment in Culture"

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he expects to publish his conclusions on the matters raised in his consultation paper, "A New Approach to Investment in Culture", of 24 July 1998. [63668]

Mr. Chris Smith: The consultation paper which I issued in July contained a number of proposals for change in sectors for which my Department is responsible. At the same time I was able to announce an extra £290 million for those sectors over the next three years. Today I am publishing the conclusions I have reached in the light of the consultation, together with the detailed allocation of funding to sponsored bodies.

Some of the main conclusions from the document are:

a new watchdog to monitor and improve standards of efficiency and financial management and promote quality across all our sectors;

streamlining of national bodies in the arts and crafts, the built heritage, film and museums and libraries to improve the delivery of services across these sectors

a more effective, slimmer national strategic body for tourism in England a new national body to champion architecture

a stronger voice for culture in the English regions, and a DCMS presence in all Government Offices new three year funding agreements with DCMS's sponsored bodies, placing clear responsibilities on those bodies to deliver our objectives against demanding targets.

Copies of the document—"A New Cultural Framework"—have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Coalfield Communities

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action he has taken to increase access to Lottery funds for former coalfield communities in the East Midlands. [62157]

Mr. Banks: I recognise that certain areas, including coalfields communities, have done less well than others from Lottery funding. My Department hosted a conference in Barnsley on 10 November to discuss how the Lottery can assist in the regeneration of the coalfields. In addition, we are working with the distributors to investigate the reasons for the low take-up of funds in many coalfield areas.

The National Lottery Act 1998 contains a number of measures designed to bring about a fairer and more equitable distribution of funds across all regions and parts of the UK. It requires distributors to examine the needs of their sectors systematically and to draw up strategic plans which reflect those needs and their proposals for addressing them; it gives distributors new powers to encourage specific applications which do not come forward spontaneously; and it enables them to delegate decision-making closer to the grass roots and to enter into joint schemes.

All of these measures will help to deliver more Lottery money to coalfield areas.

Rugby League

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has for establishing a centre of excellence for Rugby League. [62137]

Mr. Banks: It is the responsibility of the Rugby Football League to consider whether they wish to establish a centre of excellence and, if so, to come forward with proposals on how they might link this into the facilities and services of the UK Sports Institute.

Sporting Events

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on his efforts to bring top-class sporting events to the UK. [62145]

Mr. Banks: This Government are committed to providing the strongest possible promotional and diplomatic support for the bidding and staging of major sporting events in the UK. We are already providing strong support for the bids for the 2003 World Athletics Championships and the 2006 World Cup. In addition, I am working closely with the British Olympic Association to ensure that all the ingredients are in place to mount a winnable bid for the Olympic Games at the earliest possible date.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Medway Secure Training Centre

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the procedure on public interest disclosure operated by Rebound for staff at the Medway Secure Training Centre. [63173]

Mr. Boateng: I am not aware of any such document. Clause 68 of the contract with Rebound for the provision of the Medway Secure Training centre deals with confidential information and use of documents. A copy of the contract was placed in the Library on 11 March 1997.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in his Department are currently on secondment from private companies; and if he will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62827]

Mr. Straw: At present, two people in the Home Office are recorded centrally as being on secondment from private companies. One is from Barclays Bank plc and is working in the Home Office Strategy Unit as part of a Home Office team advising on internal management issues, such as finance, Information Technology, and business change. The other is from the Refugee Council and is working in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, assisting on reviewing the level of asylum seeker support arrangements.

Shapurji Saklatvala

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 3 December 1998, Official Report, columns 251–52, on Shapurji Saklatvala, when the security service expects to begin its review of its inter-war records in preparation for further releases. [63236]

Mr. Straw: The Security Service plans to begin releasing material from World War Two in January 1999. The process of reviewing for release its quite extensive stock of records for that period will take some time to complete. Under current plans, I do not expect the Service to begin reviewing its inter-war records before the year 2000.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to uprate the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme tariff for inflation; and if he will make a statement; [63389]

(2) what representations he has received about changes to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [63390]

Mr. Boateng: We have received representations and inquiries about changes to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme from a number of bodies, including the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers, the Law Society, the Victim Support National Office and local victim support schemes, and the Trades Union Congress. Individual members of the public have also put their views to us. We have been considering these, along with the findings which emerged from the Comprehensive Spending Review. We hope to be able to announce fairly early in the New Year how we intend to take matters forward.

Public Service Vehicles Regulations

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been in each of the last five years for contravention of paragraph 4 of the Public Service Vehicles (Conduct of Drivers, Inspectors, Conductors and Passengers) Regulations 1990. [63679]

Mr. Boateng: Unfortunately, information collected centrally on the Home Office Court Proceedings Database does not distinguish offences committed under paragraph 4 of the Public Service Vehicles (Conduct of Drivers, Inspectors, Conductors and Passengers) Regulations 1990 from other summary offences.

However, I understand that since February 1996, when computerised records began, the Vehicle Inspectorate has recorded no prosecutions in England and Wales under the provisions of paragraph 4.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he was notified by the Department for Education and Employment of cases in which convicted sex offenders have been offered placements working with children under the new deal programme. [63889]

Mr. Boateng: These allegations were brought to my Department's attention by officials in the Department for Education and Employment on 8 December.

Neighbourhood Watch

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of neighbourhood watch schemes. [63420]

Mr. Boateng: The most recent research was a survey of 120 neighbourhood watch co-ordinators from a representative range of police force areas in England and Wales carried out in 1997. This concluded that neighbourhood watches could be a useful aid to the police but also identified areas of potential improvement, for example, the need to involve young people more in neighbourhood watch work. The Home Office and the National Neighbourhood Watch Association are working jointly to achieve these improvements.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of neighbourhood watch schemes, with particular reference to security for the elderly. [63421]

Mr. Boateng: A survey of 120 neighbourhood watch scheme co-ordinators from a representative range of police force areas in England and Wales was carried out in 1997. Guidance subsequently issued to neighbourhood watch co-ordinators emphasises the need to address personal safety issues, including those of the elderly.

I recently attended the National Neighbourhood Watch and was pleased to see that the National award was won by Wrexham Neighbourhood Watch Action and Advice Unit. As one of its diverse activities, it gives special help to the elderly and its example will be used to promote good practice within the neighbourhood watch movement.

Senator Pinochet

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost to date to public funds is for the extradition proceedings against Senator Pinochet; and if he will make a statement. [63833]

Mr. Straw: Figures are not yet available. Costs in extradition proceedings are generally treated on a reciprocal basis. In this case, the United Kingdom is responsible for the costs of processing extradition requests made from Spain. In return, Spain is responsible for the costs of processing extradition requests made from the United Kingdom.

The House of Lords awarded costs against Senator Pinochet for proceedings before the House of Lords and the Divisional Court. I was awarded costs against Senator Pinochet in the Divisional Court.

Criminal Records Bureau

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to provide for criminal record checks by implementing Part V of the Police Act 1997. [64102]

Mr. Straw: In order to implement Part V of the Police Act 1997, we will set up the Criminal Records Bureau. The Bureau will be established in Merseyside under the management of the United Kingdom Passport Agency, which has a proven track record of discreet delivery of a large application driven service. Appropriate use will be made of public private partnerships to contain set up and running costs, but the core work of examining records and issuing certificates will be handled by civil servants within the Bureau. Once established, it will be self financing through charging for each certificate to be issued as provided for under the 1997 Act. All applicants for certificates will be required to pay a fee which, depending on the level of certificate sought, we estimate will cost between five and ten pounds.

The Government's main objective in introducing these arrangements is to strengthen the safeguards for the protection of children. In line with this, and to ensure a smooth transition from the current arrangements for employment vetting checks of police records, the Bureau will phase in the issue of the three types of certificate provided for under the Act. Top priority will be given to the issue of certificates for those seeking positions which involve regularly caring for, training, supervising or being in sole charge of persons aged under 18. The Government are no less concerned about the need for similar safeguards to protect vulnerable adults; extending these arrangements to this area will require careful consideration and consultation.

We estimate that it will take some two years to establish the Bureau. In this time, we intend to consult widely on all aspects of the Bureau's operation to ensure that it meets the needs of the community.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Solicitors (Convictions)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will introduce legislation to ensure that solicitors convicted of a crime are struck off. [62850]

Mr. Hoon: Section 47 of the Solicitors Act 1974 gives the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal the power to strike a solicitor off the roll if it thinks fit. The Government have no plans to amend this provision.

Legal Aid (Reform)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if additional resources will accompany reform of the legal aid system to assist those who cannot afford basic legal services. [62910]

Mr. Hoon: We will be spending £248 million more on legal aid over the next three years than the previous Government intended. In addition, we will refocus those resources on areas of greatest need, such as social welfare and public interest work, and will achieve the maximum value for the resources available. Removing legal aid where a suitable alternative exists, and the greater control of cost that the reforms will bring, will enable us to devote more funds to these areas. As a first step, the Lord Chancellor recently announced the allocation of a minimum of £20m for the expansion of advice and assistance services provided by the not-for-profit sector. In addition, more people in future will be able to get advice and assistance, by allowing in people who can afford to pay a contribution but who are entirely excluded now on financial grounds. The extension in July of conditional fee agreements to all civil cases will also greatly improve access to justice for people who cannot themselves afford legal help and do not qualify for legal aid.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the special advisers in his Department and the issues on which they specialise; and to what level they have been security cleared. [62835]

Mr. Hoon: Garry Hart is the only special adviser in this Department. He advises on the full range of issues for which the Lord Chancellor is responsible, with the explicit exception of the following areas:

the appointment, deployment and terms and conditions of individual judges (and papers relating to these matters); and Departmental staff matters.

Garry Hart's appointment is subject to the usual security clearance arrangements.

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list (a) the (i) task forces, (ii) review panels and (iii) advisory groups his Department has, (b) the remit of each and (c) the members of each together with their principal employment and their level of remuneration. [62802]

Mr. Hoon: A list has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how many people in his Department are currently on secondment from private companies; and if he will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62828]

Mr. Hoon: No one within the Lord Chancellor's Department Headquarters is currently on secondment from a private company.

Legal Education and Conduct

Jacqui Smith: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Lord Chancellor's Advisory Committee on Legal Education and Conduct intends to publish its Seventh Annual report. [64007]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor's Advisory Committee on Legal Education and Conduct has today published its seventh annual report, and copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

HEALTH

ENT Clinics

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time is for routine appointments at ENT clinics in (a) England and Wales and (b) Portsmouth. [62489]

Mr. Milburn: Information on average waiting times for an outpatient appointment are not collected centrally. However, in England during the second quarter of 1998–99, 72 per cent. of patients were seen within 13 weeks of a general practitioner written referral for a first outpatient appointment at an ear nose and throat clinic, with 95 per cent. of patients seen within 26 weeks.

During the same period, in Portsmouth and South East Hampshire Health Authority 93 per cent. of patients were seen within 13 weeks of a GP written referral for a first outpatient appointment at an ENT clinic, with 97 per cent. seen within 26 weeks.

Waiting times at ENT clinics in Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Wales.

Ministerial E-mail Address

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his e-mail address. [62555]

Ms Jowell: The Secretary of State for Health does not currently have an e-mail address.

Aromatherapy

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to regulate the practice of aromatherapy. [63043]

Ms Jowell: The Department does not directly regulate any professional practice. Our policy is to encourage responsible, accountable self-regulation. Our main concern is to help health care professions who have statutory basis for their self-regulation to modernise and strengthen it. Other professions may want to put their self-regulation onto a statutory basis. This is a laudable ambition, but there is much to be done and we must give priority to the professions which provide the majority of services to National Health Service patients.

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the number of aromatherapists who are currently practising in the UK. [63086]

Ms Jowell: The Department does not routinely collect statistics on the number of complementary therapy practitioners in the United Kingdom. A survey carried out for the Department by the University of Exeter in 1997 estimated that there were approximately 5,900 aromatherapists practising in the UK at that time.

Herbal Remedies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Medical Control Agency has to review the status of soft licence herbal remedies. [63085]

Ms Jowell: There is no category of soft licensed herbal remedies in the United Kingdom. Herbal remedies require marketing authorisation, unless exempted from the requirement for a product licence under the terms of Section 12 of the Medicines Act 1968.

Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors Act 1979

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he has made with the independent and fundamental review of the current operations of the five statutory bodies created by the Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors Act 1979. [62689]

Mr. Milburn: We are considering the report of the review. An announcement will be made as soon as possible.

Funeral Costs

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been undertaken by his Department on the effects of recent changes to Social Security Fund payments on the numbers of section 46 funerals. [62790]

Ms Jowell: None. Payments have been made from the Social Fund for some years for a funeral service and burial or cremation. Certain additional expenses have been met since 1997, but these are unlikely to affect the number of funerals paid for by local authorities.

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance has been issued to local authorities regarding the manner in which section 46 funerals should be conducted. [62791]

Ms Jowell: Guidance on the detailed interpretation of the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984, including guidance on section 46, was issued by the Public Health Legal Information Unit in 1994.

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost is of a section 46 funeral; and what is the average level of payment made by the Social Fund. [62789]

Ms Jowell: The Department does not record local authority payments for funerals carried out under section 46 of the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984. Questions on payments from the Social Fund are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many funerals were provided by local authorities in England and Wales under section 46 of the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984 in each year since 1990. [62792]

Ms Jowell: The information requested is not available centrally.

Emergency Treatment Fees (Road Accidents)

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his policy on emergency treatment fees in the NHS for road accidents. [63163]

Mr. Hutton: We intend to end collection of the Emergency Treatment Fee by National Health Service trusts. An amendment to section 158 of the Road Traffic Act 1988, removing the right of NHS trusts to the Fee, is contained in the Road Traffic (NHS Charges) Bill which was introduced in the House on 27 November 1998.

Clinical Waste Disposal

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost to the NHS of making rigid containers for clinical waste mandatory. [63162]

Mr. Milburn: It is not possible to estimate the cost to the National Health Service of making rigid containers for clinical waste mandatory.

The requirement to provide rigid containers for clinical waste results from a European Community Directive. The Directive only applies where clinical waste is transported on public road or rail. This is then the responsibility of the waste contractor. However, if the contractor is faced with increased costs to replace containers, this is likely to be reflected in the contract price charged to the trust. Industry is looking into whether their existing systems meet these requirements. The outcome of this is awaited.

ME Specialist Consultants

Mr. Anthony D. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he is taking to increase the number of qualified ME specialist consultants in the NHS. [63229]

Mr. Milburn: Consultants from a number of different specialties are involved in the care of patients with Myalgic Encephalomyelitis. Since February 1995, the Specialty Workforce Advisory Group (SWAG) has been advising the Government about the numbers of doctors in higher specialist training needed in all Hospital and Community Health Service specialties to meet estimated requirements for consultants four to six years hence. SWAG's planning process takes account of the views of the National Health Service and the medical profession about service needs. It is for NHS trusts and health authorities to determine locally how the consultants, produced following national workforce planning, are deployed.

Scottish Devolution

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list (a) by programme over £50,000 and (b) the total spending by his Department in Scotland on the identifiable spending areas detailed in Table 7.6A of the Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis 1997–98 (Cmnd 3601); which of these programmes will fall solely or jointly under the responsibility of the Scottish Parliament; and what arrangements are in place to transfer control of funds for these projects to the Scottish Executive or Parliament; [63294]

(2) what assessment he has made of the programmes which it will be ultra vires for his Department to fund or have sole responsibility for after devolution; if he will list these programmes; and if he will make a statement; [63295]

(3) how much is spent annually by his Department on research programmes in Scotland; and what proportion of this funding will be transferred to the Scottish Parliament after devolution. [63293]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 10 December 1998]: Under the terms of the Scotland Act 1998, the Scottish Ministers will assume responsibility for a range of devolved functions which will in part depend on secondary legislation which has yet to be passed. The Department is reviewing its programmes, including research components, in the light of the Scotland Act. It is too early to provide a clear picture of the extent to which programme expenditure which is currently administered by the Department may relate to functions which will transfer to Scottish Ministers. Work is taking place to establish the extent of any such expenditure and to assess the need for any consequential transfer of funds to the Scottish Ministers.

Elderly Patients (Emergency Readmissions)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 December 1998, Official Report, column 210, concerning hospital readmissions, if he will list the figures for the total number of people aged over 75 years discharged in each quarter since emergency readmissions statistics were first collected, (a) in total and (b) by region. [63423]

Mr. Milburn: Copies of the information requested are available in Library.

The number of patients who are readmitted to hospital is related to the number of patients who have been discharged. The number of patients aged over 75 and over discharged from hospital and the per cent. of patients aged over 75 and over readmitted to hospital within 28 days have also been provided.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many outbreaks of food poisoning there were in each county in each of the last five years; [63519]

(2) if he will publish a monthly breakdown of outbreaks of food poisoning in each of the last five years. [63333]

Ms Jowell: Data on general outbreaks of foodborne illness, broken down by health authority, are published on a monthly basis in the Public Health Laboratory Service's Communicable Disease Report (CDR), copies of which are available in the Library. CDR also publishes quarterly data by local authority. Copies of CDR and data for specific food poisoning organisms can be found on PHLS' website; the address is www.phls.co.uk.

Primary Care Groups

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library all guidance given to health authorities on (a) methods of recruitment and (b) criteria for recruitment of lay members of primary care groups. [63179]

Mr. Milburn: Copies of all guidance on Primary Care Groups are available in the Library.

Mixed-sex Hospital Wards

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mental health hospitals or psychiatric units in England have mixed-sex wards; and if he will list them. [63789]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not available centrally. However, the hon. Member may wish to consult the "Report of Review of Health Authorities' Target Dates for Meeting Three Objectives to Eliminate Mixed Sex Hospital Accommodation", which was published in February 1998.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Millennium (Emergency Cover)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans his Department has to contract with the armed services to provide emergency cover over the millennium period; and what estimate he has made of the cost of that cover. [62578]

Mr. Mandelson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Knowsley, North and Sefton, East (Mr. Howarth) on 7 December 1998, Official Report, column 20.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the fees charged by the Insolvency Service. [63095]

Dr. Howells: Insolvency legislation provides for fees to be charged by Official Receivers in connection with the administration of bankruptcies and compulsory liquidations. Fees are also charged in relation to the operation of the Insolvency Services Account, for the authorisation of insolvency practitioners and for the performance by the Secretary of State of his general duties under the Insolvency Act 1986.

The Insolvency Service publishes an annual report and accounts which includes information about its fee income, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Millennium Dome (Sponsors)

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how much has (a) been paid or (b) been agreed to be paid by the New Millennium Experience Company to IMG; [62779]

(2) what is the value of sponsorship money for the Millennium Exhibition raised by IMG. [62703]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 7 December 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given below to the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Chope).

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) which sponsors of the Millennium Dome have been recruited through the services of the International Management Group; [63113]

(2) on what date and for what reason the contract between the New Millennium Experience Company and the International Management Group was terminated; [63114]

(3) in respect of which of the sponsoring companies of the Millennium Dome a success fee has been paid to the International Management Group. [63115]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 8 December 1998]: During the development of the Millennium Experience project, prior to the establishment of the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC), the Millennium Commission invited companies to tender to provide independent consultancy advice on the achievability of the sponsorship target and to quote their rates for raising sponsorship. IMG were the lowest bidder on both counts. Subsequent negotiations of the detail of the contract for raising sponsorship were conducted from late February 1997, by Millennium Central (the previous name of the NMEC). The key terms of the contract were reported to the House in my answers to the hon. Member for Herstmere (Mr. Clappison) on 17 July 1998, Official Report, column 324 and the right hon. Member for Horsham (Mr. Maude) on 17 July 1998, Official Report, column 327. At that stage both the NMEC and the Millennium Experience project were still in development—the sponsorship task; the nature of the offer to potential sponsors; and the overall sponsorship strategy had yet to be finally decided. Subsequent refinements of the task impacted on the nature of the work IMG were required to undertake. At the same time, NMEC's own in-house Commercial Department grew in expertise and strength. They are now well placed to deliver the remaining sponsorship necessary to meet the target of £150 million.

In light of these developments, the NMEC and IMG have over the last few months been considering the terms of their original agreement. The parties have decided to terminate the arrangement by mutual agreement and NMEC have recorded their appreciation for the considerable contribution IMG has made to the project. The Legal documentation is currently being concluded. Details of the termination are commercially confidential. However, the fee payable to IMG represents the value of their support for, and assistance with, the NMEC's sponsorship work to date and is significantly less than the prospective fee of £9 million which I reported to the House on 17 July 1997, Official Report, column 324.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the sponsorship obtained for the Millennium Dome by (a) the International Management Group and (b) the New Millennium Experience Company by (i) name of sponsor and (ii) the amount secured. [62650]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 8 December 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given above to the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Chope).

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to ensure that companies are able to ensure the millennium compliance of their computers; how much money he has spent on this; what percentage of the money has been given to Taskforce 2000; and if he will make a statement. [62412]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 8 December 1998]: The Department has set up Action 2000 to lead the work on behalf of Government in ensuring that businesses take effective measures to make their computer systems compliant with millennium date requirements. DTI has provided Action 2000 with £19.3 million of funding to support the work, of which some £9.0 million has been spent so far. Taskforce 2000 is a separate organisation which has received £0.35 million from the Department.

Competitive Tendering (Departmental Projects)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reasons it is not normal departmental policy to disclose the names of firms participating in competitive tendering for departmental projects. [63493]

Dr. Howells: The Code of Practice on Access to Government Information is the benchmark by which we make public details of competitive tendering. The Department would not normally make known the names of individual bidders participating in such an exercise. It would be generally considered to prejudice the legitimate commercial interests of such persons. However if we were asked to reveal the names we would consult each of the companies involved and ask whether they were content for their identity to be revealed. If the companies wished their names to remain confidential we could not release this information unless there were an overriding public interest.

Arms Exports

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures are being taken to incorporate arms brokerage within arms trade regulations covering United Kingdom companies. [63434]

Mrs. Roche: The Government do already impose controls on trafficking and brokering under the United Nations Act 1946 where this is necessary to implement a binding United Nations decision.

Section 3.3 of the White Paper on Strategic Export Controls, which was published on 1 July 1998, contains proposals to extend controls on trafficking and brokering to:

countries subject to other types of embargo, whether as a result of non-binding decisions of the UN or decisions of the EU, Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe or the UK Government; certain types of equipment, the export from the UK of which, has been banned because of evidence that goods of the same type have been used in torture; missiles capable of a range of at least 300 km.

The proposals in Section 3.1 of the White Paper, to extend current controls on weapons of mass destruction, also include trafficking and brokering activity.

Now that the formal consultation process following publication of the White Paper has ended, we are reviewing all the proposals contained in the White Paper in the light of the responses received.

Miller Civil Engineering Ltd.

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the official trading status of Miller Civil Engineering Ltd. [63317]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 10 December 1998]: The latest accounts delivered by Miller Civil Engineering Limited and made up to 31 December 1997 include the following statement in the Directors' report.

"The company did not trade on its own account during the year but acted as agent on behalf of The Miller Group Limited whose principal activities included civil engineering".

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if it his policy that Ireland should retain its Objective 1 status when the zones for EU aid are re-drawn. [63178]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 10 December 1998]: Decisions on EU Objective 1 funding for other member states are not a matter for the UK Government.

Telephone Numbers

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many nine digit telephone numbers in the 0800 range have (a) been issued, (b) remain available to be issued and (c) are currently in use; and when the full range is expected to be in use. [63467]

Mrs. Roche: The 0800 nine-digit range was allocated by BT to itself in the time of its monopoly before 1984. When Oftel took over the administration of the Numbering Scheme from BT in 1994 unused portions ("blocks") of the 0800 nine digit range were recovered from BT and issued as ten digit numbers to other operators. BT has currently allocated over 80 per cent. of the 0800 nine digit capacity. No other operator has 0800 nine digit capacity.

Because of BT's dominance in its holding of 0800 numbers BT was required to stop allocating new nine digit numbers to their customers from July 1997. Since that date BT has been issuing 0800 ten digit numbers out of allocations made to them by Oftel. The remaining unused 0800 nine digit numbers cannot be made available to other operators under current arrangements as they are in BT blocks. They therefore remain frozen pending the outcome of the current Oftel consultation on freephone numbers.

The up to date figure for the quantity of 0800 nine digit numbers in use is not information held by Oftel as it relates to BT and its customers. However, it is generally recognised that between 80,000 and 100,000 such numbers are in use.

It is the intention of the current consultation on freephone numbers to decide on an arrangement that will make available the full range of 0800.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many responses have been received to OFTEL's consultation document, Freephone Numbers: Options for the Future, from (a) businesses, (b) network operators, (c) telecom advisory committees and (d) others; and how many responses from each group (i) supported and (ii) opposed options 1 and/or 2. [63522]

Mrs. Roche: Oftel has received submissions to its consultation document Freephone Numbers: Options for the Future from 168 respondees. Responses are divided into the following categories:

a) Businesses—128 responses

Consisting of 66 supporting the Freephone User Group (FUG) responses, 26 supporting the Direct Marketing Association responses and 36 other business responses.

b) Network operators—8 responses

c) Telecommunications Advisory Groups—21 responses

d) Others—11 responses

Consisting of 2 Consultants, 2 Consumer Groups, 5 Trade Bodies and 3 residential users. The numbers of responses that (i) supported and (ii) opposed options 1 and/or 2 are shown in the table below.

	Support		Oppose
	Option 1	Option 2	Option 1	Option 2
(a) Businesses	2	3	93	97
FUG	0	0	66	66
DMA	0	0	26	26
Others	0	3	0	5
(b) Operators	1	6	3	0
(c) TACs	0	19	1	0
(d) Others	2	4	2	2
Total	5	32	98	99

Hallmarking

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on forthcoming changes to the Hallmarking Act 1973. [64080]

Mr. Mandelson: The Hallmarking (Hallmarking Act Amendment) Regulations and the Hallmarking (Hallmarking Act Amendment) Order 1998 were laid in Parliament on Friday 4 December 1998.

These will align UK law with EU single market rules whilst ensuring that UK manufacturers can remain competitive at home and in Europe. The specific changes are as follows:

Section 2 of the Act is amended so as to recognise certain hallmarks from other European countries as "approved hallmarks". This follows a 1994 European Court of Justice Judgment in the case of Houtwipper (Case C-293/93) which ruled that Member States which prohibited the sale of articles of precious metal not hallmarked in accordance with national laws would not be in breach of single market rules provided that such articles did not already bear hallmarks struck by an independent body in accordance with the legislation of the exporting Member State, containing information which was equivalent to that provided by the hallmarks of the importing Member State and which was intelligible to consumers in that Member State. As a result, articles of precious metal bearing hallmarks which meet these criteria will be able to be offered for sale in the UK without, as previously, having to be re-hallmarked.

The distinction between UK manufactured articles and imports is to be ended so that the same marks will be struck on both UK and imported articles. This, also, is designed to align UK law with single market rules.

The range of finenesses to which articles can be hallmarked in the UK is increased to include new standards (both higher and lower) in addition to those traditionally recognised in the UK. This will ensure that UK manufacturers can compete on an equal basis with European counterparts. Consumers also stand to benefit from being able to purchase a wider range of items of jewellery and other precious articles of a standard of purity which could not previously be sold as precious articles in the UK.

The fineness of UK hallmarked articles will from now on be expressed millesimally. This means that the striking of traditional marks such as the crown for gold and the orb for platinum will become voluntary. This change will make hallmarks more readily understandable to consumers. This is especially important in view of the new increased range of finenesses.

The requirement for the date letter to be struck alongside traditional UK hallmarks is ended although the date letter can continue to be struck on a voluntary basis. This change will place UK manufacturers on an equal footing with their European competitors.

Finally, the date before which articles are exempt from hallmarking will be changed from 1900 to 1920 in response to concerns within the antiques trade about the inability to auction in the UK fine art works made between 1900 and 1920 which do not bear approved hallmarks.

Science and Technology

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what actions he will take to ensure that Science and Technology issues are taken into account in the work of Government Departments. [64081]

Mr. Mandelson: I am today announcing a new group of Ministers who will have responsibility for supporting me in delivering my responsibility for science, engineering and technology across Government. I am looking to the new group to build on the work of the Ministerial Foresight Group—driving forward the Foresight Programme will be at the top of its agenda—and to ensure that the Government takes full advantage of UK scientific excellence in delivering its objectives.

The new group, which will be chaired by the Minister for Science, Lord Sainsbury, will have the following membership:

Minister
Lord Sainsbury	DTI (Chairman)
Jeff Rooker MP	Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food
Peter Kilfoyle MP	Cabinet Office
Alan Howarth MP	Department for Culture, Media and Sport
George Mudie MP	Department for Education and Employment
Alan Meale MP	Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions
Derek Fatchett MP	Foreign and Commonwealth Office
Lady Hayman	Department of Health
Paul Boateng MP	Home Office
George Foulkes MP	Department for International Development
Adam Ingram MP	Northern Ireland Office
John Denham MP	Department of Social Security
John Battle MP	DTI
Geoffrey Robinson MP	HM Treasury
Helen Liddell MP	Scottish Office
Peter Hain MP	Welsh Office

The Minister for Defence Procurement will receive the papers and attend for relevant items and other Ministers will be invited where issues cover their areas of responsibility.

Post Office

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if responsibility for the Pathway project will be vested in the Post Office under his proposals for the future of the Post Office. [63702]

Mr. Ian McCartney: This project to automate the payment of social security benefit payments and a range of other services at post offices is being undertaken jointly by the Benefits Agency and Post Office Counters Ltd. under the Private Finance Initiative, with ICL Pathway as the private sector partner.

The proposals announced by my right hon. Friend on 7 December 1998, Official Report, columns 21–24, on the future of the Post Office do not affect existing responsibilities for this project.

Wassenaar Arrangement

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if officials from his Department were present at the December meeting of the Wassenaar Arrangement in Vienna. [63523]

Mr. Mandelson: The Department of Trade and Industry is regularly represented at meetings of participants in the Wassenaar Arrangement. Two officials of the DTI's Export Control Organisation attended the Plenary meeting of the Arrangement in Vienna on 2 and 3 December 1998.

Minimum Wage

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on the range of training programmes designated as accredited training under the draft national minimum wage regulations; and if he will make a statement on the reasons which underlay the decision not to designate as accredited training programmes the full list of programmes recommended by the Low Pay Commission. [63701]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government have received a number of representations on the draft National Minimum Wage Regulations dealing with the training programmes which might be designated as accredited training.

The Low Pay Commission did not define accredited training and the programmes it should cover. It is important that the programmes to be designated as accredited training should be verifiable. The draft Regulations, therefore, proposed that courses specified in Schedule 2(a) to the Further and Higher Education Act 1992, training in Scotland leading to an award by the Scottish Qualifications Authority and equivalent vocational training in Northern Ireland might be defined as accredited training. The consultation exercise on the draft Regulations invited suggestions for alternative forms of training which might be included and these are being considered.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of the national minimum wage on the activity holiday industry; what representations he has received from the industry in relation to the draft national minimum wage regulations; and if he will make a statement. [63698]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government share the Low Pay Commission's view that the national minimum wage at the levels we propose is sensible and will not adversely affect business competitiveness or employment. We have received a number of representations from the activity holiday industry and others on the draft national minimum wage regulations. We are currently considering those representations and will present the regulations to Parliament for approval shortly.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research his Department has conducted on the commercial cost of board and lodging; and if he will make a statement on the level to be included in the national minimum wage regulations for accommodation. [63780]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Low Pay Commission took evidence on current practice on the provision of board and lodging during its consultation exercise on the national minimum wage. It recommended that a maximum figure of £20 per week, which was not intended to be a commercial valuation, should be set for any deduction for the cost of accommodation provided by an employer. The draft national minimum wage regulations provide that, when assessing compliance with the national minimum wage, the maximum offset allowable for accommodation provided by the employer will be £2.85 per day.

The Government accepted the Commission's recommendations, subject to consultation on the practicalities of implementation. We are currently considering the representations, including those on the level of the deduction for living accommodation and will present the regulations to Parliament for approval shortly.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations his Department has received on the amount that is deductible for meals provided by an employer under the draft national minimum wage regulations; and if he will make a statement. [63777]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government have received a number of representations during the consultation exercise on the draft national minimum wage regulations on the amount that can be deducted for meals provided by an employer.

We are currently considering those representations and will present the regulations to the House for approval shortly.

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to include Irish as a category in his Department's ethnic monitoring of staff recruitment. [63884]

Mr. Mandelson: I have no plans to include Irish as a category in my Department's ethnic monitoring of staff recruitment.

SOCIAL SECURITY

SERPS

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the savings which will result from the decision to halve SERPS for widowers and widows whose spouse dies on or after 6 April 2000. [61150]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 27 November 1998]: The estimated savings from the 1986 Social Security Act provisions which halve inherited SERPS from April 2000 are £60 million in 2000–2001, increasing to £2.3 billion by 2020.

Source:

Government Actuary's Department.

Notes:

1. Savings are gross of income related benefit changes.
2. Figures are in 1998 prices and are rounded to the nearest £10 million (£100 million for the 2020 figure).
3. The proposed new schemes for widows and widowers under State Pension age have not been taken into account.
4. Cases where the widower is over State Pension age but the deceased partner is under State Pension age are included in the estimates.

New Deal

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a breakdown of the £40 better off figures cited for lone parents who take paid employment as a result of the New Deal programme prototypes by amounts of (a) child benefit, (b) maintenance, (c) family credit, (d) net income from earnings, (e) housing benefit and (f) council tax benefit; and if he will break down the equivalent income figures which applied before paid employment was taken. [61840]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 1 December 1998]: The information is set out in the table.

Average amounts paid to new deal for lone parents sample cases (March 1998)

£ per week

	Average amounts: (Income Support claim)	Average amounts: (Family Credit claim)
Child Benefit	22.35	22.35
Maintenance	6.96	6.96
Family Credit	n/a	64.54

Average amounts paid to new deal for lone parents sample cases (March 1998)

£ per week

	Average amounts: (Income Support claim)	Average amounts: (Family Credit claim)
Income Support	67.72	n/a
Net income from earnings	n/a	78.49
Housing Benefit	54.10	25.08
Council Tax Benefit	8.60	2.10
All Income	159.72	199.51

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest penny. As such totals may differ slightly from the sum of the component parts.
2. Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit amounts are calculated using an average amount of eligible rent and Council Tax Benefit appropriate to lone parents in Great Britain.
3. It is assumed that claimants will take up their full entitlement to other benefits.
4. Based on a sample of 296 claimants who have moved from Income Support to Family Credit, taken at the end of March 1998.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people leaving the New Deal to claim benefits other than jobseeker's allowance have made such claims (a) by month and (b) by type of benefit claim, from January up to the latest date for which figures are available. [63274]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

The New Deal for unemployed people aged between 18 years and 24 years was launched in 12 Pathfinder areas on 5 January 1998 and introduced nationally on 6 April 1998.

Numbers transferring from the New Deal for 18–24 year olds to other benefits

1998	Numbers transferred to other benefits	Percentage of total leavers
January-March	200	7.7
April-June	1,140	6.9
July-September	3,010	5.9

Notes:
1. Up to the end of September 1998, the latest date for which figures are available, 4,350 young people transferred from the New Deal to other benefits.
2. The numbers leaving are collated on a quarterly rather than monthly basis.
3. Information about which benefit they claimed is not currently collected.
4. Data about the New Deal for the long term unemployed will be published early next year.

Millennium (Emergency Cover)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans his Department has to contract with the armed services to provide emergency cover over the millennium period; and what estimate he has made of the cost of that cover. [62577]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the Written Answer that the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Knowsley, North and Sefton, East (Mr. Howarth) gave the hon. Member on 7 December 1998, Official Report, column 20.

Parenthood

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he has introduced to assist with the additional costs faced during early years of parenthood. [63505]

Angela Eagle: Since November this year, an extra £2.50 a week has been made available to less well off families with children under age 11, through the income-related benefits. This is on top of the largest ever increase in Child Benefit for eldest or only children, up £2.95 a week from next April. A simultaneous increase in the family premium, from £11.05 to £13.90, will ensure that those on income-related benefits receive the full amount of the Child Benefit increase.

In June 1998, two enhancements were introduced to the childcare disregard scheme in the in-work benefits (Family Credit, Disability Working Allowance, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit). The maximum amount of weekly childcare costs allowed was increased from £60 to £100 for families who incur childcare costs for two or more children of qualifying age, and the age limit for children was extended by one year to the September following the child's 12th birthday. These families will receive further help next October through the introduction of Working Families Tax credit and associated childcare tax credit.

Severely Disabled Children

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he has introduced to increase the level of assistance made available to support severely disabled young children. [63510]

Mr. Timms: We have announced several significant improvements in support for disabled children. In our consultation document, 'A New Contract for Welfare - Support for Disabled People', we announced our intention to introduce a Disability Income Guarantee for families on income-related benefits with disabled children who have the highest care needs as well as the extension of the higher rate mobility component of Disability Living Allowance to children aged three and four. From 1 July 1998, payments awarded under the Vaccine Damages Payments Scheme were increased from £30,000 to £40,000.

Family Credit

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the (a) numbers and (b) percentages of families claiming family credit where the family credit payment is equal to (i) up to 75 per cent. of the weekly wage, (ii) from 76 to 100 per cent. of the weekly wage and (iii) over 100 per cent. of the weekly wage; and if he will break down these figures between two parent and single parent families. [63501]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table.

Family credit recipients at May 1998: weekly family credit (FC) as a proportion of gross weekly earnings

	All families		Two parent families		Lone parent families
	Number of cases (Thousand)	Percentage of all FC claimants	Number of cases (Thousand)	Percentage of all two parent families receiving FC	Number of cases (Thousand)	Percentage of all lone parent families receiving FC

2. Caseload figures are rounded to the nearest thousand and may not sum to totals

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate, on the basis of the Family Resources Survey, and pooling years of data, the number of benefit units which contain at least one employee and at least one dependent child, whose total income as measured for the purposes of the Working Families Tax Credit in each £5,000 band up to £30,000 and above, indicating separately the figures for (i) lone parent families, (ii) two parent families with one child, (iii) two parent families with two children and (iv) two parent families with three or more children, providing within each category separate figures for those in (A) firms of up to 25 employees and (B) firms of 25 employees or more. [63418]

Angela Eagle: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Child Support

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) which of the considerations which can affect child support maintenance payments under the current procedures will not come within the definition of exceptional expenses that tribunals will be allowed to take into account under the new proposals set out in "Children First"; [63894]

(2) if he will define the term, substantial change, used in Chapter 5, paragraph 18, of the Green Paper, Children First; what representations he has received concerning this term; and if he will publish those representations; [63890]

(3) what plans he has to alter the amount by which a weekly maintenance payment must change before the maintenance liability is reset by the CSA. [63891]

Angela Eagle: A full analysis of responses to the Green Paper has not yet been completed. There have so far been over 1,500 written representations and comments are still being received. The outcome of the consultation process, together with our detailed proposals for reforming the child support system, will be published in due course.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the annual running costs of the proposed new Child Support Service outlined in the Green Paper, "Children First"; and what plans he has for a new computer system to handle the new procedures. [63892]

Angela Eagle: It is not possible to produce accurate estimates of running costs until the shape of the new Child Support service is finalised.

Support for a reformed Child Support service would be developed as a key part of the Department's wider plans for modernising its computer systems.

National Insurance

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the NIRS II computer system is currently able to handle all inquiries about national insurance numbers. [63895]

Mr. Timms: The Contributions Agency is able to use the new National Insurance Recording System (NIRS2) to answer all inquiries about National Insurance numbers where National Insurance numbers are already held. This has been available to staff since the 23 July 1998.

The NIRS2 facilities for issuing new National Insurance numbers for both adults and juveniles are being piloted currently, and should be implemented nationally in the near future.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal (Expenditure)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the net expenditure effects over the next four years of the New Deal for (a) youth and long-term unemployed, (b) lone parents and (c) people with disabilities. [63504]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The Government published their latest detailed estimates for the allocation of Windfall Tax receipts, which are being used to fund the Welfare to Work programme, in the pre-Budget report last month (Cm 4076—table 4.1).

The Windfall Tax raised £5.2 billion. Half of this, or £2.6 billion, has been allocated to the New Deal for 18 to 24 year olds. It has already given opportunities to 186,000 young people.

£0.5 billion will be spent on the New Deal for long term unemployed people aged over 25 which started in June. From 30 November it has been extended in 28 pilots providing more intensive interventions.

£190 million has been allocated to the New Deal for Lone Parents which became available nationally to all lone parents on Income Support on 26 October. It was previously available in eight prototype areas from July 1997 and nationally to lone parents making new claims to Income Support from April 1998. During these two phases 87 per cent. of those attending initial interviews decided to participate in the programme.

A further £210 million has been allocated to the New Deal for Disabled People. This includes £10 million additional funding announced on 28 October.

All aspects of the New Deal programme are being comprehensively analysed. However, it is too early to make estimates of the net expenditure effects of these programmes, and it would be imprudent to make arbitrary reductions in our estimates of programme expenditure. The objective of our Welfare to Work programme is to increase the level of employment in the economy: doing so will benefit individuals in work, the wider economy, and the public finances.

Education Channel

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the broadcasting companies with which he has had discussions over the establishment of a new education channel. [63319]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 10 December 1998]: The Department has had discussions with a number of broadcasting companies about a range of issues associated with educational broadcasting, including the possible future role of education channels in supporting teaching and learning.

A number of broadcasting companies have expressed interest in the provision of digital broadcasting services to support the GCSE curriculum. Following the recent technology exercise by my Department, it is expected that final decisions will be announced in the New Year.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions he has had with (a) the BBC, (b) Granada and (c) United News and Media over the establishment of a new education channel. [63318]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 10 December 1998]: Discussions take place on a regular basis with broadcasting companies, including the BBC, Granada and United News and Media, about a range of issues associated with educational broadcasting. Companies with a broadcasting or transmission licence and experience in the provision of educational broadcast material have also been invited to submit expressions of interest in the provision of specific digital broadcasting services to support the GCSE curriculum, and a competitive tendering exercise for the provision of such services is now in progress.

University Students (Ethnic Minorities)

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of students attending university in the current academic year are from ethnic minority groups, broken down by individual ethnic group. [62036]

Mr. Mudie: The most recently available data on ethnicity of higher education students in higher education institutions in the UK are for 1997–98 and are given below:

Enrolments by home domiciled higher education students in higher education institutions in the UK[1] 1997–98

Ethnic group	Full time (thousand)	Percentage of total known	Part time (thousand)	Percentage of total known
White	763.4	86.4	385.6	91.3
Black Caribbean	10.5	1.2	6.1	1.5
Black African	15.5	1.8	7.0	1.7

University for Industry

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to allow the University for Industry to provide courses for students at levels 3 and 4; and how funding will be provided. [62549]

Mr. Mudie: There are no plans for the University for Industry to be a direct learning provider. It will rather act as a broker of learning opportunities at all levels. These will be provided in a variety of ways, including by further and higher education institutions.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what resources, in addition to the announced start up costs, will be allocated to the University for Industry in each of the years 1999 to 2002; and from which budget head within his Department these resources will come. [62602]

Mr. Mudie: £40 million has been allocated to the University for Industry for 1999–2000. The Department plans to announce decisions on further funding in the Departmental Report which is due to be published in the spring. Any such resources will be allocated from the Comprehensive Spending Review total for the Department for Education and Employment. Expenditure will be from a specific University for Industry subhead.

EU Students (Undergraduate Courses)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many EU students commenced undergraduate courses at British universities in the academic year 1998–99; and what was the total projected income expected from their tuition fees. [62604]

Mr. Mudie: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 7 December 1998, Official Report, column 91, which gave our forecasts of the number of entrants from EU in 1998–99 and their expected contribution towards their tuition fees. Actual figures are not yet available.

Dental Students

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will extend the scope of student loans for dental students and others who are required to undertake extended training. [62935]

Mr. Mudie: Under our new system of student support, dental and medical students in the first four years of their course will have access to the same loan, grant and fees support as all other students. In years five and beyond the Department of Health will meet their tuition fees and they will receive approximately half of their maintenance support through means tested NHS bursaries and the rest in non-means tested loans.

Students on other long courses are entitled to the same loan, grant and fees support as all other students.

Under our new system, students who have to study for more than a certain number of weeks in the academic year will be eligible, as now, for additional support for these extra weeks. This support will be in the form of an additional loan, repayable on the same terms as the basic maintenance loan.

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to mitigate the effect of high debt levels on dental students incurred through the student loan scheme; and if he will make a statement. [63371]

Mr. Mudie: Under our new system of student support, dental and medical students in the first four years of their course will have access to the same loan, grant and fees support as all other students. In years five and beyond the Department of Health will meet their tuition fees and they will receive approximately half of their maintenance support through means tested NHS bursaries and the rest in non-means tested loans from the DfEE.

Students on the new income contingent loans scheme will benefit from the fairer repayment system which links repayments directly to graduates' income. No repayments are made until their income reaches a threshold, initially set at £10,000, and thereafter they are calculated as a percentage of income above that level. This will ensure that dental students, and others with larger loans to repay will have affordable repayments linked directly to their earnings.

Dental and other students who entered higher education before 1998–99 and who take out five or more old style loans will repay these loans over a period of seven years compared to five years for borrowers with four or less loans. Borrowers may apply to defer repayment for a year at a time if their income does not exceed the earnings related threshold, which for 1998–99 is set at £17,784 per annum.

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average level of debt incurred by dental students through the student loan scheme when they graduate. [63372]

Mr. Mudie: This information is not collected centrally. Data taken from "Statistics of Education, Student Support for 1996–97", prepared by the Government Statistical Service and published by the Department for Education and Employment, show that borrowers entering repayment in 1997–98 owed an average of £2,180 to the Student Loans Company.

Mature Students

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received about the problems facing mature students with family obligations who are not eligible for income support or housing benefit; and if he will review the policy of Her Majesty's Government on this issue. [62289]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 7 December 1998]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received a number of representations about the circumstances of individual mature students. The main source of support for full-time students is the student support system; mandatory awards, student loans and Access Funds. There are additional allowances as part of the mandatory award for students with dependants. These allowances are increased for single students with dependants and for students who have to maintain a second home whilst [illegible]. They will be retained as supplementary grants [illegible]100 per cent. loans for maintenance costs are introduced in 1999–2000.

Most full-time students are excluded from entitlement to benefits such as Income Support and Housing Benefit. Some benefits continue to be made available to certain students in vulnerable groups, including students who are solely responsible for a child. Partners of students who are not full-time students themselves may claim benefits on behalf of the couple. In assessing entitlement to benefit, the Benefits Agency and/or the relevant local authority will take account of all income available to the student, including the maintenance grant and student loan.

New Deal (East Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have entered the New Deal Gateway in the East Hampshire District Council area since its inception; and how many took up each New Deal option. [63031]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The latest Government Statistical Service figures for clients in the Mid Hants Unit of Delivery show that to the end of September 1998:

(a) 206 young people had entered the Gateway and 41 have secured unsubsidised employment

(b) 17 had joined one of the four options.

This breaks down to: 2 on the Employment option; 3 on the Voluntary Sector option; and 12 on the Full-Time Education and Training option.

Medical Students

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to monitor the impact of the new student funding system on recruitment to higher education institutions of students studying for professions allied to medicine and pre-clinical medicine. [62640]

Mr. Mudie: Responsibility for the support arrangements for new students on courses in the professions allied to medicine and for students on nursing and midwifery courses transferred to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health in September this year. I understand that his Department is monitoring the effectiveness of student support for the professions allied to medicine in safeguarding supply. Also from September 1998, arrangements for supporting new medical and dental students became a shared responsibility with the Department of Health. These students will be supported under the main student support system for the first four years of their course and by the Department of Health from year 5 onwards. Medicine has always been a popular subject which is heavily over-subscribed and the situation will continue to be closely monitored by the Department of Health.

Extensive analysis is underway to assess and monitor the impact of our new higher education funding policies in general, using application and entrant data. A range of ongoing and planned research projects will also examine participation in higher education. A combination of internal and external studies will be undertaken.

New Deal (Southampton)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have entered the New Deal Gateway in the Southampton City Council area since its inception; and how many took up each New Deal option. [63123]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The latest Government Statistical Service figures for clients in the Southampton and South-West Hampshire Unit of Delivery show that to the end of September 1998:

(a) 751 young people had entered the Gateway and 97 have secured unsubsidised employment

(b) 108 had joined one of the four options.

This breaks down to: 29 on the Employment option; 7 on the Voluntary Sector option; 1 on Environment Task Force; and 71 on the Full-Time Education and Training option.

I am encouraged by the positive start made in the Southampton and SW Hampshire Unit of Delivery, which reflects the encouraging start to the programme overall.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps the Government are taking to ensure local co-ordination between the Single Regeneration Budget and the New Deal. [62343]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 9 December 1998]: The guidelines for Round 5 of the Single Regeneration Budget required bidders to show how their proposals would support national policies and programmes to improve employability. Bidders should also clearly show how the SRB contribution will promote synergy by reinforcing or adding value to other publicly funded programmes.

Government Offices for the Regions have been asked to consider with potential bidders how far their proposals can support and increase the effectiveness of the New Deals and other aspects of the Welfare to Work programme.

Outline bids have now been received and Government Offices will be assessing the links with national programmes including New Deal. The Employment Service will be involved in the assessment of these bids.

NVQs

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the take up by sector and subject of NVQ Level 4 in England and Wales in the last year for which figures are available; and how many candidates were registered with the awarding bodies for NVQ Level 4. [63680]

Mr. Mudie: The information about take up of NVQ Level 4 by the 11 framework sectors, and by subjects is contained in the following tables.

Candidates are not compelled to register with an awarding body to say they are working towards an NVQ. Their first contact with an awarding body may well be shortly before their assessment.

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage increase he expects in employer contributions to staff training for NVQs between December 1997 and December 1998. [63368]

Mr. Mudie: Many employers offer NVQs entirely at their own expense. We do not gather regular information on employers' expenditure on NVQs.

Class Sizes

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of, and how many primary school pupils were in classes of over (i) 30, (ii) 36 and (iii) 40 in September 1998 in each local education authority and in total; and what was the actual and percentage change in numbers compared with September (a) 1996 and (b) 1997 in each local education authority and in total. [63500]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the bids made by local education authorities before 20 November for capital expenditure to meet the Government's class size pledge. [63328]

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many temporary classrooms (a) have been built and (b) are planned to be built to meet the Government's pledge on class sizes. [63329]

Ms Estelle Morris: We have made clear that where extra classrooms are needed to meet the class size limit, LEAs should provide permanent and not temporary classrooms. Plans will not be approved where these rely simply on the use of temporary accommodation.

Specific Grants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each annual programme of specific grants for education since 1985 (a) whether there was a period of consultation before a circular was issued, (b) which grants were included, (c) for how many grants competitive bidding was required and (d) what percentage of the funds were (i) directly available to schools, (ii) allocated through local education authorities and (iii) made available by other routes. [63514]

Ms Estelle Morris: A reply to this question would involve disproportionate cost.

University Teachers

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of university teachers are engaged purely in research and have no teaching responsibilities; and how this percentage compares with (a) 1997, (b) 1996, (c) 1995 and (d) 1990. [63366]

Mr. Mudie: The percentage of university academic staff engaged purely in research is shown in the table:

Year	Percentage
1990–91	[1]34.4
1994–95	[2]28.3
1995–96	[3]29.5
1996–97	[4]29.6

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance he has given universities about the appropriate balance between research and teaching activities. [63367]

Mr. Mudie: In our response to the Dearing Report on Higher Education in February 1998 we said that a better balance is needed in higher education between teaching, research and scholarship. Guidance to the Higher Education Funding Council for England issued on 8 December said that we expect the Council to promote and enhance high quality teaching and learning and welcomed the Council's proposals to set aside £30m for promoting and rewarding high quality in teaching. It also welcomed the Council's involvement in the preparation for an Institute for Learning and Teaching in Higher Education. The guidance reflects our aim to promote effective learning and teaching, alongside our commitment to maintaining a world class science base.

Free Milk

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his policy on the provision of free milk in schools. [63897]

Mr. Charles Clarke: If local education authorities and grant-maintained schools choose to provide milk, they must, by law, supply it free to pupils whose parents receive income support or income based job-seekers allowance, but must charge other pupils.

Schools Access Initiative

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he intends to carry out a full audit of how the funding under the Schools Access Initiative has been used throughout England and Wales. [63826]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Matters on expenditure in Wales are for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. Local education authorities (LEAs) in England are asked each year to return confirmation of their spending in the previous financial year on projects supported through the Schools Access Initiative and to identify individual projects which have been carried out. Expenditure on such projects by LEAs and by grant maintained schools in England is subject to their normal external audit arrangements.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total amount of public subsidy to United Kingdom higher education institutions resulting from means-testing student tuition fees under the Teaching and Higher Education Act 1998; and what is the total amount students and parents are expected to contribute under that Act. [63327]

Mr. Mudie: The estimated public contributions to tuition fees for home and other EU students entering full-time undergraduate courses in 1998–99 in United Kingdom higher education institutions under the new funding arrangements is £184 million. The estimated contribution by students and parents is £163 million, which after allowance for the costs of collection and any default, will be received as income by institutions.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish his current estimate of the revenue savings he expects to accrue as a result of the abolition of the assisted places scheme in the years (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000, (c) 2000–01 and (d) 2001–02; and if he will list the assumptions underlying his estimates. [63330]

Ms Estelle Morris: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean) on 2 November 1998, Official Report, column 405.

WALES

Local Government Finance

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for individual local authority spending in 1999–2000, for council tax damping and arrangements for council tax benefit subsidy. [64153]

Mr. Michael: I am consulting county and country borough councils on their provisional Standard Spending Assessments (SSAs) for 1999–2000 as set out in the following table.

The provisional SSAs have been calculated using the formula agreed with the Welsh Local Government Association. They are consistent with my proposal for total standard spending, net of specific grants, of £2,986 million which I announced in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Preseli Pembrokeshire (Ms Lawrence) on 9 December 1998, Official Report, columns 229–30. The breakdown of total standard spending, net of specific grants, is:

	£ million
Provisional SSAs for county and county borough councils	2,806.3
Provisional SSAs for police authorities[1]	178.3
Proposed payments to bodies specified under section 76 of the Local Government Finance Act 1988	1.8
Total standard spending net of specific grants	2,986.4

[1] Announced in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Preseli Pembrokeshire (Ms Lawrence) on 2 December 1998, Official Report, column 212.

The details of the council tax damping scheme which I announced on 9 December 1998, Official Report, columns 229–30, are as follows:

I proposed to provide council tax reduction grant of £22.5 million to 8 councils;

the grant will keep council tax increases, excluding community council precepts and discretionary non-domestic rate relief, to £70 at Band D in those councils' areas, or the parts of them that qualify for damping, as long as councils do not increase their budgets above the guideline figures that I am announcing for limiting council tax benefit subsidy payments.

The provisional damping grant entitlement for each council is shown in the following table.

I propose that the amount of revenue support grant (RSG) for 1999–2000 should be £1,891.5 million.

The arrangements for council tax benefit subsidy are as follows:

I propose to set guideline figures consistent with an average increase of 7.2 per cent. in council tax which, in broad terms, equates to a budget increase of 5.9 per cent. over this year for each council, subject to allowing each council to spend the increase in its SSA in full;

on council tax above the guideline figure, subsidy would be withdrawn at the rate of 50 per cent.

I have made one minor change to the figures that I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Preseli Pembrokeshire (Ms Lawrence) in my answer on 9 December 1998, Official Report, columns 229–30. I now propose that the amount of specific grants for 1999–2000 should be £258 million.

Consequently, my proposals for total standard spending and aggregate external finance are £3,244 million and £2,828 million respectively.

My Department has written today to the Welsh Local Government Association and all local authorities in Wales to initiate a consultation on my proposals. Copies of the consultation letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Budget Statistics

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for allocating the Welsh budget provision in 1999–2000, and provisionally for the years (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02; and if he will make a statement. [64154]

Mr. Michael: The Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR) settlement announced on 14 July 1998, Official Report, columns 187–194, allocated a total Welsh budget of £7,812 million, £8,223 million and £8,666 million for 1999–2000, 2000–01 and 2001–02 respectively. This provides for an average annual increase of 5.3 per cent. over the three years. I have now reached my decisions on how the budget should be allocated. In reaching these decisions, I took into account the views we received on the CSR consultation paper issued in September, and I would like to thank those who responded to the paper.

I have decided to allocate significant additional resources to health and education to deliver our Manifesto commitments on class sizes, education standards and health waiting lists. These are our priorities because they are the people's priorities. There are also real terms increases for key issues like tackling social exclusion, improving the economic prosperity of Wales and for other important programmes. The allocations will provide an excellent start to the National Assembly for Wales.

For the NHS, I have allocated the indicative cash sums announced at the time of the CSR settlement in July—an extra £1.030 billion over the next three years. This is an average increase of 6.4 per cent. (3.9 per cent. in real terms) each year. As well as enabling us to meet our manifesto commitments on reducing waiting lists, these allocations will also secure other important service improvements.

For Education and Training, I am allocating more than the indicative figures announced at the time of the CSR. I am increasing the education and training budgets by £844 million over the three years, an extra £1,000 per pupil/student in Wales. This is an average annual increase of 7 per cent. (4.5 per cent. real) over the next three years. The increase fulfils our manifesto pledges to make education our first priority. Over £70 million of the local government revenue settlement will be for education and we will expect local authorities to increase education spending by at least this amount. The increase in resources will fund an additional 28,000 students in Further Education, and an extra 8,000 students in Higher Education, by 2001–02.

I have already announced, at column 390, the provisional settlement for local government and the police. The settlement allows for an extra £868 million in extra spending on services by Welsh local authorities over the next 3 years, net of specific grants. In addition, Welsh councils will be able to invest some £1.2 billion in capital projects over the next 3 years.

We have set ambitious targets for improving the economic prosperity of Wales in 'Pathway to Prosperity'. I have increased provision for economic measures by £134 million over the period. The new Welsh Development Agency will have a gross programme of over £200 million in 1999–2000. We are also increasing our support for small businesses. I am allocating an extra £1 million each year to the Wales Tourist Board to help promote tourism activities associated with the Rugby World Cup and Millennium promotions. On transport, we will begin to address the priorities on roads set out in 'Driving Wales Forward'. We will also be announcing substantially increased support for local authorities' Integrated Transport Packages.

I am also setting up a special fund which will enable the Assembly to continue to improve Wales's economic prosperity.

Social inclusion and tackling poverty is another of the Government's priorities and I am allocating an extra £87 million over the period to help regenerate the poorest communities and to help the most vulnerable members of society. I am allocating provision of £25 million for Sure Start to begin a major programme to improve the life chances of very young children, especially the children of families living in the more disadvantaged areas. We will be encouraging measures to promote access to education and 'second chance' opportunities for training. I also want to encourage joint working across a number of programmes and organisations and I am setting aside funds for the Assembly to decide how it wishes to pursue these objectives.

I have already announced resources to ensure that the new Tir Gofal agri-environmental scheme will be properly funded, thereby meeting another of our Manifesto Commitments. We are also putting extra money into the Welsh Food Strategy.

Arts and sport in Wales is an area where provision in recent years has been cut in real terms. These programmes add to the economic and social well being of our community and I have allocated additional resources in each of the next 3 years to provide real growth.

Finally, I have allocated additional resources to meet the cost of the Assembly. This includes the capital cost of the Assembly buildings and in the first year the cost of the Assembly elections.

In addition to the CSR settlement, the Welsh budget will receive at least an extra £75 million during 2000–01 and 2001–02 from the Government's Capital Modernisation Fund; these moneys will be used to fund innovative capital projects, such as housing initiatives, schools and hospitals. The allocations to the main programmes are set out in the following tables.

It is my intention to discuss the details of the allocations at a sitting of the Welsh Grand Committee on 16 December.

[1] Education and Training line includes Central Government Education and Training programmes and Local Authority revenue and capital expenditure.
[2] Local Authority revenue line includes total standard spending net of specific grants, police grants and transfers from other Government Departments.
[3] Local Authority capital line includes the Windfall Tax resources for education which are outside of the published Welsh Budget figures.
[4] Economic Prosperity line includes Central Government provision for Economic and Industrial Development programmes, Roads and Transport.
[5] Social Inclusion lines includes Central Government provision for Housing and Personal Social Services.
[6] Agriculture and Environment line includes Central Government provision for Domestic Agriculture and the Environment.
[7] OHMCI includes running costs and programme expenditure.
[8] Other non-block and demand-led items includes Housing Revenue Account Subsidy, Common Agricultural Policy grants and European Regional Development Fund grants.
[9] Total Budget line is not the sum of the individual lines since the local authority education figures are included in Education and Training and the local authority revenue and capital lines along with other technical adjustments.
[10] In addition to these figures, the Welsh Budget will be increased by its share of the Capital Modernisation fund—£30 million in 2000–01 and £45 million in 2001–02.

Bus and Rail Industries

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of people employed in (a) the bus industry and (b) the rail industry in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [62911]

Mr. Hain: The only available information relates to the bus and coach industry where the number of staff employed in Wales is provisionally estimated at 7,200 in 1997–98.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to announce the names of the chairmen of the NHS trusts in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [62695]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: My right hon. Friend announced the chairs and some non-executive directors of the new NHS trusts in Wales on Tuesday 8 December.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects the Community Support Framework, associated with Wales's bid for Objective I funding for the Western Wales and Valleys NUT2 area, to be completed; and what progress has been made in preparatory work for the Framework. [63151]

Mr. Hain: The draft regulations for Structural Funds would, if agreed by the Council, require the completion of a CSF within 9 months of the adoption of the Regulations. Negotiation of the Regulations is expected to be completed by the end of March 1999.

The Wales European Task Force is currently working on the identification of strategic priorities for the programme. I expect this preliminary stage of their work to be completed in January. The proposed strategic priorities will then be the subject of wider public consultation before Easter next year.

Dentists

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the range of the capital grant made by the Welsh Office to support salaried National Health Service dentists in Wales since the introduction of the scheme; and what repayment provisions apply if the dentists subsequently leave the NHS. [63148]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Capital funding of around £220,000 was paid to the Family Health Services Authorities of Gwynedd and Dyfed over the financial years 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96 to meet the costs incurred by those Authorities in refurbishing and equipping surgery premises to a clinical standard suitable for use by dentists employed by those Authorities. No repayment provisions apply. For the most part, the investment was in premises also used for the provision of Community Dental services and I understand that they are still in NHS use.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many salaried dentists have been employed in Wales since the Welsh Office set up its emergency scheme to maintain the availability of the NHS dental service; and of these how many (a) are currently working within the NHS dental service, (b) have transferred to provide a private dental service and (c) have ceased to provide a dental service in Wales. [63157]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The number of salaried dentist posts established by Family Health Services Authorities in Wales, and successor Health Authorities, has varied during the period since the first post was filled in 1993. The maximum in post at any one time was 7, in 1996, but there are none at present. Information on the whereabouts of the dentists who were formerly employed by the Authorities is not held centrally.

The Welsh Office dental initiative has been an outstanding success in attracting new dentists to those parts of Wales where they are needed most. The grant scheme offers a better and more economic long term alternative to the salaried option in addressing inadequacies in service provision.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will publish a monthly breakdown of the outbreaks of food poisoning in each of the last five years; [63332]

(2) how many outbreaks of food poisoning there were in each county in each of the last five years. [63517]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Preliminary monthly data on reported food poisoning in the health authorities of England and Wales are published during the second week of each month in the weekly publication, Communicable Disease Report (CDR).

Final quarterly, regional data on food poisoning which are more complete are also published in CDR (March, June, September and December 1998). Quarterly data are available from 1996. Prior to this, data on salmonella were published in the PHLS State Veterinary Service (SVS) Update.

Copies of the reports are available in the House of Commons Library or can be downloaded from the PHLS website, address: http://www.phls.co.uk.

Mixed-sex Hospital Wards

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many mental health hospitals or psychiatric units in Wales have mixed-sex wards; and if he will list them. [63786]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Information about mixed sex wards in mental health hospitals or psychiatric units is not held centrally.

Schools Access Initiative

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the use of funding by Welsh schools under the Schools Access Initiative. [63827]

Mr. Hain: Returns from local authorities relating to the Schools Access Initiative indicate that funding was used for a variety of measures including ramps, alterations to doorways, toilets with access for disabled, extra sinks and shower facilities, white lines on steps and stairs and lift installations.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what records his Department has kept of the use of the £500,000 per year granted to Welsh schools under the Schools Access Initiative. [63829]

Mr. Hain: Local authorities were asked to provide reports detailing what measures had been implemented under the Initiative. 9 local authorities reported in 1997.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he intends to audit the use of the £500,000 per year granted to Welsh schools under the Schools Access Initiative. [63828]

Mr. Hain: Local authority expenditure is subject to audit by Audit Commission appointed auditors. No separate arrangements are made for reporting to the Welsh Office.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Arms Exports

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has carried out to establish in how many and what percentage of cases military equipment exported since 1 May 1997 under an export licence has been used for (a) internal repression and (b) other human rights abuses; and if he will make a statement. [62424]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 8 December 1998]: No formal mechanisms exist at present for systematically monitoring the use that has been made of British defence equipment once it has been exported. Where relevant, our Posts overseas report on the use of British-supplied equipment in the light of information they receive. We have no evidence that military equipment exported under a UK licence since 1 May 1997 has been used for internal repression or other human rights abuses.

Licence applications for exports of military equipment and dual-use goods to military or internal security end-users are assessed against our defence export criteria and the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports. Under Criterion Two of the EU Code we assess the attitude of the recipient country of the proposed export to relevant principles established by international human rights instruments, and exercise special caution and vigilance in issuing licences to countries where serious violations of human rights have been established by the competent bodies of the UN, the Council of Europe or by the EU. We will not issue an export licence if there is a clearly identifiable risk that the proposed export might be used for internal repression.

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on deaths and injuries in demonstrations in Indonesia on 13 and 14 November. [63449]

Mr. Fatchett: We have received reports of at least 14 deaths of civilians and members of the security forces as a result of violence in Jakarta on 13 and 14 November. A large number of injuries have also been reported.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received of British military equipment being used against demonstrators in Indonesia on 13 and 14 November; and if he will list the equipment involved. [63448]

Mr. Fatchett: We have received reports that some of the military equipment deployed by the Indonesian armed forces during the civil unrest in Indonesia on 13 and 14 November was UK-supplied. We have had no reports that equipment licensed since 1 May 1997 was used.

UK Overseas Territories

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to publish his White Paper on United Kingdom Overseas Territories. [63488]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We plan that the Paper will be published early in the new year.

General Affairs Council

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the outcome of the General Affairs Council held in Brussels on 7 and 8 December; and if he will make a statement. [63341]

Ms Quin: The General Affairs Council in Brussels on 7/8 December adopted the A points listed in document 13773/98 and noted the resolutions, decisions and opinions adopted by the European Parliament in its sessions of 4–5 November and 16–20 November listed in documents 11765/98 and 12776/98. Copies of the documents listing the A points and resolutions will be placed in the House Libraries as soon as they become available.

Foreign Ministers met in a Conclave on 6 December to discuss all areas of Agenda 2000 on the basis of a draft Presidency Report to Vienna, with particular emphasis on Structural Funds. We believe the report was a good summary of progress so far. It was agreed that it should go to the Vienna European Council. There was further discussion at the GAC on 7 December, but no formal conclusions.

The GAC agreed its report to the Vienna European Council broadly endorsing the Commission's Progress Reports. It also agreed Conclusions stating that it would not at this stage make any recommendations to the European Council to add extra countries to the accession negotiations.

The Presidency presented a factual paper, detailing work needed to implement the Treaty of Amsterdam. The GAC welcomed progress so far, and called for a precise working timetable for the forthcoming months, so that the Council can regularly review preparations.

The Council agreed a short report to the European Council on Common Strategies, the new foreign policy instrument to be introduced by the Amsterdam Treaty. It also recommended a short list of subjects for Common Strategies, for the European Council to consider.

The GAC agreed on a progress report for the Vienna European Council on developing a comprehensive EU policy towards Russia. They looked forward to receiving a proposal from the Commission on EU food aid for Russia. They underlined the importance of adequate control mechanisms for the delivery of aid. Ministers will review the implementation of food aid at future meetings.

The EU Declaration on 10 December reaffirms our commitment to speak up for the rights set out in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Human rights is high on Britain's foreign policy agenda. And the initiative my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has taken with Joschka Fischer—to publish an Annual EU Human Rights Report—has helped ensure that human rights is firmly on Europe's foreign policy agenda as well.

The GAC also had an informal orientation discussion on European defence, where partners welcomed my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's initiative at the Poertschach informal European Council, and the joint statement on principles agreed between my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and President Chirac and Prime Minister Jospin at St. Malo.

The Council agreed to establish a task force on asylum and immigration. The task force will submit an initial report to the GAC by March 1999, and a further report on the results of its work before the Tampere Special European Council in October 1999. Coreper, in consultation with the K4 Committee, will consider precise terms of reference and submit them for Council approval by January 1999.

The Presidency presented two papers, on subsidiarity, and Council Working Methods. The subsidiarity paper is based on ideas raised at Poertschach, for example early application of the Amsterdam Treaty's subsidiarity proposal, and wider dissemination of the Commission's annual subsidiarity report. The Council Working Methods paper contains suggestions for improving efficiency, for example merging some Councils, better use of written procedures, restructuring agendas. Both papers were approved for transmission to the European Council.

The GAC welcomed the considerable progress made in the negotiations towards a bilateral EU/Switzerland agreement. They agreed Coreper should examine the Commission's proposal to resolve any outstanding concerns. The Presidency hoped it might be possible to reach political agreement by the Vienna European Council.

The GAC made a declaration calling on both sides in the Middle East Peace Progress to continue the implementation of the Wye Agreement in the face of violence and mutual recrimination which threaten the progress already made.

The Council adopted conclusions on Kosovo which called on both sides to respect the various relevant UN Security Council Resolutions, to refrain from violence, and engage actively in the negotiating process. The Council instructed officials to address the problem of reconstruction, calling for a report in time for the January

GAC. It condemned the FRY authorities' repression of the independent media, and agreed to impose a visa ban on the personalities responsible. It also instructed officials to consider ways to support the EU forensic mission to Kosovo.

The Council expressed its support for the reform process in Montenegro, and asked officials to consider the possibilities for further assistance.

The Council urged Croatia to intensify work to assist refugee return, media freedom and election law reform. On Bosnia and Herzegovina, it looked forward to the Madrid Peace Implementation Council; and welcomed the arrest by SFOR of General Krstic and his transfer to The Hague. It welcomed the formation of a new Government in the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

On Albania the Council welcomed the peaceful course and outcome of the referendum on the constitution, which will be a fundamental element in the construction of a stable democracy. It deplored the boycott of the referendum and continued boycott of parliament by the Democratic Party and tasked the Council's competent bodies to recommend an adequate EU response.

Commissioner Pinheiro reported on the latest round of talks of a Trade and Cooperation Agreement between the UK and South Africa. He had met with trade minister Erwin on 1 December. The Council had an exchange of views on the outstanding issues and agreed to review the situation at their next meeting.

Council agreed a revision of the Community's Generalised System of Preferences scheme. The review combines into one Regulation previously separate schemes covering agricultural and industrial products. The revision will enter into legal effect on January; its provisions will come into force on 1 July. We have argued strongly in favour of the changes.

Sir Leon Brittan gave an update on recent developments on the bananas discussion with the US. The Commission would continue to look for ways to solve the current impasse. The Member States took note with approval.

The Council noted with concern attacks on Christians during recent rioting in Indonesia, on which the Presidency had made a statement on 23 November. EU Heads of Mission in Jakarta had been asked to underline this concern with the Indonesian Government.

In the margins of the Council, the EU Troika held a political dialogue meeting on 8 December with the Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia. This was an opportunity for the new Government to describe the internal political situation, and for both sides to discuss bilateral relations, and the situation in Kosovo.

Sudan

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received about the murder of three aid workers in the Nuba mountains in June; and if he will place them in the Library. [63447]

Mr. Fatchett: The UN have given oral reports about the incident to our Embassy in Khartoum. On 9 June 1998 a World Food Programme (WFP) convoy and its police escort was attacked in the Nuba mountains, territory held by the Government of Sudan. Three Sudanese personnel were killed, two from WFP and one from the Sudanese Red Crescent (SRC), and three more SRC personnel injured. The incident occurred about 60 kms north east of Kadugli between the villages of Arie and Hadab. The convoy was fired on when crossing a Wadi; the WFP Landcruiser seems to have borne the brunt of the assault.

We have not received any formal written reports which could be placed in the Library.

Chechnya

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library the advice given to Granger Telecom, Surrey in respect of the safety of British nationals working in Chechnya. [63627]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The advice given to Granger Telecom was consistent over time and widely available. At the first FCO contact with Granger personnel in July of this year Granger's attention was drawn to the FCO's travel advice. This information was again shared with Granger at a meeting in August. The advice included the following:

"We strongly advise against travel to the Chechen Republic ... because of the unstable security situation. Visitors have been kidnapped in these areas recently."

A copy of the travel advice of 18 August has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Diplomatic Posts

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what dates the diplomatic posts will be closed in (a) Chaing Mai (b) Cleveland, (c) Kuching, (d) Pusan and (e) Seville. [63824]

Mr. Fatchett: Kuching was closed on 28 November 1998.

No date has been set for the closure of Chiang Mai, Cleveland, Pusan and Seville. They will take piace towards the end of this financial year, or in financial year 1999–2000.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from (a) Governments, (b) industry and (c) other interested parties on the proposed closures of the diplomatic posts at (a) Chaing Mai, (b) Cleveland, (c) Kuching, (d) Pusan and (e) Seville; and what consultation he has undertaken in each case. [63825]

Mr. Fatchett: There has been no representation received in either the host countries or in London from governments or any other party over the proposed closures of Kuching, Pusan and Chiang Mai. DTI have received inquiries about these closures from British companies asking for clarification.

The issue of the closure of Seville was raised informally with our Ambassador in Spain by the Spanish Government, and we have received some representations from members of the public concerned that there would be sufficient consular cover from Malaga.

Thirteen Congressmen, a Senator and the Governor of Ohio have petitioned our Embassy in Washington over the closure of Cleveland. There have been representations to the FCO and our embassy in Washington from some US politicians and by various British companies and members of the public.

In each case, we took representations into consideration before taking a final decision.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the selling agents, (b) the sale price and (c) the reserve price of each of his Department's properties currently for sale in (i) Dublin, (ii) Bonn and (iii) Casablanca. [63819]

Mr. Fatchett: The Selling Agents in Dublin are Hamilton Osborne King and F.P.D. Savills. In Bonn we are being advised by Colliers Erdman Lewis, although they are not appointed in the capacity of agents. In Casablanca our agents are Gerald Cantarel.

The remainder of the information requested is commercially sensitive.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to close the High Commission in Port Vila in Vanuatu. [63822]

Mr. Fatchett: There are no plans to close the High Commission in Port Vila, Vanuatu. However we are looking at a more flexible approach to our representation there.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to reduce the British diplomatic presence in Papua New Guinea. [63820]

Mr. Fatchett: Of the three UK-based staff currently in Port Moresby, Papua New Guinea, one will not be replaced when his tour ends (March 1999). The remaining two positions will be retained.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) departmental officials, (b) locally-engaged staff and (c) officials from other departments are currently engaged in the diplomatic posts in (i) Chaing Mai, (ii) Cleveland, (iii) Kuching, (iv) Pusan and (v) Seville. [63823]

Mr. Fatchett: The following table shows the number of staff employed in the Missions listed.

Post staff	UK-based FCO staff	LE staff	Other department staff
Chiang Mai	1.0	1.0	0.0
Cleveland	1.0	4.5	0.0
Kuching	1.0	1.0	0.0
Pusan	0.0	2.0	0.0
Seville	0.0	5.0	0.0
Total	3.0	13.5	0.0

North Korea

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of whether North Korea is meeting its obligations under the non-proliferation agreement. [63816]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: North Korea's Framework Agreement with the US commits it to freezing its Nuclear Reactor programme, and to allowing IAEA to inspect its nuclear waste sites. But we remain concerned that the IAEA is still not receiving full co-operation from North Korea. North Korea's decision in October to allow the IAEA to restart canning operations at a frozen reactor was a positive step. But it is essential that North Korea implements the IAEA Safeguards Agreement at the earliest possible opportunity, in order to give the international community confidence that it is complying in full.

We have consistently supported the IAEA in its dealings with North Korea, and supported a strongly worded resolution on this issue at IAEA General Conference in October.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held over the past two months with Madeline Albright on North Korea's nuclear programme; and if he will make a statement. [63817]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no substantive discussions with Madeline Albright on North Korea's nuclear programme over the past two months.

Nuclear issues were raised at the EU Troika meeting on 2 December, and at bilateral talks with North Korea on 3 December.

Coptic Christians

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Egyptian Government concerning the persecution of Coptic Christians in Egypt. [63815]

Mr. Fatchett: The British Embassy in Cairo closely follow human rights issues, including those related to freedom of religion. They assess that there is no general Egyptian Government policy of discrimination against Christians—a view shared by many leading Copts in Egypt who do not encourage diplomatic intervention in their problems.

We will continue to stay in touch with the Coptic Church and to monitor the situation.

Lockerbie

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the discussions held between Colonel Gadaffi and Kofi Annan about Lockerbie. [63818]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We remain in close touch with the United Nations Secretary-General, and are grateful for his efforts to persuade Libya to comply with UNSCR 1192. We look to Libya to provide an early and positive response.

China (Human Rights)

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Chinese authorities concerning individuals imprisoned for counter-revolutionary offences. [63537]

Mr. Fatchett: Through our continuing bilateral and EU/China human rights dialogues we have raised the cases of a number of individuals detained for counter-revolutionary offences. We have encouraged China to review all such cases following the removal of crimes of counter-revolution from China's Criminal Law in 1997.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Chinese authorities on their implementation of the United Nations Convention on Human Rights. [63538]

Mr. Fatchett: Through our continuing bilateral and EU/China human rights dialogues, we are encouraging China to ratify quickly, with as few reservations as possible, the two international human rights covenants which it has signed. UK experts visited China in February to share experience in this area.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the detention of members of the Democratic Party of China. [63539]

Mr. Fatchett: We are dismayed at the recent detention of members of the China Democratic Party. The actions of the Chinese authorities are at odds with the principles of the international human rights covenants which China has signed. China should release all of those detained and take a more tolerant attitude to those who wish to express freely their political views.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Chinese authorities concerning the detention of (a) Xu Wenli, (b) Lu Decheng, (c) Yu Dongyue and (d) Yu Zhijan. [63540]

Mr. Fatchett: We are dismayed at the recent detention of members of the China Democratic Party. On 2 December, our Embassy in Beijing expressed our concerns to the Chinese government. They can be in no doubt as to our views.

Vietnam

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about recent achievements of British business in Vietnam. [64090]

Mr. Fatchett: UK business has indeed achieved a series of important successes in Vietnam. UK investment in the country has risen by 50 per cent. in 1998. Foster Wheeler Energy Ltd. have recently won an important contract, worth some $15 million, as front-end engineering design consultants for the planned $1.5 billion Dung Quat oil refinery in Vietnam. The award of this contract against stiff competition is a major success. We expect Foster Wheeler's involvement to lead to substantial further business—worth perhaps several hundred million pounds—in the refinery for UK suppliers. The firm has also secured a $2 million contract to run and maintain PetroVietnam Gas Corporation's operations in Vung Tau.

Cable & Wireless received a $207 million investment licence in August to install 250,000 telephone lines in Hanoi, during the visit of my hon. Friend the Minister for Trade. Negotiations took four years. Earlier this year, Mitsui Babcock won the largest ever UK export order to Vietnam to supply power station boilers worth $123 million; and Tate & Lyle has invested $85 million in a sugar refining plant.

These successes follow several years of persistent efforts in support of would-be British investors in Vietnam not only by the companies themselves, but also by our diplomatic posts in Vietnam, by visiting UK Ministers, and by DTI and FCO officials. Those efforts continue in support of other major potential business which could result in significant spin-off benefits for many British equipment and service providers and further enhance the commercial relationship between the UK and Vietnam.

George Atkinson

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response he has received from the Government of Dubai consequent upon his note verbale regarding the arbitrary detention of George Atkinson; and if he will make a statement. [63415]

Mr. Fatchett: We have not yet received a substantive reply. On 8 December my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs had a meeting with the UAE Ambassador during which she raised the question of the United Nations Working Group on Arbitrary Detention's decision. My noble Friend asked that in the light of the UN Working Group's decision Mr. Atkinson be released. The Ambassador undertook to refer to his Government.

On 10 December the Government of the UAE told our Consul-General in Dubai that the Note is under consideration.

On 13 December, Mr. Atkinson was found guilty and sentenced to two terms of 3 years imprisonment plus fines. We understand he will appeal immediately.

Cuba (Spanish Royal Visit)

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his Spanish counterpart on King Juan Carlos's proposed visit to Cuba. [63699]

Ms Quin: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not discussed the King of Spain's proposed visit to Cuba with Sr. Matutes, the Spanish Foreign Minister.

Chile (British Ambassador)

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the British Ambassador to Chile moved into the Hyatt hotel in Santiago; for what reason; how long she intends to stay there; and what are the additional costs to public funds. [63700]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: HM Ambassador to Chile has not moved into the Hyatt hotel.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Tritium (Severn Estuary)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action his Department proposes to take to reduce the levels of tritium found in sole, flounder and mussels in the Severn Estuary; and if he will make a statement. [62964]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: I have been asked to reply.

In 1999, Nycomed Amersham will be applying for a new discharge authorisation from the Environment Agency. It will be for the Agency to determine the level of discharge of tritium that would be appropriate. The Secretary of State will be a statutory consultee reflecting his responsibilities for food safety.

In terms of dose to the critical group of fishermen, and fish and shellfish consumers, it is estimated that the current tritium concentrations in fish and shellfish contribute 40–45 microsieverts per year. Together with the dose from carbon-14 the total dose to the critical group is 60 microsieverts per year. This is well below the established limit of 1,000 microsieverts per year, and the dose constraint of 300 microsieverts per year from new sources.

Meat Exports (Specified Risk Material)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action was taken against those companies which attempted to export meat or meat products which failed to comply with national legislation concerning specified risk material during the first quarter of 1998. [63142]

Mr. Rooker: The Meat Hygiene Service, an Agency of MAFF, enforces the SRM controls on a day to day basis in licensed slaughterhouses and cutting plants. In all other premises approved under the SRM legislation, the controls are enforced by local authorities. In addition, the State Veterinary Service carries out regular unannounced independent audit visits to all premises approved under the legislation to monitor the extent of compliance. The inspection figures for the 12 month period to the end of October 1998 show that 4,096 visits were made to abattoirs in Great Britain. At 4,074 of these visits (99.5 per cent.), the handling and disposal of SRM were found to be fully satisfactory. No cases have been found of bovine spinal cord not being fully removed from carcases in licensed slaughterhouses in Great Britain since March 1996.

We are not aware of any attempts to export meat or meat products from which SRM has not been removed in accordance with the controls.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to reverse the decline in farm incomes. [63125]

Mr. Rooker: Government and all those associated with food production in the UK need to work together towards a sustainable, competitive and profitable industry and an attractive and viable countryside for the future. This means in particular securing reform of the Common Agricultural Policy, and I am planning a broad consultation with all parts of the industry on the way forward on this.

Food (EU Inspection Agencies)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list those agencies which are licensed to inspect food production establishments in third countries on behalf of the EC; [63138]

(2) how regular are the inspections of plants in each EU country and outside the EU by the Office of Veterinary and Phytosanitary Inspection; [63143]

(3) if he will make it his policy to request information from the European Commission regarding the dates when each establishment producing meat in third countries which export to the UK was last inspected by or for the EU. [63141]

Mr. Rooker: The European Commission's Food and Veterinary Office (FVO) carry out a number of missions each year to look at member states' and third countries' procedures and establishments. These missions involve audits of the bodies responsible for consumer health protection and include inspections of some individual processing premises. In addition, some member states who traditionally have carried out their own audits of third countries' procedures and establishments may continue to do so, either for products for which import rules are not yet harmonised across the Community or to complement the Commission's programme. MAFF staff are hoping to visit Brazil and Thailand early in the near year to carry out audits of the public health controls on poultry meat and poultry meat products.

The Commission are in the process of expanding the FVO so that it can carry out inspections in all third countries to verify that their establishments comply with Community provisions. As an interim measure, it has been agreed by the Council of Ministers that, for products of animal origin other than fresh meat, guarantees of conformity with Community provisions for the protection of public and animal health may, until 1 January 2001, be given by the competent authority of the third country concerned.

The frequency of FVO missions to individual countries is not laid down but is based on priorities. Work programmes are discussed in advance with the member states and reflect past experience of the products and countries concerned and the importance of the trade. Reports of the missions are, as a matter of course, presented to the Standing Veterinary Committee and summaries placed on the DG XXIV internet site.

Meat Hygiene Charges (EU)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the EU countries which apply the discretionary standard charge abatement provided for in Council Directive 85/73/EEC (as amended); [63124]

(2) if he will list the charges made by meat hygiene authorities in each EU member state. [63126]

Mr. Rooker: I am currently seeking information about the level of hygiene inspection charges levied on individual meat plants in other EU Members States, including the extent to which the standard charge abatement provision in Council Directive 85/73/EEC is applied. Once I have received this information, I will write to the hon. Member, although this may take some time.

Milk Production (Inspections)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons his Ministry conducts inspections of milk production. [63130]

Mr. Rooker: The inspections are carried out to monitor compliance with the Dairy Products (Hygiene) Regulations 1995 as amended, which implement Council Directive 92/46/EEC and its subsequent amendments, laying down the health rules for the production and placing on the market of raw milk, heat treated milk and milk based products.

Food Inspections

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons the cost of food inspections is charged to farmers. [63129]

Mr. Rooker: The dairy hygiene inspections carried out by the Dairy Hygiene Inspectorate are charged to farmers. Charging for inspections was introduced in 1987 as part of the previous administration's policy to recover a proportion of ADAS costs through charges.

Antibiotics

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to implement the recommendations of the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology, and those of the Copenhagen Conference of EU Chief Medical Officers concerning the use of antibiotics in animal feed; and on what time scale. [63180]

Mr. Rooker: The Government's response to the House of Lords Select Committee report will be published shortly. We support proposals by the European Commission to suspend the use of four antibiotic growth promoters, which would take effect on 1 July 1999.

Organophosphates

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will review the assessment, approval and monitoring mechanisms for veterinary medicines and agricultural pesticides, with particular reference to organophosphate products; and if he will make a statement. [63662]

Mr. Rooker: Agricultural pesticides and veterinary medicines are already subject to rigorous approval systems as regards pesticides, under the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986 and the Plant Protection Products Regulations 1995 and, for veterinary medicines, the Medicines Act 1968 and the Marketing Authorisations for Veterinary Medicinal Products Regulations 1994.

In order to maintain the quality and consistency of the recommendations made to Ministers, both PSD and VMD continually seek to improve and develop supporting procedures, risk assessment and approval mechanisms. The Report to Ministers of the Official Group on OPs, published earlier this year, included a detailed examination of the regulatory (licensing) system for pesticides and veterinary medicines which can be found in Chapter 6. The Official Group also noted that it had successfully improved the flow of information on all OP product related issues between Departments.

The statutory approval systems for pesticides and veterinary medicines are designed to ensure that these products can be used safely provided the manufacturers instructions are followed. Nevertheless, the Government are still concerned to make sure that the comprehensive arrangements for post-approval monitoring continue to be developed to ensure that nothing slips through the net. In addition, the variability conference held recently in York, which aimed at achieving a better understanding of variable residues of pesticides in food and the development of consumer risk assessment procedures, demonstrates the leading role we take internationally.

The Veterinary Products Committee (VPC) advises Agriculture and Health Ministers on the safety, quality and efficacy of veterinary medicines. The VPC has advised on the safety of organophosphorus (OP) sheep dips, most recently on 17 February 1997. The VPC is currently carrying out a review of other veterinary medicinal products containing OPs and will report to Ministers in 1999. In addition we are undertaking a review of OP and other anticholinesterase pesticides approved under the Control of Pesticide Regulations 1986 as announced on 12 May 1998, Official Report, column 68.

Meat Imports

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent assessment he has made of (a) the number of declared and undeclared BSE cases in other EU member states and (b) the control mechanism for the import of beef and beef extract products from those countries; and if he will make a statement. [63663]

Mr. Rooker: Figures for confirmed BSE cases in other EU Countries for 1995, 1996, 1997 and to 4 December 1998, supplied to us by the Commission are given in the following table:

EU country	1995	1996	1997	[1]1998
Belgium	—	—	1	6
France	3	12	6	14
Germany[2]	—	—	2	—
Luxembourg	—	—	1	—
Netherlands	—	—	2	2
Portugal	14	29	30	83
Republic of Ireland	16	73	77	69

[1] to 4 December 1998

[2] Germany has reported no homebred cases of BSE

The total number of BSE cases reported to the Commission by EU Member States are given in the following table:

Country	Date of last report[1]	No. of cases from UK	Total cases
Belgium	4 December 1998	—	7
Denmark	4 December 1998	1	1
France	4 December 1998	—	46
Germany	4 December 1998	5	6
Italy	4 December 1998	2	2
Luxembourg	4 December 1998	—	1

Country	Date of last report[1]	No. of cases from UK	Total cases
Netherlands	4 December 1998	—	4
Portugal	4 December 1998	7	191
Republic of Ireland	4 December 1998	12	335

[1] Date of last report received—whether indicating no change or an increase in number of confirmed cases.
[2] Germany has reported no homebred cases of BSE. The sixth case is believed to have come from Switzerland.

The UK's SRM controls require all beef and beef products for food and animal feed use imported from other EU member states and third countries to be accompanied by official veterinary certification confirming that they do not contain and were not derived from specified risk materials—the tissues most likely to harbour BSE infectivity. These national controls are in addition to the rules for intra-Community trade.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what testing and inspection procedures are applied to (i) pork, (ii) chicken and (iii) beef being imported into the UK; [63837]

(2) if he will ensure that chicken pieces coming from Brazil meet the health and safety standards which apply to poultry farmers in the UK; [63834]

(3) what steps he has taken to ensure that the British public is not buying contaminated pork or chicken in unprocessed, processed or pre-prepared food products imported from outside the UK. [63836]

Mr. Rooker: All consignments of fresh meat imported into the UK, whether from other EU Member States or third countries, must have been produced in accordance with the harmonised Community rules laid down in Council Directive 64/433/EEC. Among other things, this Directive sets out the licensing, structural and veterinary supervision requirements to be applied in abattoirs, cutting plants and cold stores. Slaughterhouses in third countries have to comply with standards at least equivalent to those laid down in the Directive before they can export to the EU. The European Commission's Food and Veterinary Office are responsible for carrying out inspections in member states and in the third countries from which fresh meat is imported into the Community. If necessary, the Commission will take infraction proceedings against Member States whose arrangements are considered inadequate.

All consignments of animal products imported into the European Union from third countries are subject to checks at designated B order Inspection Posts (BIPs). Community law requires every consignment to be subject to a documentary and identity check. For poultry meat and poultry meat products, other than from countries with which the Community has equivalence agreements, the minimum frequency laid down in Community law for physical checks is 50 per cent. of consignments. For pork and beef and related products the minimum frequency for physical checks is 20 per cent. European Commission guidance states that at least 1 per cent. of consignments which are subject to physical checks at Border Inspection Posts should be randomly sampled for residues, contaminants and bacteria such as salmonella and coliforms. Single Market rules only permit random-spot checks at the final destination on products from other Member States and on products from third countries that have passed through a BIP.

Meat and Livestock Commission

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the representatives of the (i) poultry, (ii) lamb, (iii) beef and (iv) pork producers who sit on the Board of the Meat and Livestock Commission. [63839]

Mr. Rooker: Members of the Commission are not formally appointed as representatives of particular sectors. The following producers are, however, members of the Meat and Livestock Commission:

Mrs. Helen Browning (producer of beef cattle, sheep and pigs)

Mr. Richard Campbell (pigs)

Mr. John (Reg) Roberts (sheep)

Mr. John Ross CBE (beef cattle and sheep).

In addition, the Chairman of the MLC, Mr. Don Curry, is a beef and sheep producer.

The Agriculture Act 1967, which set up the MLC does not permit the Commission to cover the poultry industry.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new initiatives he is taking to improve the effectiveness of the Meat and Livestock Commission in promoting the sale of British meat products. [63838]

Mr. Rooker: The MLC spent over £20 million in the 1997–98 financial year on promoting beef, lamb and pork. I believe that its work is recognised to be effective and that the Commission itself is best placed to judge where it should concentrate its future effort.

The MLC is currently undergoing a regular five yearly policy review and Ministers will consider all representation made in the course of that review.

Scottish Devolution

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much is spent annually by his Department on research programmes in Scotland; and what proportion of this funding will be transferred to the Scottish Parliament after devolution. [63284]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 10 December 1998]: The Ministry funds research to underpin its policy objectives. Decisions on the placing of research contracts are based on the scientific quality and value for money of research proposals and not on the geographical location of contractors. The Ministry paid some £8 million for research projects in Scotland in 1997–98, including projects carried out at Research Council institutes and universities. Post-devolution, the Ministry and the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department will continue to co-operate fully, through the Funders' Group arrangements, to ensure that R&D funded by both departments remains closely co-ordinated and that the results are shared.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what assessment he has made of the programmes which it will be ultra vires for his Department to fund or have sole responsibility for after devolution; if he will list these programmes; and if he will make a statement; [63286]

(2) if he will list (a) by programme over £50,000 and (b) the total spending by his Department in Scotland on the identifiable spending areas detailed in Table 7.6A of the Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis 1997–98 (Cmnd 3601); which of these programmes will fall solely or jointly under the responsibility of the Scottish Parliament; and what arrangements are in place to transfer control of funds for these projects to the Scottish Executive or Parliament. [63285]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 10 December 1998]: Most functions in the agriculture, fisheries and food area will become the responsibility of the devolved administrations following devolution. It is too early to say to what extent programme expenditure which is currently administered by MAFF may relate to functions which will transfer to Scottish Ministers. For the total spending by the Department in Scotland I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury to the hon. Member for North Tayside (Mr. Swinney) on 4 November 1998, Official Report, columns 614–15.

Sheep Annual Premium

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has made concerning the proposed suspension of the stabiliser for calculation of sheep annual premium payments. [63495]

Mr. Rooker: The Government are not aware of any formal proposal to suspend the operation of the stabiliser applied under the EU regime for sheepmeat. The right to propose amendments to EU secondary legislation rests solely with the European Commission. Were the Commission to propose the suspension of the sheepmeat stabiliser, we would not support such a proposal, in view of its serious implications for both UK and EU expenditure.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of total CAP expenditure will go to British farmers in the current year; and to which sectors. [63105]

Mr. Rooker: In 1997, the latest year for which data are available, direct payments to UK farmers amounted to some 8% of the total CAP budget. Of this total, 50% were arable payments, 48% livestock (including BSE related payments) and 2% agri-environment and other payments. These figures exclude market support measures such as export refunds which also benefit UK farmers but are not paid directly to them.

Methyl Bromide

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what investigations his Department is carrying out into (a) the continued use of the agricultural fumigant methyl bromide and (b) the potential reduction of its environmental impact through composted manure. [62965]

Mr. Rooker: The Government are bound by the timetable laid down in the Montreal Protocol to reduce or phase-out substances as methyl bromide which deplete the ozone layer. The Protocol was last amended in September 1997 when it was agreed, for developed countries, to cut production and use of methyl bromide by 50 per cent. by 2001, 70 per cent. by 2003 and phase out by 2005. All member states of the European Union are signatories to the Protocol, which is currently implemented through Council Regulation (EC) 3093/94.

The European Commission has proposed a draft Regulation imposing a more stringent timetable to cut production and phase-out methyl bromide.

Investigations have therefore been carried out into the impact of the phase-out of methyl bromide rather than into its continued use as an agricultural fumigant.

In addition to these investigations a LINK research project to consider alternatives for the horticulture sector commences in April next year. Part of this project aims at improving composting processes to add value to composts made from domestic waste and animal manure by optimising suppressiveness against soil borne diseases.

Animal Feed (Poultry Manure)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the prevalence of the practice of using poultry manure as the nitrogen content in compound feeds for animals. [62618]

Mr. Rooker: The use of poultry manure as an ingredient of compound animal feeds is prohibited by virtue of Regulation 15(11) of the Feeding Stuffs Regulations 1995.

Horticulture

Mr. Flight: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his Department's policy for encouraging the competitiveness of the UK horticultural industry with regard to other EU countries, in relation to the production of flowers for sale in supermarkets; and if he will make a statement. [63240]

Mr. Rooker: We are actively encouraging the competitiveness of UK horticulture through a research programme worth over £20 million, made up of contributions from the Agriculture Departments and the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council. Over £1.7 million of this is concerned directly or indirectly with ornamental horticulture.

The Ministry funds a strategic R&D programme which includes research into scheduling, improved quality and crop protection of both protected and outdoor flower crops. Specifically there is an on-going project with Horticulture Research International at Kirton to develop a framework for predicting the productivity, quality and availability of outdoor flower crops; this is now in its third year (of five) with a total cost of £385,000.

The Ministry has recently placed a project through open competition with a consortium led by The University of Wales, Cardiff, investigating the biochemistry of post-harvest deterioration of cut flowers with the objective of improving vaselife. The project will last three years at a total cost of £258,000. The Ministry also plays a full part in securing promotional funding from the European Commission which has as its objective the increase in demand for flowers and plants in the UK and a consequent increase in the sales of British produce. The UK allocation for year one of the scheme (1997–98) was £801,052 (1,079,119 ecu) and £603,833 (867,907 ecu) for year two (1998–99). But additional funding for this year is expected to be available shortly.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the special advisers in his Department and the issues on which they specialise; and to what level they have been security cleared. [62847]

Mr. Dewar: My Department employs 3 Special Advisers, Ms Wendy Alexander, Mr. Murray Elder and Mr. David Whitton. Ms Alexander advises specifically on health, the Arts, social work, child care, housing and European affairs. Mr. Elder advises on issues relating to agriculture, the environment, forestry and fisheries, home affairs, devolution, local government and transport matters. In addition, both Ms Alexander and Mr. Elder deal with matters relating to business, industry and education. Mr. David Whitton has particular responsibility for the presentation of policy and relations with the media. Special Advisers are subject to the usual security clearance arrangements. It is not appropriate to give details about particular individuals' level of security clearance.

Highlands and Islands

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (a) landing capabilities and (b) designated sites associated with his announcement of expansion to the Highlands and Islands air ambulance service; and if he will make a statement. [63309]

Mr. Galbraith: The announcement concerned the recent contract awards made by the Scottish Ambulance Service NHS Trust, which has secured the continuing provision of Patient Air Transport Services for the people of Scotland. In addition to sustaining the high quality Air Ambulance Service and Air Ambulance High Dependency Service, both of which traditionally use fixed wing aircraft, significant improvements have been made to the Helicopter Emergency Medical Service.

The 2 new helicopters that are being commissioned into service are roomier, faster and quieter than their predecessors. Fully equipped for patient care, the aircraft are built for flying in more adverse weather conditions and in hours of darkness. Both will operate 24 hours a day, 365 days a year with air crew supported by ambulance paramedics and technicians and will be capable of landing at any of the 226 Civil Aviation Authority approved airports, landing strips and other landing sites located across Scotland. Outwith hours of darkness helicopters can land at any site so long as it is safe to do so. I shall write to the hon. Member with a detailed list of all of these locations as soon as possible, and will arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the forecast payment from the European Union with regard to the Highlands and Islands Objective I area for (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [63152]

Mr. Macdonald: In 1997–98, the amounts received from the European Commission with regard to the Highlands and Islands Objective 1 area totalled £24.3 million, while the forecast receipts for 1998–99 amount to £78.9 million. These payments include those made for the purposes of the Highlands and Islands Objective 1 Programme as well as those made in pursuance of various Community Initiatives using the European Union Structural Funds. The amounts shown do not include certain payments made from the Guarantee Section of the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund where separate information for the Highlands and Islands Objective 1 area could not be identified except at disproportionate cost. Nor, for the same reason, do they include any payments made by European institutions other than the European Commission.

The amounts received from the Commission as shown do not necessarily correspond in terms of their timing either with the commitment of funds or the payment of funds to individual projects under the Objective 1 Programme or with the Community Initiatives.

Dounreay

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Scottish Environment Protection Agency report into fragments of irradiated nuclear fuel in the Dounreay local environment will be received. [64389]

Mr. Galbraith: The report was submitted to my right hon. Friend by the Scottish Environment Protection Agency on 10 December 1998. Copies are available in the House of Commons Library. We have noted the recommendations contained in the report. These are:

> The primary aim should be to restore the area affected by the fishing restrictions and any other affected areas to a clean pristine condition, and that as far as possible, within SEPA's powers, SEPA should insist that UKAEA make all practicable efforts to assist in quantifying the risks involved as a result of the irradiated nuclear fuel fragments in the environment, as a matter of priority and urgency.
> In the meantime, applying the precautionary principle, SEPA's advice to the Scottish Office is that the two kilometre fishing restrictions should remain in force.
> The public should be kept well informed and any information issued to the public should make clear the low level of risk involved by reference to comparisons with other activities.
> The ultimate aim should be to remove the restrictions as soon as possible and, to that end, greater and speedier effort should be made by the UKAEA to find and quantify the extent of contamination in the local marine environment, using the best available methodology and technology.

Accordingly, the two kilometre fishing restrictions will remain in force. Clearly these restrictions cannot be lifted until UKAEA find and quantify the extent of contamination in the local marine environment, and this work should proceed as a matter of urgency. I have asked SEPA to ensure that there is sufficient monitoring in place to ensure that any particles finding their way to the public beach at Sandside are promptly detected and removed.

Television Licence Fees (Non-Payment)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prosecutions arose from non-payment of television licence fees in the last year for which figures are available; if he will estimate the number of such prosecutions against women; what was the average fine for non-payment; how many people are currently in prison for non-payment, and how many of these are women; and if evidence from television detector vans or hand-held detectors has been successfully used in any such prosecutions. [62441]

Mr. McLeish: The available information is set out in the table. Custodial sentences for non-payment of a television licence are not available to the courts as a first disposal. Information on the method of detecting such offences is not collected centrally.

In 1996, there were 30 fine default receptions (21 of which involved females) into Scottish penal establishments for non-payment of fines for offences committed under the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949.

Persons proceeded against where the main offence was under the Wireless Telegraphy Act[1] 1949, Scotland, 1996

Main disposal	Males	Females	Total
Persons proceeded against	1,917	3,817	5,734
Persons with a charge proved	1,841	3,762	5,603
Of which:
Persons fined	1,575	3,207	4,782
Average fine (£)	60	54	56
Persons admonished	251	540	791
Other disposal	15	15	30

[1] Most prosecutions under this Act relate to non-payment of a television licence. Where known, prosecutions for other offences under this Act have been excluded from the table

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Iraq

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral statement of 1 December 1998, Official Report, column 668, if he will take steps to seek to refer the Government of Iraq for breaches of the UN Convention on Genocide to the International Court in The Hague. [64113]

Mr. Fatchett: This question has been considered in the past. I will write to the hon. Member on the subject. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral answer of 1 December 1998, Official Report, column 668, what action he has taken in support of the INDICT campaign to date. [64110]

Mr. Fatchett: We have fully supported the INDICT campaign since its launch in the House last year. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister sent a message to INDICT's press conference earlier this month reconfirming that support. Foreign Office officials keep in regular contact with the INDICT campaign and offer advice and support where needed.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral answer of 1 December 1998, Official Report, column 668, if he will take action to indict Tariq Aziz, the Foreign Secretary of Iraq, for war crimes. [64111]

Mr. Fatchett: As the hon. Member will be aware, the INDICT campaign is calling for charges to be brought against key members of Saddam Hussein's regime, including his Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz. HMG fully supports the INDICT campaign as it works toward the day when such people can be brought to book for their crimes.

Chechnya

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library the written advice his Department gave to British companies considering contracts in Chechnya. [64168]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Tiverton and Honiton (Mrs. Browning) on 14 December 1998, Official Report, column 402.

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) guidance, (b) advice and (c) assistance was (i) offered to and (ii) requested by the Chechen authorities in connection with the search for the four hostages. [64167]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: During the 15-month captivity in Chechnya of Camilla Carr and Jon James, and the subsequent tragic kidnap of Rudolf Petschi, Peter Kennedy, Darren Hickey and Stanley Shaw, the FCO, HM Embassy Moscow and the Metropolitan Police corresponded with and held meetings with the Chechen authorities outside Chechnya to discuss the two cases. Some of these contacts followed requests for assistance from the Chechen authorities, but most were at our request. We provided some non-lethal police equipment to the Chechen investigating authorities, to assist them. At the last such meeting, with Chechen Deputy Prime Minister Atgeriev in London on 26 October, we emphasised the need to avoid endangering the four men's lives. Atgeriev agreed that the safety of the hostages was paramount. He confirmed that the equipment provided by the UK had been of assistance to his staff.

Chile (Airbus Sale)

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate the number of hours spent by the Commercial Attaché in the British Embassy, Santiago, Chile since 1 May 1997 in assisting the sale of Airbus aircraft to LAN Chile. [64025]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Airbus Industrie has sought no help from the British Embassy in Santiago with the sale of Airbus to Lan Chile.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Television Licence Fee

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he intends to set next year's television licence fee at the level indicated by the five-year formula announced by the previous Government; and if he will make a statement about future licence fee levels. [64272]

Mr. Chris Smith: On 11 December 1998, Official Report, column 636, the Government announced their intention, after careful consideration, to retain the television licence fee formula for the five years from April 1997 introduced by the previous Government. The formula, based on a report by independent consultants, Braxton Associates, is based on an assessment of the BBC's financial needs and the potential for improved efficiency and the development of alternative sources of revenue. It is designed to allow the BBC to plan its business properly for the period as a whole.

Under the formula, licence fee increases for the five-year period as a whole are set just below inflation as measured by the Retail Prices Index (RPI). However, the increases from 1 April 1999 are set at RPI plus 0.5 per cent., reflecting primarily the additional costs faced by the BBC in launching its new digital services. The formula provides for changes in the licence fee of RPI minus 1 per cent. and RPI minus 2.5 per cent. in 2000–01 and 2001–02 respectively.

Application of the RPI figure of 3.2 per cent. for the year to September 1998, plus 0.5 per cent., to the current unrounded licence fees produces new rounded totals of £101.00 for a colour licence and £33.50 for a black and white licence. The necessary regulations to bring these fees into force will be laid before the House in due course.

Radio Authority

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many staff at the Radio Authority have been (a) suspended and (b) subsequently dismissed since July; and for what reasons. [63437]

Janet Anderson: I understand that one member of the Radio Authority staff is currently suspended pending the outcome of current police investigations. The Authority has not dismissed any staff since July.

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what measures are in place to monitor the conduct of those staff at the Radio Authority who award broadcast licences to local radio stations and monitor their compliance with the conditions of the licence. [63436]

Janet Anderson: The Radio Authority is a statutory public corporation independent of Government and my Department has no supervisory role in its day-to-day activities. It is the members of the Radio Authority, not its staff, who award broadcast licences for independent local radio. Members are bound by the Authority's detailed code of best practice, a copy of which I have placed in the Libraries of the House. The Authority's members supervise and monitor the Authority's staff, who in turn are bound by the Authority's staff rules and regulations.

Terrestrial Television

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimates his Department has made of the percentage of viewers which will be able to obtain access to independent television and digital terrestrial services (a) in England and (b) in Wales. [63398]

Janet Anderson: The BBC and Independent Television Commission are responsible for transmission arrangements for terrestrial television services in the UK. They estimate that analogue terrestrial television services reach 99.4 per cent. of the UK population and 98.3 per cent. of the population of Wales. The BBC and ITC estimate that the launch phase of digital terrestrial television will deliver services to around 90 per cent. of the UK population, and 70 per cent. in Wales, by the end of 1999. Coverage of each of the six multiplexes will vary and in some cases will be less. The BBC and ITC have jointly produced a CD-Rom containing coverage predictions for each multiplex for each transmitter site. Copies of the CD-Rom have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the special advisers in his Department and the issues on which they specialise; and to what level they have been security cleared. [62843]

Mr. Chris Smith: There are currently two special advisers in the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, John Newbiggin and Andy Burnham. The work is divided between the two as appropriate but covers the full range of issues for which I am responsible. Special advisers are subject to the usual security clearance arrangements.

British Library

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what were the (a) total building costs and (b) fitting out costs when the new British Library was handed over to its new head; and what additional costs have been incurred in respect of (a) and (b) since that date. [63363]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The new British Library building was legally transferred to the British Library Board on 1 July 1997. By that date the Department had spent an estimated (a) £470.1 million on building costs, which included construction of the building, project management and professional services; and (b) £28.3 million on fitting out costs which included such items as office and reading room furniture, carpets and book shelving. The equivalent figures at 8 December 1998 stood at (a) £476.4 million and (b) £28.5 million.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the fees paid to date to lawyers and consultants for advice or litigation concerning the British Library. [63364]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The fees paid for professional services by lawyers and consultants on the project over the past 16 years, to 8 December 1998, were £71.6 million. This is broken down as follows: architectural services, structural design and quantity surveying (£47.6 million); mechanical and electrical engineering design and advice (£19.7 million); and commercial claims management, legal advice and legal costs (£4.3 million).

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what has been the average (a) number of books delivered per reader and (b) waiting time for the automated book delivery system in each month since the new British Library opened. [63369]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 14 December 1998]: (a) The average number of items delivered per reader is as follows:

	Average number of items delivered per reader
December 1997	3
January 1998	3
February 1998	3
March 1998	3
April 1998	3
May 1998	3
June 1998	3
July 1998	3
August 1998	3
September 1998	3
October 1998	3.5

(b) Book delivery performance data are recorded by the percentage of items delivered against benchmarks measured in minutes. The methodology does not lend itself to calculation of average delivery times. In the period during which three of the main reading rooms (Humanities 1 and 2, and the Rare Books and Music Reading Room) have all been open, the percentage of books delivered within an hour of request was as follows:

	Percentage of items delivered within sixty minutes
March 1998	55
April 1998	47
May 1998	47
June 1998	38
July 1998	47
August 1998	42
September 1998	54
October 1998	64

Task Forces and Review Bodies

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many task forces and review bodies are currently in place in his Department; if he will list them; and when they will be reporting their conclusions. [63502]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 14 December 1998]: My Department has 4 task forces and review bodies. These are listed with their reporting timetables.

1. The Film Policy Action Committee

The Committee was set up to take forward the recommendations of the Film Policy Review, which reported in March 1998. The Committee is due to complete its work by April 1999.

2. The Creative Industries Taskforce

The results of the mapping exercise it instigated were published in November 1998. The Task Force are currently in the process of formulating their forward work programme.

3. The Football Taskforce

The Taskforce has reported to my hon. Friend the Minister for Sport on:

a. Eliminating Racism from Football—30 March 1998;

b. Improving Facilities for Disabled Supporters—29 July 1998.

The Taskforce's report on "Players as role models" is expected by the end of the year and the report on the "Commercial aspects of the game" is expected early in the near year.

4. Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art

The Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art produces an annual report, addressed to the Secretary of State which is presented to Parliament. The most recent publication is the forty-fourth report, covering the period 1 July 1997–30 June 1998, which was published by the Stationery Office (Cm 4056) in October 1998. The forty-fifth report (1 July 1998–30 June 1999) will be published in October 1999.

Tourism

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what initiatives are planned by his Department to assist local authorities to develop tourism policies; and if he will make a statement. [63821]

Janet Anderson: Our new tourism strategy, to be published early in 1999, will set out the strategic direction needed to ensure tourism growth that this economically, environmentally and socially sustainable. The strategy highlights the ways in which regional and local tourism strategies can help to increase tourism's benefit to local communities.

In recognition of the economic and social importance of cultural services to local communities, local authorities are also being encouraged to develop Local Cultural Strategies covering the full range of cultural services they offer, including tourism.

Tourist Guides

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what market research on tourist guides has been undertaken (a) for and (b) by the English Tourist Board in the past three years. [63681]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: No dedicated research on tourist guides has been undertaken for or by the English Tourist Board in the last three years.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Local Government Finance

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list (i) the total provisional standard spending assessments for 1999–2000 for (a) Buckinghamshire County Council, (b) Aylesbury Vale District Council, (c) Chiltern District Council, (d) South Buckinghamshire District Council, (e) Wycombe District Council, (f) Milton Keynes Borough Council and (g) Thames Valley Police, indicating the amounts for each major service block within each authority and (ii) the amount of the SSAs as they would have been if calculated by the same formula as in 1998–99. [64169]

Ms Armstrong: The figures are given in the table. Table A shows the 1999–2000 provisional SSAs. Table B shows what the SSAs would have been if calculated by the same formula as in 1998–99, but using data and national control totals for 1999–2000.

Table A: 1999–2000 Provisional SSA

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the impact of the inclusion of sparsity factors into standard spending assessments for each shire county (a) in total amounts and (b) as a percentage change. [63391]

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each local authority the increase in standard spending assessment (a) for education, (b) for social services and (c) in total included in the 1999–2000 local government revenue finance settlement. [64200]

Ms Armstrong: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for 1999–2000 the proposed percentage gains and losses to standard spending assessments for each district council arising from their enhanced population figures, ranked and numbered in descending order. [63181]

Ms Armstrong: The information requested has been placed in the Library, together with a similar table for education authorities.

The calculations have been made by re-estimating the underlying statistical formulae using resident population instead of enhanced population. If such a change in the formula were being contemplated, several other components of the formula would need to be re-examined if its statistical validity was to be maintained.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for 1999–2000 the (a) proposed external funding included in education SSAs, (b) total proposed funding from other grants to LEAs and (c) combined amounts for (a) and (b) as sums per head of pupils in (i) shire counties, (ii) unitary authorities, (iii) Metropolitan authorities and (iv) London authorities ranked and numbered in descending order. [63427]

Ms Armstrong: The main sources of external funding of local authorities are Revenue Support Grant and a share of National Non-Domestic Rates. The amount of these for each local authority is shown in the tables which have been placed in the Library. No distinct amount of Revenue Support Grant or National Non-Domestic Rates is allocated specifically to education. The amount of other grants relating to education proposed for each local education authority will be announced in due course by the Department for Education and Employment.

Inner Thames Marshes

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what English Partnerships has spent on feasibility studies, investigations and the preparation of planning applications for the proposed development in the Inner Thames Marshes SSSI at Havering Riverside, Rainham Marsh; [62882]

(2) if he will list the feasibility studies and investigations carried out by or funded by English Partnerships and those in which English Partnerships has had involvement with regard to the proposed development in the Inner Thames Marshes SSSI at Havering Riverside, Rainham Marsh; [62881]

(3) what plans English Partnerships has to provide financial support to attract development in the Inner Thames Marshes SSSI at Havering Riverside, Rainham Marsh. [62883]

Mr. Caborn: When English Partnerships was formed in 1993 it inherited, acting as Agent for the Secretary of State, a commitment to pay Derelict Land Grant to the London Borough of Havering worth £156,700 for the preparation of site investigation reports. In 1996, English Partnerships increased this grant to a total of £180,000. In addition, the Agency has paid £149,506 towards the costs of environmental site investigations by LB Havering and amassing supporting evidence for the planning application and has spent a further £20,159 for an assessment of investment demand for the Havering Riverside site.

If planning consent is approved, an application for gap funding may be made to English Partnerships to cover the abnormal costs of developing the Havering Riverside site.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list (a) the (i) task forces, (ii) review panels and (iii) advisory groups his Department has, (b) the remit of each and (c) the members of each together with their principal employment and their level of remuneration. [62805]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have today placed in the Library of the House the information requested for those task forces, review panels and advisory groups set up by my Department since 1 May 1997 and still in existence. The list uses the same definitions as in my answer to the hon. Member for Eastleigh (Mr. Chidgey) on 30 July 1998, Official Report, columns 430–32.

Water Metering

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate (a) the number of one and two person households which would benefit from water metering and (b) the amounts of saving forgone by them in each of the past two years, for the current year and for next year, distinguishing between (i) pensioner households and (ii) households including a person on income support or housing benefit. [63242]

Mr. Meale: The following estimates are taken from the report "Incidence Effects of Charging for Domestic Water and Sewerage Services" published by my Department in July 1998. This reported the results of modelling work undertaken on behalf of the Department by Maxwell Stamp Plc. Estimates were produced as percentages rather than numbers in groups.

(a) Under the current tariffs of water undertakers, 66 per cent. of single person households, 31 per cent. of couples with no children nad 38 per cent. of single parents with one child would pay less on a measured than an unmeasured basis. No breakdown has been made of these categories into pensioners and persons on income support or benefit. However, 55 per cent. of all pensioner households and 47 per cent. of all households in which one member was in receipt of income-related benefit would pay less on a measured than an unmeasured basis. These estimates assume no consequent reduction in consumption or tariff rebalancing.

Under a move to a measured basis without standing charge, those gaining would be as follows: 79 per cent. of single person households, 32 per cent. of couples with no children, 43 per cent. of single parents with one child, 63 per cent. of all pensioner households and 54 per cent. of all households in which one member was in receipt of income-related benefit.

(b) Savings figures have not been separately estimated for past or future years. Under current tariffs the distribution of savings for these groups would be as in the following table:

Percentages

Annual Gain	£0–50	£50–100	More than £100
Single adults	32	21	13
Couples with no children	18	7	6
Single parents with one child	20	9	9
Pensioner households	29	16	10
Households with a recipient of income-related benefits	25	13	9

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy to require water supply companies to notify customers of the likely range of metered water charges. [63243]

Mr. Meale: The Government's view is that water undertakers should ensure that all their customers are made fully aware of all the charging options open to them without favouring one solution over another.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy to require water supply companies to install meters without charge by December 1999 to one and two person households including a person on income support or housing benefit. [63245]

Mr. Meale: The Government's policy, reflected in the Water Industry Bill, is that domestic consumers presently charged on an unmeasured basis should have the option of requesting a measured basis of charging. However, no household should be compulsorily transferred to a measured basis of charging where they are using water only for essential household use.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is his policy to allow landlords of short-term tenants to deny them the benefit of metered charges for water. [63244]

Mr. Meale: Under the present provisions of the Water Industry Act 1991, neither tenants nor any other consumers have a legal right to be charged for water on a measured basis, although water undertakers have powers to install meters and to charge any customer on a measured basis.

We propose that domestic water customers should have the right to move to a measured basis of charging for water, free of any initial costs for meter installation. Consumers benefiting from this right would include tenants who pay their own water charges. The Water Industry Bill provides that any contrary provision of any tenancy agreement which might otherwise prevent the installation of a meter is not to block the exercise of this right by tenants. However, the right would not be afforded to tenants on fixed term tenancies of less than six months. It is the Government's view that such tenants do not have a sufficiently long term interest in the basis of charging for water to warrant over-riding any provision in the tenancy agreement.

Marine Targets Sub-group

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the members of the Marine Targets Sub-group. [63237]

Mr. Meale: The members of the Marine Targets Sub-group are:

Dr. Duncan Shaw, Liverpool University, Chairman

Dr. John Baxter, Scottish Natural Heritage

Joan Edwards, Wildlife Trusts

Dr. Susan Gubbay, Independent Consultant

Dr. Tim Hill, English Nature

Dr. Stephen Lockwood, Centre for Environment, Fisheries & Aquaculture (CEFAS)

Elspeth MacDonald, Fisheries Research Services, Scottish Office

Dr. Mandy McMath, Countryside Council for Wales.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the forecast payment from the European Union with regard to the Merseyside Objective I area for (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [63153]

Mr. Meale: The payment from the European Union was, for 1997–98, £63.672 million and the forecast payment for 1998–99 was £53.457 million.

The Objective 1 Programme on Merseyside is now close to full commitment and while spend on ERDF, in particular, has been slower than expected this will increase substantially as the Programme draws to a close.

Gatwick Airport

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in which year noise limits were first placed on individual aircraft taking off from Gatwick Airport; and when he expects these limits to be reduced. [63453]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Noise limits on aircraft taking off from Gatwick have applied since 1968. On 24 November 1997 we published a consultation paper proposing lower daytime and night-time noise limits for aircraft departing from Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted and more efficient noise monitoring arrangements. In February 1998 the International Air Transport Association (IATA) submitted an application for leave to apply for judicial review of that consultation paper. The Department subsequently undertook to publish a supplementary consultation paper and IATA withdrew its application for leave to apply for judicial review. We hope to issue the supplementary paper early in the new year. The consultation period will remain open until eight weeks after the supplementary paper is issued. As indicated in the November 1997 consultation paper, if possible the Secretary of State will aim to announce his decision within 3 months of this deadline. If the decision is to implement the proposals as set out, or with only relatively minor alterations, the Secretary of State would seek to bring them into effect within not less than 2, and not more than 3, months of the date of the announcement. Comments have been invited on these timescales as well as on the proposals.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his estimate of (a) the passenger throughput of the Manchester second runway by 2008 and (b) the increase in passenger throughput at Gatwick airport up to 2008. [63458]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department publishes national traffic forecasts, the most recent being for the years 2000, 2005, 2010 and 2015. These forecasts split traffic between the London area and the other United Kingdom airports but the Department does not produce forecasts for individual airports. Manchester Airport has not published detailed forecasts for the period beyond 2005, but I understand that the airport company expects passenger throughput to exceed 30 million by 2008. the standard operating procedure will be for arriving aircraft to use the existing runway and for departing aircraft to use the second runway. BAA's most recent 10 year forecasts for its London airports, published in October, include 39.2 million passengers at Gatwick Airport in 2007–08 and 40.0 million in 2008–09.

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the NATS system at Swanwick to be assessed as fit for purpose. [63605]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There are a number of steps to progressively assess the Swanwick system's fitness for purpose. The Technical Transfer, which represents the confirmation that the system is technically ready for operation, is expected in late 2000. NATS will also have to demonstrate the safety of the system to the CAA's Safety Regulation Group before the system can come into operation.

Correspondence

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy to ensure that all letters from his Department and its agencies use the titles of addressees; and if he will make a statement. [63460]

Mr. Meale: The Department seeks to ensure that all correspondence is correctly addressed to recipients, and includes titles where appropriate.

Public Transport

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what studies his Department has made to determine the proportion of private road and freight journeys which could be achieved on an equal basis by public transport. [63357]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Studies of the potential for modal shift are usually carried out to inform decisions on investment in major public transport projects and to monitor the effects. Examples of these and other recent studies carried out by the Department or in which it has been involved include:

The M1/A1 (M) Corridor Road/Rail Cross Elasticity Study (May 1994)

Manchester Metrolink Monitoring Study (December 1996)

Sheffield Supertram Monitoring Study (expected 1999)

The Trans-Pennine Rail Strategy Study (January 1992)

Impact of Transport Policies in Five Cities (November 1994).

In relation to the potential for shifting freight journeys from road to rail, the Office of the Rail Regulator commissioned the following study:

"The Potential for Rail Freight: A report to the Office of the Rail Regulator" (September 1997).

In addition, the environmental benefits of reducing lorry journeys are taken into account in assessing applications for freight grants.

Departmental Staff (Kandola Report)

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the report by Pearn Kandola in relation to discrimination in his Department on grounds of (a) race and (b) gender; [63351]

(2) what factors underlay the commissioning of a review of his Department's staff appraisal system by Pearn Kandola; [63354]

(3) what were the findings of the report commissioned by his Department into his Department's staff appraisal system, undertaken by Pearn Kandola; [63337]

(4) if the report by Pearn Kandola into his Department's staff appraisal system identified the causes of the statistically significant differences in performance marking between ethnic minorities and whites; [63349]

(5) what advice he has received from officials on the compliance of departmental staff appraisal systems with requirements to be non-discriminatory; [63353]

(6) if the report by Pearn Kandola into his Department's staff appraisal system identified the causes of the statistically significant differences in performance marking between men and women in certain grades; [63350]

(7) what was the cost of the study of his Department's staff appraisal system by Pearn Kandola; [63355]

(8) if he will make a statement on staff concerns relating to racial discrimination contained in the Pearn Kandola report into his Department's staff appraisal system; [63348]

(9) if he will publish the report by Pearn Kandola into his Department's staff appraisal system; [63352]

(10) what action he is taking on the findings of the study by Pearn Kandola into his Department's staff appraisal system. [63356]

Mr. Meale: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions is committed to equality of opportunity. All DETR staff have a right to fair treatment throughout their careers regardless of race, ethnic or national origin, age, religion, gender, marital status, disability or sexual orientation.

As part of our commitment to equality of opportunity, my Department monitors and compares the annual performance and promotability of its staff by gender, ethnicity, disability and part/full-time working. When the analysis of performance reports for staff in the central Department for the year to 31 March 1998 was carried out, a number of statistically significant differences were identified in relation to gender, ethnic and other groups: the performance marks for women were significantly higher than those for men in administrative grades, and white staff received higher marks than ethnic minority staff at Executive Officer and Personal Secretary level.

In the light of these findings, Pearn Kandola, a firm of occupational psychologists, were appointed to carry out an independent study of the appraisal system.

The Pearn Kandola report was completed in the first week of December. It concluded that overall, from the evidence looked at, the appraisal system on balance appeared to be fair. The specific cause or causes of the differences in report markings could not be identified. The report made a number of recommendations on how the system could be improved which the Department will be acting on.

The cost of the study was £32,000.

I have placed copies of the full report in the House of Commons Library.

The issues raised by the report are currently under consideration.

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which UK-wide or Britain-wide programmes will be the responsibility of his Department after the establishment of the National Assembly for Wales and the Scottish Parliament; and what is the forecast level of expenditure on such programmes in 1998–99. [63481]

Mr. Meale: The Government of Wales Act 1998 provided for a Transfer of Functions Order to be made to transfer Ministerial functions to the National Assembly for Wales. The order was published in draft for public consultation on 12 November 1998. Work is continuing within Government to finalise the text of the Order and until work is completed, it is not possible to state with certainty what functions will transfer to the Welsh Assembly. Similarly, the functions which will be devolved to the Scottish Parliament under the Scotland Act 1998, depend in part on secondary legislation which has yet to be passed. My Department is reviewing its programmes to establish whether any programme expenditure relates to the functions which are being devolved and to assess the need for any consequential transfer of funds to the Welsh Assembly and Scottish Parliament.

Detrunked Roads

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what his policy is in respect of the maintenance of detrunked roads, where that maintenance is currently subject to a DBFO agreement. [63557]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The A30/35 Exeter to Bere Regis project is the only DBFO project affected by detrunking proposals. The Highways Agency will discuss the implications of detrunking this road with all the interested parties, to ensure that it continues to be maintained to proper standards.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what formula he will apply to determine the funding to be transferred to highway authorities in respect of detrunked roads. [63383]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Transport has made it clear that there will be a fair re-allocation of resources to reflect the financial responsibilities which local authorities will assume when roads are actually detrunked. The arrangements for achieving this objective are currently the subject of consultation with the Local Government Association.

Emission Targets (Kyoto)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the progress made in achieving the CO_2 reduction targets agreed at Kyoto for the United Kingdom. [63614]

Mr. Meale [holding answer 14 December 1998]: On 26 October 1998, the Government published a consultation paper on climate change. The paper describes progress to date in reducing greenhouse gas emissions in the UK and sets out a variety of policy options for meeting our climate change targets. It covers both the UK's legally binding target from Kyoto of a 12.5 per cent. reduction in a basket of six greenhouse gases by 2008–2012 and our domestic goal of a 20 per cent. reduction in carbon dioxide emissions by 2010. Following the consultation period, we will develop and consult on a new UK climate change programme.

Action has already been taken to reduce the UK's emissions of greenhouse gases. For example, the Government have introduced their integrated transport policy; we have increased the fuel duty escalator to an average of 6 per cent. above inflation per year; the European car industry has negotiated a voluntary agreement to reduce emissions of CO_2 from new cars by an average of 25 per cent.; Lord Marshall has reported on the scope for using economic instruments to improve business's use of energy; we have launched a review of what would be necessary and practicable to deliver 10 per cent. of electricity demand from renewable sources by 2010; and we have increased resources for energy efficiency.

Rolling Stock Companies (Safety Compliance)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 1 December 1998, Official Report, column 115, concerning rolling stock companies, what responsibility the ROSCOs have to comply with the requirements of the Health and Safety Executive. [63413]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: Rolling Stock Companies (ROSCOs) have a responsibility to comply with the requirements relating to them under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 and its statutory provisions. The Health and Safety Executive monitors and enforces compliance with these requirements.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 1 December 1998, Official Report, column 115, concerning rolling stock companies, what responsibility the Franchising Director has to the franchisee if the HSE's requirements in respect of rolling stock change during the life of a franchise. [63412]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: Under the terms of the Franchise Agreement there are arrangements in place for the Franchising Director to meet up to 95 per cent. of the costs falling on a train operating company for modification to rolling stock which is required to be made under any applicable law, any Government authority or any directives from Railtrack relating to safety. These directives could relate to Acts of Parliament and/or directives originating from Railway Group Standards. Railway Group Standards are rules, regulations, instructions and procedures which are produced as mandatory operational and engineering standards and all relate to safety aspects of the operation of railways and are set and enforced by Railtrack.

New Housing Development

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to issue guidance on a sequential approach to selecting locations for new housing development and sites. [64151]

Mr. Caborn: Guidance on the approach to the selection of locations and sites for housing will be included in the draft new planning policy guidance note on housing (PPG3) which will be issued early next year.

A14

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what change in traffic levels on the A14 in Cambridgeshire is predicted as a result of the opening of the A1(M) south of Peterborough. [63534]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The upgrading of the A1 to motorway status between Alconbury and Peterborough is not expected to result in any increase in traffic levels over and above that due to general growth in traffic on the A14.

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to include Irish as a category in his Department's ethnic monitoring of staff recruitment. [63870]

Mr. Meale: The over-riding principle of Civil Service recruitment procedures is that they should be fair, and selection should be on merit at each stage. Monitoring in this area is based on ethnic origin rather than nationality. The categories monitored by my Department are based on those used in the 1991 census, which did not include an Irish category. The categories will be reviewed in the light of any suggested changes for the 2001 Population Census.

Road Traffic Targets

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the representations he has received which opposed the setting of specific targets to reduce road traffic volumes. [63384]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department does not maintain a detailed central record of the views expressed on particular issues in all written and oral representations made to the Secretary of State. A comprehensive answer to the hon. Member's question could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

We have, however, extracted the following information on opposition to national road traffic reduction targets from our database of the responses to the Government's August 1997 consultation on developing an integrated transport policy. (A summary report on those responses was published in July 1998). Five respondents indicated that they did not support national road traffic reduction targets. Of these, one was a member of the public and the remaining four were:

Ford Motor Company Ltd.

The Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders Ltd.

Environmental Transport Association

Civil Engineering Contractors Association.

Copies of all the written responses, except those where confidentiality was requested, are available for inspection by arrangement at the Department's library at Ashdown House, 123 Victoria Street, London SW1E 6RB.

Aircraft Emissions

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the Government's target for percentage reduction in emissions from aircraft; and what proportion of the Government's planned 20 per cent. reduction in carbon emissions this constitutes. [63641]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government are currently consulting on options to reduce their emissions of greenhouse gases and meet their climate change targets. Our consultation paper looks at a wide range of options. It does not propose targets for particular sectors. Our aim is to develop a balanced climate change programme where all sectors play a part.

Only the emissions from domestic flights, beginning and ending within the UK, are included in our national inventory. These account for around 11 per cent. of total emissions from UK originating air traffic. The UK is working within the International Civil Aviation Organisation, which was given the responsibility under the Kyoto Protocol, on ways of reducing emissions from international aviation.

Railway Stations

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he will take to ensure that improvements carried out to stations on behalf of, and at the expense of, train operating companies are not subject to excessive charges by Railtrack. [63631]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Rail Regulator is responsible for setting the access charges which meet Railtrack's costs of maintaining and repairing station infrastructure. The Regulator is presently reviewing all Railtrack's access charges and is required to publish his final conclusions by July 2000. In addition, the Regulator's approval is required for any changes to station access charges which Railtrack may agree with a train operator as a result of investment in station improvements. On 5 December, the Regulator issued guidelines to the industry designed to ensure that any such changes to meet Railtrack's additional costs from enhancing station facilities are justified and calculated in a fair, consistent and transparent manner.

Aviation Fuel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what (a) discussions and (b) studies his Department is supporting in respect of the taxation of aviation fuel; and if he will make a statement. [63642]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The UK supported the Community Resolution of 9 June 1997 which asked the European Commission to study the environmental and economic effects in Europe of a tax on aviation fuel. The study report is expected early next year.

The International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO) agreed a work programme for its Committee on Aviation Environmental Protection in October this year. This includes the need to identify and evaluate the role which a range of market based options, including fuel taxes, might play in reducing aviation emissions. My Department will continue to play a leading role in this work programme which must be completed before the next ICAO Assembly in 2001.

British Rail

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 7 December 1998, Official Report, column 36, what the reasons were for the size of the increase in the external finance requirement for the British Railways Board between 1996–97 and 1997–98. [63905]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The increase in the British Railways Board's external finance requirement between 1996–97 and 1997–98 reflects the combined effects of large changes in the Board's finances. In particular, as a result of privatisation, the Board's turnover fell from £3,397 million in 1996–97 including grants of £1,507 million, to just £231 million in 1997–98 including grants of £51 million.

A26 and A27

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce safety improvements to (a) the A26 Beddingham-Newhaven and (b) the A27 Lewes-Polegate. [63558]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Highways Agency has introduced a number of safety improvements on the A26 between Beddingham and Newhaven and the A27 between Lewes and Polegate respectively and has plans to introduce more. These are:

(a) A26 Beddingham to Newhaven

South Downs Way Crossing—a study is underway with a view to providing a signal controlled pedestrian/cycle/equestrian crossing.

Beddingham Warning Sign—'Queues Likely' sign is about to be erected to the south of Beddingham roundabout.

Itford Farm Layby—study is in progress with a view to providing a layby in the vicinity of the South Downs Way.

Resurfacing—the skidding resistance of most of the carriageway from north of the Beddingham landfill sites to the Tarring Neville junction is programmed to increased early in the new year.

(b) A27 Lewes to Polegate

Lewes—Polegate—a study of the double white lining system has currently been completed and improvements are due to be implemented shortly.

Willington Cross Road—a scheme to provide a right turn facility is being prepared and subject to land acquisition, is expected to be implemented in the next financial year. If SUSTRANS opts for National Cycle Route at this point on the trunk road the scheme will include a light controlled 'Toucan' pedestrian crossing.

Aberdale Road, Polegate, Cycle Crossing—a SUSTRANS sponsored National Cycle Route Crossing of the trunk Road involving the provision of a light-controlled 'Toucan' pedestrian crossing is programmed in the current financial year.

Southerham to Ranscombe Lane Cycle Route—a scheme is in preparation and is expected to be implemented during the next financial year.

Beddingham Footways—a study is in hand to establish the provision of footways between laybys on either side of the railway level crossing and crossings telephones.

A22 Junction (South)—consideration is being given to upgrading the traffic signals at this busy junction and to linking them with the A22 Wannock Road signals.

Firle Cycle Track—a study is underway with a view to providing a cycle track between the Glynde junction and Middle farm, programmed for this financial year.

Southerham Roundabout—a study is in hand to provide dedicated lanes at this very busy junction.

Sameston—a lower speed limit is planned for early in the new year and crash protection for 'Corner Cottage' is currently being designed.

Rail Safety

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of (a) staffing reductions and (b) dividend payments by Railtrack on the performance of its rail safety responsibilities. [63645]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Under the Railways (Safety Case) Regulations 1994, reductions in staffing levels would require amendment to a Railway Safety Case where this might affect safety. The Health and Safety Executive's (HSE's) Railway Inspectorate monitors compliance with the Regulations and will take whatever action it considers appropriate to ensure safety is not compromised.

Dividend payments are a commercial matter for Railtrack's Board of Directors.

Members Car Parking Charges

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his plans for introducing car parking charges for hon. Members within the parliamentary estate; and what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the financial incentives of the scheme. [63632]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Greater London Authority Bill will enable London's elected Mayor to levy a charge on non-residential workplace parking. Alternatively the London Borough of Westminster will be able to introduce a levy within its boundary, subject to the agreement of the Mayor. The Bill provides that, if any scheme is brought forward in the Westminster area, it will be able to apply to the parliamentary estate. The charge would be payable by the Corporate Officer of the House. Whether or not to pass the charge on to individual Members would be for the House itself to determine.

Railways (Carnet Tickets)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy in respect of the issuing of carnet tickets by train operating companies. [63644]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government's White Paper on the Future of Transport (Cm 3950) made it clear that we consider that carnets are a desirable alternative to season tickets. They would be a particular benefit to part-time workers as well as occasional travellers and we wish to encourage all rail (and indeed other transport) operators to offer them as part of their ticketing range. The current arrangements for fares are a consequence of legally binding franchise agreements inherited from the previous Government. When opportunities arise for negotiating franchises, the structure and marketing of fares is one of the areas in which the new Strategic Rail Authority will look for improvements.

Local Transport Plans

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on his proposals with regard to local transport plans. [63555]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government's proposals for local transport plans were announced in the White Paper on the future of transport "A New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone". We have received numerous representations following the White Paper, many of which have included consideration of local transport plans. These helped inform our draft guidance for local authorities on local transport plans, which was published for consultation on 12 November. The consultation period ends on 8 January 1999.

Local Agenda 21

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from local authorities on the Local Agenda 21 environmental strategies. [63554]

Mr. Meale: We receive representations on a range of matters relating to sustainable development, including from local authorities on Local Agenda 21 strategies.

Pesticides

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will make it his policy to exclude pesticides used in horticulture from the proposed environmental tax on pesticides; and if he will make a statement; [64031]

(2) what estimates he has made of the price elasticity of demand for different types of pesticides during his consideration of the proposed environmental tax on pesticides; and if he will make a statement. [64032]

Mr. Meale: The Government have not made a proposal for a pesticide tax. However, my Department has commissioned extensive research into the scope for a pesticide tax or charge, including sectoral usage, consideration of price elasticities of demand for different pesticides, and the impact on users, manufacturers and suppliers. The Government will take this work fully into account in reaching a decision on whether to introduce such an instrument.

Scotland Act 1998 (Schedules)

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the offices or agencies under his control which will be subject to L.2 of Head L in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998; how many people are currently employed in these offices; and what equal opportunities practices are adopted in these offices. [63806]

Mr. Meale: I will write to the hon. Member with this information, and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Northern Line

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what extra funds his Department has given to London Underground since August 1998 for the provision of the new trains on the Northern Line. [64112]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department does not provide funds specifically for the new Northern Line trains. However, when making decisions on the overall level of funding for London Transport, the Government take into account the payments which London Transport are required to pay to PFI contractors. This includes the deal with ALSTOM for the new Northern Line trains.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list (a) the number of train cancellations and (b) the punctuality performance on Northern Line services for each day since 1 November. [64105]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This information is not available in the form requested. London Underground measure their performance against a series of Key Performance Indicators and data on performance are collected for weekdays only and presented for each 4-week period.

In the period from 9 November to 4 December, a total of 406 trains were cancelled at weekday morning and evening peak times out of a total number of 3,360 scheduled trains. This means that 87.9 per cent. of scheduled trains were in service during the period compared with the target of 98.3 per cent.

London Underground base their punctuality measure on whether the scheduled time interval between trains—the 'headway'—was achieved. This is expressed as a percentage of the total number of headways during weekdays. The following table sets out the latest data available from London Underground and covers the period from 2 November to Friday 4 December (inclusive).

Date	Percentage of headways achieved
2 November	89.3
3 November	91.2
4 November	90.5
5 November	85.1
6 November	88.4
9 November	85.0
10 November	85.4
11 November	88.5
12 November	89.3
13 November	92.4
16 November	91.7
17 November	88.4
18 November	88.2
19 November	88.6
20 November	88.8
23 November	90.2
24 November	92.5
25 November	91.9
26 November	89.3
27 November	91.0
30 November	83.7
1 December	86.5
2 December	79.5
3 December	89.6
4 December	84.9
Target	94.4

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many complaints his Department has received concerning the service on the Northern Line since 1 September. [64106]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Since 1 September the Department has received 26 letters relating wholly or mainly to the poor service on the Northern Line. Establishing the total number of letters which refer to poor performance on the Northern Line could be done only at disproportionate cost, because letters are often wide-ranging and only the main issue raised is logged.

Building Regulations (Control Charges)

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made on devolving the setting of Building Regulations control charges to individual local authorities in England and Wales. [64386]

Mr. Raynsford: A consultation paper on draft regulations to devolve the setting of Building Regulations control charges to individual local authorities in England and Wales with building control functions, was published in June this year. Having considered the responses I announced my decision on 31 July to proceed to lay regulations with a coming into force date of 1 April next year. I have today laid those regulations before Parliament. They are entitled "The Building (Local Authority Charges) Regulations 1998".

An essential part of operating this new system of charging will be the making of a Scheme by each local authority responsible for building control in order to fix those charges and administer the charging process. The Department is therefore publishing a Circular whose primary purpose is to give guidance to local authorities on how to produce a Scheme. This will be available shortly.

Somerset Levels (Water Management)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what advice he has given to the Environment Agency concerning the implications for the management of water levels on the Somerset Levels of (a) the EU Birds Directive, (b) the EU Habitats Directive, (c) the Water Resources Act 1991 and (d) the Land Drainage Acts. [63394]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

The Environment Agency is the principal flood defence operating authority and, in exercising those functions, is subject to the conservation duties placed on it by sections 7 and 8 of the Environment Act 1995. The Agency is required to have regard to the Habitats and Birds Directives in exercising its functions, as it is a "competent authority" under the terms of the Habitats Directive. It is also required to make an appropriate assessment of the impact before approving any plans or projects which, on their own or in combination with other plans or projects, may affect a European site. The Ministry and Welsh Office have issued a Code of Practice on Environmental Procedures for Flood Defence Operating Authorities which includes specific guidance on the responsibilities of the Agency and the other operating authorities under the Habitats and Birds Directives.

The Ministry and Welsh Office have also issued guidance to the Environment Agency and other flood defence operating authorities on the production of Water Level Management Plans. The plans provide a means by which the range of activities in a particular area, including agriculture, flood defence and conservation can be balanced and integrated. We have encouraged preparation of such plans with highest priority being given to internationally important sites, including those designated under the EU Habitats and Birds Directives. Water Level Management Plans are in preparation on the Somerset Levels, with the majority being produced by internal drainage boards, as the relevant operating authority.

TREASURY

Road and Parking Charges

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the money raised through (a) road pricing and (b) workplace charging will be hypothecated for public transport improvements. [63639]

Ms Hewitt: The Government propose (as laid out in the recently published consultation document—"Breaking the Logjam") that local authorities which bring forward pilot road user charging or workplace parking charge schemes should be able to retain 100 per cent. of the net revenue generated for at least 10 years from the implementation of a scheme—provided that there are worthwhile transport-related projects to be funded.

The Government will make an announcement about the retention of proceeds from schemes brought forward after the pilot phase in due course.

Tax Credits (Abolition)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Minister is currently responsible for reviewing the policy of abolishing tax credits for non-taxpayers; and if he will make a statement. [64197]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 14 December 1998, Official Report, column 346.

Single Currency

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will publish the changeover plans regarding preparations for British entry into the single currency. [63865]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The outline changeover plan should be published early in 1999.

VAT (Golf Clubs)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to harmonise the VAT exemption for proprietary and private golf clubs. [62605]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government understand the problems of both types of golf club and have arranged for HM Customs and Excise to discuss these with the European Commission, in the light of the recent European Court of Justice ruling in Commission of the European Communities vs. the Kingdom of Spain (Case C-124/96, Judgment of the Court, Sixth Chamber, of 7 May 1998).

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the inclusion of the Irish as an ethnic category in the next census. [63868]

Ms Hewitt: The Government's proposals for the 2001 Census, including the topics to be covered and details of the ethnic question, will be published in a White Paper early next year.

DEFENCE

Challenger 2 Tanks

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the new transporters for Challenger 2 tanks. [64276]

Mr. Spellar: The MOD will shortly issue an invitation to four consortia to negotiate for a private-sector financed solution to the Army's heavy equipment transporter requirement, with the aim that the service is provide from 2002. This is the first programme to invite solutions to invite solutions for an operational combat support vehicle through the Private Finance Initiative. The consortia are also being invited to explore options for the employment of Sponsored Reserves to deliver the service. A decision on the way forward is expected in early 2000, with a contract let later that year following final negotiations with the preferred bidder.

Queen Victoria School

Miss Begg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the key targets are for 1998–99 for the Chief Executive of Queen Victoria School. [64271]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Chief Executive of Queen Victoria School has been set the following Key Targets for 1998–1999.

1. Achieve a staying on rate at School for S4 to S5 of at least 68 per cent. based on a 3 year trend.
2. Exceed by 2 per cent. the average percentage pass rate for all Scottish presentations obtaining 5 or more Credit awards at Standard Grade based on a 3 year trend.
3. Achieve a percentage of the presentations at Higher Grade achieving A to C grade greater than or equal to the Scottish averaged based on a 3 year trend.
4. To achieve a pupil per capital cost of no more than £17,246 (at 1997–98 prices) by March 1999. 1997–98 target was £17,420.
5. To generate commercial income to the School of at least £20,000.

Duke of York's Royal Military School

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the key targets for 1998–99 for the Chief Executive of the Duke of York's Royal Military School. [64273]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Chief Executive of The Duke of York's Royal Military School has been set the following Key Targets for 1998–99.

1. To achieve 100 per cent. of GCSE passes at grades A* to G.
2. To achieve 5 or more GCSE passes at grades A* to C; 1998–99 target is 78 per cent.
3. To achieve 88 per cent. of A level passes at grades A to E.
4. To achieve 3 or more A level passes at grades A to E; 1998–99 target is 80 per cent.
5. To achieve 34 per cent. of A level passes at Grades A and B.
6. To achieve 100 per cent. award rate for GNVQ Advanced and BTEC National Diploma courses.
7. To achieve places in higher education for at least 70 per cent. of sixth form leavers.
8. To achieve a pupil per capita cost of no more than £13,151.
9. To generate income of at least £452,000.
10. To achieve at least 260 applications for September 99 intake.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in the Official Report the text of the letter dated 30 November from the Minister of State for the Armed Forces to his hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Simpson) concerning nuclear, chemical and biological weapons in the former Soviet Union. [63900]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Following is the text of the letter to which I understand my hon. Friend refers.

Letter from the Secretary of State for Defence to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 30 November 1998:

In my answer to your Parliamentary Questions on 19 November, (Official Report, cols 712–713). I undertook to write to you about certain aspects of Trident computer systems.

You asked first about the percentage of computer chips purchased "off the shelf" from suppliers. The Trident Strategic Weapon System was procured "off the shelf" from the US Government under the provisions of the Polaris Sales Agreement as amended for Trident. It is not, therefore, possible to provide the level of detail called for in the question. However the US has a programme of work to provide certification of Year 2000 compliance for all items associated with the system procured by the UK.

As far as your question about audits and action plans on millennium compliance is concerned, I can tell you that a comprehensive audit of the deterrent is being conducted by a dedicated Deterrent Millennium Task Group. At the top level this includes areas such as the missile and warhead, fire control, navigation, targeting, firing chain, reactor and propulsion control, sonar, command and control and all associated shore based facilities. Each of these areas is further sub-divided into many hundreds of smaller sub-systems, each of which is being investigated. Extensive tests are being conducted on all equipment associated with the Trident Weapon System and its supporting infrastructure to confirm that it will not be affected by any key dates before, during and after the turn of the century. A programme of trials is in place to provide further verification. I trust this also addresses your question about systems identified as being critical to the safe and continuous operation of the Trident system. It would not be in the national interest to disclose the details of our audits and investigations as this would reveal information which could compromise the effectiveness of the UK's strategic deterrent. I am therefore withholding this information under exemption 1, Defence, security and International relations, of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

As far as our discussions with the US are concerned, we are working extremely closely to ensure that common equipment critical to each nation's defence capability, including Trident, are millennium compliant. In addition to the regular, frequent meetings on the wider Year 2000 problem, regular meetings are held with the US under the provisions of the Polaris Sales Agreement with Year 2000 compliance one of the items on the agenda: The most recent such meeting was on 10 November. The US programme I have already mentioned has a forecast date for completion of 31 December this year.

You also asked about planned expenditure to ensure millennium compliance of the Trident systems. There is no separately identified central record of planned millennium compliance expenditure specifically related to the Trident system. I would, however, refer you to the answer given by Margaret Beckett to Maria Eagle on 21 October in which she announced the results of the latest quarterly review of Government departments and agencies progress in tackling the bug. The results of the next quarterly review will be announced shortly to the House and the updates to quarterly plans will be placed in the Library of the House and on the internet.

Finally, there is no central record of the number of staff dedicated to ensuring the Trident systems's millennium compliance which you also requested. However, staff in relevant appointments are working to ensure the status of all systems is identified and that action plans are in place where required.

I am copying this letter to Llew Smith to whom I also undertook to write in respect of his question on the issue of millennium compliance of nuclear systems.

I hope this is helpful.

I am placing a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Surveillance Towers (Northern Ireland)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total annual cost of staffing and maintaining surveillance towers (a) at the hilltop sites in the South Armagh area, (b) the two towers in Derry and (c) the three posts mounted on blocks of flats in Belfast. [64204]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer given by my right hon. Friend the then Minister for the Armed Forces on 6 November 1997, Official Report, column 320.

Scotland Act 1998 (Schedule 5)

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the offices or agencies under his control which will be subject to L.2 of Head L in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998; how many people are currently employed in these offices; and what equal opportunities practices are adopted in these offices. [63804]

Mr. Doug Henderson: There were some 23,200 Service and civilian personnel based at 116 locations in Scotland, as at 1 April 1998 (the most recent date for which figures are available). All of these personnel will continue to be subject to the appropriate UK legislation. For the 10,000 civilian personnel this involves compliance with the Equal Pay Act 1970, the Sex Discrimination Act 1975, the Race Relations Act 1976, and the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, listed in Head L2 of Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act, as well as Departmental policies against unfair discrimination on grounds of sexual orientation, age and religious belief. In order for the Armed Forces to maintain combat effectiveness they are granted an exemption from the Sex Discrimination Act 1975, in Section 85(4) of the Act, and from the employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. Current policy is also that homosexuals are not allowed to serve in the Armed Forces; this issue will be reviewed in the lifetime of this Parliament. Aside from these specific exceptions the Armed Forces are committed to equality of opportunity irrespective of gender, religion, ethnic or social background and vigorous policies are in place to ensure that this is achieved.

Service Women (Pregnancy)

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what total expenditure his Department has incurred to date in the payment of claims for compensation by service women required to leave the armed forces on grounds of pregnancy. [64010]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 10 December 1998, Official Report, column 257 to the hon. Member for New Forest, West (Mr. Swayne).

Louise Jensen

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost to his Department of the defence of the British soldiers convicted of causing the death of a Danish tour guide in Cyprus. [63343]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The costs of the defence and subsequent appeal of the soldiers convicted of causing the death of the Danish tour guide were met by the Army Legal Aid scheme, and have been £260K to date. This figure does not include the cost of the appeals process which has only recently concluded.

The Army Legal Aid scheme provides legal assistance to Army personnel similar to that available in this country to ensure that they are not placed at a disadvantage when tried overseas in a civil criminal court; the scheme is funded by my Department.

Polo Ponies

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many polo ponies the British Army owns; and in which countries they are based. [63990]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The British Army does not own polo ponies. All military horses maintained by the Army fulfil either ceremonial duties or work in the Army School of Equitation.

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to include Irish as a category in his Department's ethnic monitoring of staff recruitment. [63878]

Mr. Spellar: My Department's ethnic monitoring of Service and civilian recruitment is based solely on an applicant's ethnicity. The nine ethnic origin categories monitored by my Department are those used in the 1991 census which did not include an Irish category. They will be reviewed in the light of any suggested changes for the 2001 Population Census.

Hunting

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost since 1 May 1997 of supplying military police to protect huntsmen on MOD land from potential activity by anti-hunt protesters. [63638]

Mr. Spellar: Military Police are not involved with hunts, so no costs have been incurred from protecting huntsmen.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 when authorisation has been given for MOD land to be used for hunting; and if he will indicate those occasions when hunting occurred on land designated as a site of special scientific interest, giving for each occasion the location of the SSSI. [63637]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what charges have been made and to which hunts for the use of MOD land since 1 May 1997. [63634]

Mr. Spellar: The table shows charges which have been paid since 1 May 1997 allowing hunting with hounds to take place over the Defence Estate.

The following charges have been paid since 1 May 1997 allowing hunting with hounds to take place over the Defence estate:

Hunt	Charges since 1 May 1997 (£)	Comments
Tanatside Hunt	158.75
North Shropshire Hunt	179.37

Royal Artillery Hunt	225.00
South and West Wiltshire Hunt	225.00
Bewcastle Hunt	177.22	Licence to pass over MOD land only
Tynedale Hunt	233.62	Licence to pass over MOD land only

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 when his Departments' buildings have been used for purposes connected with hunting. [63633]

Mr. Spellar: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the MOD units which have hunt kennels on their land, indicating in each case the rent charged for the use of these kennels. [63635]

Mr. Spellar: The MOD units which have hunt kennels on their land are as follows:

Britannia Royal Naval College—Kennels for beagles. Charges made for utilities only and for this Financial Year this stands at £55.

Catterick Garrison—Kennels for Catterick Garrison Beagles—£1,698 per annum.

Larkhill Garrison—Royal Artillery Hunt—Encroachment. (No charge)

RMA Sandhurst—Beagle kennels—Encroachment. (No charge)

RMCS Shrivenham—Beagle kennels—Encroachment. (No charge).

An encroachment is granted for authorised sporting, recreational and welfare activities in accordance with guidelines in the Joint Services Publication 362 Defence Lands Handbook, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which MOD units permit their personnel to hunt during normal working hours, with particular reference to the Wednesday afternoon sports period. [63636]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Scotland Act 1998 (Schedule 5)

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) total expenditure and (b) expenditure by programme by his Department in Scotland on areas covered by the exception under E.3 of Head E in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998. [63803]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This information is not held and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. I thus regret I am unable to answer under Exemption 9 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Chile

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of his Department's Defence Sales Organisation visited Chile in each year since 1990. [64022]

Mr. George Robertson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many officers of the British armed forces of one star status or above visited Chile in each year since 1990. [64013]

Mr. George Robertson: The information requested is not held centrally and complete records are not available.

The information that we have, however, shows the following visits by officers of One Star status or above to Chile:

Year	Number of visits
1990	1
1991	1
1992	5
1993	4
1994	3
1995	6
1996	2
1997	3
1998	4

In addition we are aware that students of the Royal College of Defence Studies, which is attended by some officers of one star status and above, visited Chile in 1990, 1992, 1994, 1995, 1996 and in 1998. We do not, however, have details of the number of officers concerned.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which chiefs of staff of the British armed forces visited Chile from 1990 to date indicating the dates of the visit in each case. [64014]

Mr. George Robertson: The information requested is not held centrally and complete records are not available. The information that we hold, however, shows the following visits to Chile:

Date	Visit
1990	Chief of the Naval Staff
March 1994	Chief of the Air Staff
March 1995	Chief of the Naval Staff
March 1996	Vice Chief of the Defence Staff
June 1998	Chief of the Naval Staff
October 1998	Chief of the Air Staff

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many vessels of the Royal Navy, including ships of the Royal Fleet Auxiliary, visited Chilean ports and naval bases during each calendar year since 1990. [64015]

Mr. George Robertson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 14 December 1998, Official Report, column 331, to the hon. Member for Worthing, East and Shoreham (Mr. Loughton). The following visits were also made by the Royal Navy from 1990 to 1993:

Royal Navy vessels	Dates
1990
HMS Otter	9 June-14 June
1991
HMS Alacrity	29 August-2 September
HMS Endurance (Old)	11 April-16 April
HMS Cumberland	25 February-4 March
1992
HMS Ambuscade	9 October-12 October
HMS Campbeltown	29 July-3 August
HMS Endurance	1 April-6 April
1993
HMS Newcastle	18 November-22 November
HMS Endurance	8 April-13 April
HMS Endurance	18 February-22 February

Note:
Records of RFA deployments for the period prior to December 1993 are not sufficiently detailed to show individual visits

Territorial Army

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimates he has made of (a) the total cost of transfer of equipment and (b) the cost of transferring IT equipment, in the move of 101 Battalion REME from Chorley Barracks to Queensferry. [63652]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 7 December 1998, Official Report, column 54.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria he used to select Chorley TA for closure in the review of the Territorial Army. [63617]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The planning assumptions underlying the restructuring of the Territorial Army were well publicised during the consultative process. A copy of the assumptions has been placed in the Library of the House. The particular factors bearing on the decision to close Chorley TA Centre were explained by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary to the hon. Members in the House on 2 December 1998, Official Report, columns 859–64.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect on travelling costs of the transfer of 101 Battalion REME from Chorley Barracks to Queensferry. [63623]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The effect on travelling costs will depend on whether individuals are transferred from the headquarters at Chorley to that at Queensferry, when the Battalion transfers, which has yet to be determined.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many TA centres will remain open (a) in South Lancashire and (b) in the parliamentary constituencies of (i) Chorley, (ii) South Ribble, (iii) West Lancashire, (iv) Rossendale and Darwen and (v) Ribble Valley. [63618]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: There are two TA centres in South Lancashire; both are located in Blackburn and will remain open.

Chorley is the only constituency among those listed which has a TA centre; this is scheduled for closure.

Ammunition

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the Army's requirement for ammunition. [64277]

Mr. Spellar: I am pleased to announce the outcome of two recent ammunition competitions. First, we intend to contract with Royal Ordnance to meet most of the British Army's requirement for large calibre ammunition for the next five years. The contract will cover ammunition for use with the AS90 155mm self-propelled gun, Challenger 2 tank, and a range of reconnaissance and infantry fighting vehicles.

Secondly, we intend to contract with Marconi Marine Land and Naval Systems, formerly Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering Ltd., to develop and produce enhancements to extend the range and increase the effectiveness of the AS90 self-propelled gun. Within this contract, Royal Ordnance will be sub-contracted to manufacture new barrels, and a South African company, Somchem, will manufacture a new Modular Charge System.

These contracts, which are subject to the completion of final negotiations, are together worth around £200 million and will bring valuable work to both Marconi and Royal Ordnance, securing over 500 jobs for British industry.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Recycled Paper

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what steps have been taken to recycle paper from hon. Members' offices. [63996]

Mrs. Roe: All waste paper from honourable Members' offices is sorted and recycled by an approved contractor.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Millennium Experience

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what discussions he has had with (a) the New Millennium Experience Company, (b) London Underground and (c) the Department for Culture, Media and Sport about travel and entry ticket packages for visitors to the Dome; [62775]

(2) what representations he has received from the tourist industry about the timing of the announcement of travel and entry ticket packages for visitors to the Dome. [62776]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 7 December 1998]: Responsibility for negotiating travel and ticket arrangements with transport providers and tour operators rests with the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC). I have had no discussions with representatives from individual transport providers or the tourist industry. The NMEC are in discussion with both about combined travel and Millennium Experience entry packages. The aim is to ensure that attractive and competitive packages are available within the United Kingdom and abroad. Announcements about these packages will be made at the appropriate time. Officials from the Department for Culture, Media and Sport provide me with advice in my capacity as shareholder of the NMEC and they keep me advised of NMEC's progress in these matters.

Management Practices

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the Institute of Personnel Development: Study No. 22, Impact of People Management Practices on Business Performance; and if he will make a statement. [64107]

Mr. Mandelson: The need to improve the skills of the British work force is well-recognised and this forms a key theme of the Competitiveness White Paper which I am to publish shortly. This report is the first substantive piece of British research on how people management practices impact upon business performance in manufacturing industries. I welcome the report's findings that recent business performance was better where firms encouraged acquisition and development of employee skills, and where workers had more job autonomy—either individually or in teams.

My Department has jointly funded the 1998 Workplace Employee Relations Survey (WERS). Data from this will be used to do a similar type of analysis but it will be for a nationally representative set of British workplaces with 10 or more employees.

Foresight Programme

Mrs. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has for the development of the Government's Foresight Programme. [64270]

Mr. Battle: I am delighted to publish today the blueprint for the next round of Foresight which will start in April 1999. Copies have been filed in the Library of the House.

The next round of Foresight will have a broader focus than before. The work will be taken forward through ten sectoral panels and three thematic panels looking at the aging population, crime prevention and the future of manufacturing. Associate Programmes will be run by professional institutions and other organisations, working closely with the Office of Science and Technology.

There will be many avenues for participation, with a particular emphasis on involving young people. An Internet-based Knowledge Pool will provide a unique resource to support Foresight participants and promote widespread debate on emerging results and conclusions.

The Government's vision is to put the future on Britain's side. We have the talent to exploit the opportunities of the future. The forthcoming Competitiveness White Paper will set out a framework for the Government's role in helping British business to achieve this. Foresight is a central part of that framework.

GEC

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the total value of grants paid by his Department to GEC since 1 May 1997. [61988]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 1 December 1998]: Between 1 May 1997 and 30 November 1998 my Department paid a total of some £1.8 million in grants to GEC companies. This includes grants paid under the Civil Aircraft Research and Technology Demonstration Programme (CARAD).

British Aerospace

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the total value of grant paid by his Department to British Aerospace since 1 May 1997. [61990]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 1 December 1998]: My Department has paid a total of around £4.5 million in grant on various schemes to British Aerospace since 1 May 1997. This was mainly under the Civil Aircraft Research and Technology Demonstration Programme (CARAD).

In addition, the Government agreed on 2 February 1998 to invest up to £123 million in a public-private partnership with British Aerospace on the development of the Airbus A340–500/600.

Sellafield

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many shipments of mixed oxide fuel were made between 1 January and 30 November from Sellafield (a) by air and (b) by sea. [63438]

Mr. Battle: I understand that there was one shipment of Mixed Oxide fuel by air and one by sea from Sellafield between 1 January and 30 November.

Millennium Coin

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to issue to each school child in the United Kingdom a commemorative coin to mark the millennium. [62968]

Mr. Mandelson: The Royal Mint is planning to issue a commemorative coin to mark the millennium, which will be widely available.

Microchips (Radiation)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what evaluation his Department is carrying out into the potential damage to transistors in microchips from background alpha and neutron radiation, following the recent report to the International Test Conference in Washington; and if he will make a statement. [62967]

Mr. Battle: The issue of potential damage to transistors from background radiation is primarily a matter for those companies and organisations that design and manufacture microchips. My Department continues to monitor developments.

Academy of Invention

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he has evaluated for setting up an Academy of Invention; and if he will make a statement. [63850]

Mr. Battle: The Government fully recognise the need to harness better the depth of creativity which we have in the UK. Earlier this year the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, with the full support of my own Department, set up the National Endowment for Science, Technology and the Arts (NESTA), with an endowment of £200 million from the National Lottery, to support talented individuals. NESTA's trustees will soon be consulting on their policies and programmes, which should start next year.

I have had useful discussion with proponents of an Academy of Invention, and other organisations which support invention. They are fully aware that any further public support for inventors must be consistent with and add value to NESTA's operation.

Minimum Wage (Ministers of Religion)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if ministers of religion are persons qualifying for the national minimum wage. [63709]

Mr. Ian McCartney: As office holders ministers of religion will not be covered by the national minimum wage. However, those who do work under a worker's contract will be covered.

Internal Market Council

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the outcome of the Internal Market Council held in Brussels on 7 December 1998; and if he will make a statement. [63166]

Mr. Mandelson: My noble Friend the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe represented the UK at the Internal Market Council in Brussels on 7 December.

The Council discussed the draft directive on late payments, which would give companies across the EU a statutory right to interest on late payments, and a proposal for a multiannual programme to assist European tourism. The Presidency concluded that it had not been possible to reach political agreement on either proposal and that discussion would continue under the German Presidency.

The Presidency presented a report on taking forward the process of European economic reform agreed at the Cardiff Summit in June 1998. This will enable the Internal Market Council on 25 February to make a contribution to ECOFIN preparation of the Broad Economic Guidelines and help inform its own future single market work programme.

The Commission presented reports on the interim Single Market Scoreboard, which showed good progress in transposition of internal market directives, particularly in the UK, Luxembourg, Ireland and Spain; chemicals legislation; and a proposal for a directive to facilitate the development of an internal market in electronic commerce.

The Council reached unanimous political agreement on the extension of the 1985 Product Liability Directive to primary agricultural products and game; and on the Fourth Motor Insurance Directive, which will make it easier for victims of road accidents that take place in another member state to make an insurance claim. The Free Movement of Goods Regulation and Resolution were adopted, with the UK Presidency mentioned as the driving force behind the agreement.

Domestic Metering

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will make a statement on (a) the use of 2 in 1 metering by Swalec and Welsh Water and

(b) the Director General of Electricity Supply's view that Swalec should take all reasonable steps to discontinue use of these meters; [62272]

(2) how many homes in each United Kingdom region have 2 in 1 meters; and if he will make a statement. [62273]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 3 December 1998]: The 2 in 1 metering scheme is a trial one being run by the Hyder Group (Swalec and Welsh Water). I understand that it is currently confined to 3,000 customers who join the scheme on a voluntary basis. Swalec have issued proceedings seeking a judicial direction that their scheme is lawful, not contrary to the Electricity Act 1989 and that the Director General of Electricity Supply has no powers to issue enforcement proceedings under the Act. It would not be appropriate for me to comment further while this process is under way.

British Nuclear Fuels Limited

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to publish the KPMG report on BNFL. [63494]

Mr. Battle: The KPMG report has not yet been received. An announcement will be made once Ministers have considered the report.

Scotland Act 1998 (Schedule 5)

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the offices or agencies under his control which will be subject to L.2 of Head L in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998; how many people are currently employed in these offices; and what equal opportunities practices are adopted in these offices. [63797]

Mr. Mandelson: The Department has a total of 132 staff in the following offices in Scotland which will be subject to L.2 of Head L in Schedule 5 to the Scotland Act 1998:

Oil and Gas Directorate

Infrastructure and Energy Projects Directorate

Redundancy Payments Office.

Its Executive Agencies and ACAS have the following numbers of staff:

	Number
Companies House	43
Employment Tribunal Service	50
Insolvency Service	6
Radiocommunications Agency	12
ACAS	57

All staff in these offices are covered by the DTI Equal Opportunities Policy or the relevant equal opportunities for their Executive Agency or ACAS. The Order designating cross-border public authorities is still under discussion. Therefore, information on the authorities, and their employees, which will be affected by the Order cannot yet be provided.

Tobacco

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he proposes to take to further the adoption of global standards on tobacco marketing. [64125]

Ms Jowell: I have been asked to reply.

We will fully co-operate in the planning, scheduling and information-sharing that would accompany the development of an international framework convention for tobacco control, intended to facilitate and encourage member states to strengthen their own national tobacco control policies. We will liaise with relevant organisations in taking this forward. The White Paper 'Smoking Kills' signalled our willingness to co-operate and we hope it will provide a model in the development and operation of a framework convention.

PRIME MINISTER

Duty Free

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will estimate the numbers of duty free cigarettes per month brought into the United Kingdom by EU travellers in the past year. [64097]

The Prime Minister: HM Customs and Excise have no published estimate of the number of duty free cigarettes brought into the UK by EU travellers.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister (1) when he took the decision to support a continuation of EU duty free purchases of cigarettes for travellers; [64096]

(2) if he will make it his policy to oppose the continuation of duty free personal imports of cigarettes. [64101]

The Prime Minister: At the recent European Council meeting in Vienna a number of Member States, including the UK, asked the Commission and the Council of Finance Ministers (ECOFIN) to examine, by March 1999, the problems which could arise with regard to employment and to address, on the basis of proposals from the Commission, possible means of tackling these problems, including the possibility of a limited extension to duty free shopping. Any proposal to extend duty free shopping beyond 30 June 1999 would still be subject to unanimity in Council.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 9 December 1998, Official Report, column 219, what case for looking again at the 1991 decision to abolish duty-free sales within the European Union at the end of June 1999 is available now that was not available at the time of his written answer of 19 May 1998, Official Report, column 315, his oral answer of 20 May 1998, Official Report, column 952, his written answer of 3 June 1998, Official Report, column 215, or during the last United Kingdom Presidency of the European Union. [63948]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 14 December 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the oral reply I gave him in the House on 14 December 1998, Official Report, column 618.

South Africa

Mr. Evans: To ask the Prime Minister what arrangements he has made to visit South Africa in 1999; if he will list those who will accompany him and their travel arrangements; and what estimate he has made of the cost of the visit. [63678]

The Prime Minister: Details for my visit are still being finalised.

RAF Planes

Mr. Evans: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to use RAF planes between 17 December 1998 and 11 January 1999; and if he will list those who will accompany him and the estimated cost of the journeys. [63677]

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to use RAF planes between 17 December 1998 and 11 January 1999.

Pressure Groups

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Prime Minister if he will amend the Ministerial Code to provide guidance to Ministers on how to respond to questions about past affiliations to pressure groups. [64088]

The Prime Minister: No. The Ministerial Code already provides guidance on the handling of private interests, including membership and/or support to pressure groups. Guidance is also provided on the declaration of Ministers' private interests if these might conflict, or be thought to conflict, with their Ministerial duties.

Departmental Staff

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list, by Department, all special advisers, together with their salaries. [63912]

The Prime Minister: For details of the Special Advisers employed in my office I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Wantage (Mr. Jackson) on 8 December 1998, Official Report, column 143.

At 14 December, my Ministerial colleagues had appointed the following Special Advisers.

Appointing Minister	Name of appointee

In addition, the Minister for the Cabinet Office has appointed Mr. Keith Hellawell as the UK Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator and Mr. Michael Trace as his Deputy. Professor Michael Barber has been appointed as the Standards and Effectiveness Adviser to the Secretary of State for Education and Employment. The Chancellor of the Exchequer has appointed Mr. Chris Wales and Mr. Paul Gregg as members of the Council of Economic Advisers. All are employed on Special Adviser terms.

For information on the salaries of Special Advisers, I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bethnal Green and Bow (Ms King) on 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 354–55.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the official visits which he has made to Buckinghamshire since 2 May 1997. [64131]

The Prime Minister: I visited the Chilton Cheshire Home at Gerrards Cross on 30 October 1997. In addition, some of my official duties are carried out at Chequers.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the countries of Latin America visited by members of Her Majesty's Government since 2 May 1997, stating the name of each Minister, the purpose of each visit and the duration of each stay. [64020]

The Prime Minister: There have been 29 Ministerial visits to 12 different countries in Latin America since 2 May to strengthen bilateral relations, promote British interests and continue to play our leading role in international affairs. All visits have been made in accordance with the Ministerial Code.

Local Government Cabinet Sub-Committee

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Prime Minister if he has appointed Councillor Jeremy Beecham to the Cabinet Sub-Committee on Local Government. [64089]

The Prime Minister: No. However, my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office, who is Chairman of the Ministerial Group on Better Government, has invited Councillor Sir Jeremy Beecham to attend relevant meetings of the Group in order to bring a local government perspective to discussion of ways of improving service delivery in the public sector.

President of the Council

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Prime Minister what ministerial support is provided to the President of the Council. [64274]

The Prime Minister: Her Majesty, the Queen, has been pleased to approve that my hon. Friend the Member for Sherwood (Mr. Tipping) be appointed Parliamentary Secretary, Privy Council Office.

My hon. Friend will provide support to my right hon. Friend the President of the Council and Leader of the House of Commons, in a number of areas for which she is responsible. The President's responsibilities were set out in the answer given by my right hon. Friend to my hon. Friend the Member for Wimbledon (Mr. Casale) on 2 November 1998, Official Report, column 363.

My hon. Friend the Member for Sherwood will not draw a Ministerial salary.

Queen's Awards

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Prime Minister what plans there are to carry out a review of the Queen's Awards for Export, Technological and Environmental Achievement. [64275]

The Prime Minister: The Queen's Awards are made by Her Majesty The Queen on my recommendation. At Buckingham Palace's suggestion it has been agreed that now would be an appropriate time for a further review of the scheme, to ensure that it is up to date and provides the best possible incentive for British business. The Review Committee will be set up shortly. The Committee will consider all aspects of the Awards, including their scope and eligibility. The membership of the Review Committee will be made in time for any resulting changes to be implemented for the Awards in the year 2000.

Those wishing to express views on the operation of the Awards or to suggest changes are invited to submit their views to the Secretary, Queen's Awards Review, Room 188, 151 Buckingham Palace Road, London SW1W 9SS by no later than the end of January 1999. Views may also be submitted by e-mail to queens-awards-review@lond05.dti.gov.uk. or from the Secretary, Queen's Awards Review, telephone number 0171–215 3772.

MI5-MI6

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish the report by the National Audit Office into the construction of new headquarters for MI5 and MI6. [63853]

The Prime Minister: No. The reports on the purchase and fitting out of Vauxhall Cross and Thames House contain sensitive information. It is established practice under Section 1(a) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information not to disclose information where disclosure would harm national security or defence.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the contents of the National Audit Office report on the construction of the new MI6 building. [63854]

The Prime Minister: I am aware of the report which the Comptroller and Auditor General made to the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee in 1992 on the purchase of Vauxhall Cross. The report was dealt with in accordance with the agreed procedure set out in the House by the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee in 1987 on 27 January 1987, Official Report, columns 246–49.

European Union

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister further to his reply of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 371, if he will make a statement on what types of outside organisations Her Majesty's Government classes as relevant for inclusion in lists of recommended sources for further contact in official documents; and if he will consent to the listing of organisations opposed to closer European Union on Government-funded publications. [64109]

The Prime Minister: There are no set criteria concerning contact lists in UK Government publications about the European Union. The Government are keen to ensure that members of the public are given access to all relevant information. They do not list publications by political parties in source material, but would seek to include academic institutions. These may well have differing views on the development of the European Union.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Stone (Mr. Cash) of 2 December 1998, Official Report, column 874, on the constitutional position of the United Kingdom in relation to the EU, if he will list the essential interests to which he referred. [64017]

The Prime Minister: Our essential interests are to maintain and enhance the security and prosperity of the UK, and to improve the quality of life of its citizens. We seek to protect and promote these interests through membership of the European Union.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Grantham and Stamford (Mr. Davies) of 2 December 1998, Official Report, column 879, on age discrimination, what action the Government have taken to tackle age discrimination; and when he plans to introduce legislation on this matter. [64019]

The Prime Minister: The Government stand by their manifesto commitment that in work older people should not be discriminated against because of their age.

On 16 November, my right hon. Friend the Minister for Employment, Welfare to Work and Equal Opportunities launched a consultation on the draft Code of Practice for Age Diversity in Employment. A final version of the code will be published early next year.

The draft Code of Practice builds on the results of the year long consultation on age discrimination set out in the report 'Action on Age' published in August. This pointed to the immediate impact a Code of Practice would have in tackling unfair age discrimination in employment. Proposals for the Code were widely welcomed by employers and individuals alike.

Given this Government's busy legislative programme, the Code of Practice is an effective measure that will challenge employment practices that unfairly discriminate against employees on the grounds of age. The impact of the Code will be evaluated and this will inform future plans for legislation in this area.

The Code of Practice is one of many strands in the Government's approach to helping older people enjoy an active life, participating fully in work and more widely. On 23 November "Building a Better Britain for Older People" was published, setting out the Government's wide strategy for supporting older people.

Beef Export Ban

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Maidenhead (Mrs. May) of 2 December 1998, Official Report, column 880, on the ban on beef exports, when agreement was reached that the export ban be entirely lifted. [64018]

The Prime Minister: On 25 November the European Commission adopted a Commission Decision which permits the resumption of exports of deboned beef produced under the Date-Based Export Scheme.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer to the right hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) of 2 December 1998, Official Report, column 877, on waiting lists, what has been the rise in the number of general practitioner referrals over the last six months; and from what source these figures have been derived. [64011]

The Prime Minister: General practitioner referrals for an outpatient appointment rose by 31,000 in the first six months of 1998–99, compared to the first six months of 1997–98. Referrals from all sources (including general practitioners, accident and emergency departments, other consultants and other healthcare professionals) rose by 97,000 during the same period.

These figures are derived from the quarterly returns from National Health Service trusts.

Rover Group

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Northfield (Mr. Burden), of 2 December 1998, Official Report, column 874, on the Rover Group, if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to assist Rover. [64012]

The Prime Minister: The Government continue to be in close contact with Rover and BMW over future investment plans for Longbridge. The decision by Rover employees to implement the new working-time arrangements and the decision to make the new mini at Longbridge are very important milestones in helping to secure further investment for the plant.

We will maintain our close contact and support to both companies. However, the Government have not been asked for financial assistance. Should such an approach be received, it will be considered on its own merits and within the usual rules for providing financial assistance to companies.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police (Firearms)

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish statistics on the police use of firearms for the latest period for which such statistics are available. [62268]

Mr. Boateng: The statistics for April 1997 to March 1998 show that the number of police operations in which firearms were issued to officers was 11,842, a fall of over 4 per cent. on the previous year. The number of occasions on which firearms were discharged by police fell to just three, from five the previous year, resulting in two fatalities.

There was a decrease of 7 per cent. to 7,510 in the number of operations in which armed response vehicles were deployed. Firearms were carried in these vehicles, but were not necessarily issued to offers on each occasion.

Full details are set out in the tables.

Stephen Lawrence Inquiry

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive a copy of the Stephen Lawrence inquiry report. [64269]

Mr. Straw: I expect to receive the report of the Inquiry in late January or early February 1999.

Refugees and Asylum Seekers (Sussex)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will estimate the number of (a) refugees and (b) asylum seekers currently residing in the areas administered by (i) East Sussex County Council, (ii) Eastbourne Borough Council and (iii) Wealden District Council; [63231]

(2) how many asylum seekers or refugees are currently residing in council or housing association accommodation in Eastbourne Borough; [63232]

(3) how many asylum seekers or refugees are currently living in emergency accommodation within the Eastbourne Borough. [63234]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: This information is not available to the Home Office and the hon. Member should approach the local authority.

Asylum seekers and refugees who are able to support themselves are currently free to live within the United Kingdom in a place of their own choosing. Asylum seekers who register their application for asylum at their port of entry may be eligible for Income Support and Housing Benefit and can then find their own accommodation. Refugees may also qualify for such benefits and are in a similar position. Asylum seekers who do not qualify for benefits, but who may be supported under the terms of the National Assistance Act 1948, or the Children Act 1989 are supported by local authorities under the terms of that legislation. The Home Office currently has no role in providing support and is consequently not aware of the information sought. The Government plan a fundamental reform of the asylum and immigration laws to remove cash benefits and more strictly control where asylum seekers live.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people currently residing in Eastbourne have applied for asylum in the United Kingdom. [63233]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that reliable information on the number of people residing in Eastbourne who have applied for asylum in the United Kingdom could be obtained only by examination of individual case records and is, therefore, available only at disproportionate cost.

Charity Commissioners

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the Charity Commissioners, indicating the term of office of each; [63552]

(2) to whom the Charity Commissioners are accountable; and what plans he has to reform their lines of accountability. [63553]

Mr. Boateng: In accordance with Schedule 1 of the Charities Act 1993, the Home Secretary is responsible for the appointment of the Charity Commissioners. There are a maximum of five Charity Commissioners: the Chief Charity Commissioner is Head of the Department and Accounting Officer; there is a full-time Legal Commissioner; and three part-time Commissioners, one of whom must be legally qualified.

The Chief Charity Commissioner is Richard Fries, who was appointed on 1 June 1992 for a period of five years. This appointment was extended until 1 June 1999 with effect from 1 June 1997. The full-time Legal Commissioner is Michael Carpenter, appointed on 1 January 1998 until 7 October 2002. The part-time Commissioners are John Bonds, appointed on 1 January 1995 until 31 December 1997, extended to 31 December 1999; Jean Warburton (the other Legal Commissioner), appointed on 1 October 1996 until 30 September 2001; and Julia Unwin appointed from 1 May 1998 until 30 April 2001.

Whilst the Home Secretary is accountable to Parliament for the efficiency of the Charity Commission, his powers do not extend to investigating the Commission's decisions in particular cases. The Commission is a non-ministerial Government Department, accountable to the courts for its legal decisions. In exercising its powers under charity law, it functions in a quasi-judicial way and is not subject to Ministerial direction. In these matters it acts as an extension of the High Court and its decisions are subject to appeal to the courts. There are no plans to reform their lines of accountability.

South East London Probation Service

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much will be spent by the South East London Probation Service pilot for treatment and testing orders with regards to (a) Probation Service administration, (b) Probation Service officer posts, (c) research and (d) providers of treatment and rehabilitation. [63704]

Mr. George Howarth: South East London Probation Service spending over the entire drug treatment and testing order pilot period (1 October 1998—31 March 2000) will be as follows:

Probation Service	£
(a) probation service administration:	[1]95,238
(b) probation officer and administrative staff posts:	96,299
(c) research:	24,000
(d) treatment and rehabilitation:	368,127
Total	583,664

[1] Includes start-up costs, travel and subsistence, training rent and services, and contingency costs.

Prisons

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Prison Service establishments he or his Ministers plan to visit between 17 December 1998 and 11 January 1999. [63396]

Mr. George Howarth: I expect to visit Hindley Prison on 7 January. No other visits are scheduled during this period.

Car Crime

Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what initiatives his Department are developing to reduce car crime. [63403]

Mr. Boateng: On 29 September my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced a national target of a 30 per cent. reduction in vehicle crime over the next five years. To achieve this, we have recently established a ministerial task force—the Vehicle Crime Reduction Action Team—which will use as a starting point, a 14 point action plan developed jointly by the former Vehicle Crime Prevention Group and the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Identification Procedures

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce video ID evidence as an alternative to the current identification procedure. [63610]

Mr. Boateng: In response to the report of the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology about Digital Images as Evidence, published in February of this year, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary established a Working Group to take forward the recommendations in the report to consider other issues relating to the impact of technology on the laws of evidence, including the issue of video identification evidence.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost of identity parades in each year since 1993–94; and if he will make a statement. [63611]

Mr. Boateng: Decisions to hold identification parades are operational matters for the police. Details of the numbers held and the cost of each, which will vary, are not collected centrally.

Explosives

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the regulations governing the use of (a) black gunpowder and (b) other explosives by historic re-enactment societies; and if he will make a statement. [63609]

Mr. Boateng: The Health and Safety Executive keeps the regulations under review. The Executive has recently published guidance on the safe use of gunpowder and other explosives by historical re-enactment societies. The intention of the guidance is to ensure that members of these societies are aware of the relevant legislation, and good safety practice for the protection of themselves and members of the public. A copy of the guidance has been placed in the Library. The publication of such guidance is a regular part of Health and Safety Executive work to promote health and safety. I welcome and support the Executive's initiative publishing this guidance.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) the (i) task forces, (ii) review panels and (iii) advisory groups his Department has, (b) the remit of each and (c) the members of each together with their principal employment and their level of remuneration. [62801]

Mr. Straw: The information is available in the Library.

Police Funding

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress in introducing a sparsity factor into the budgets for rural police authorities. [63687]

Mr. Boateng: The formula which distributes resources between police authorities in England and Wales already contains an element for rural sparsity. This year, 0.5 per cent. of available resources have been allocated on the basis of population sparsity. This element has been retained in our proposals for 1999–2000 which my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced on 2 December 1998, Official Report, columns 194–97.

We have commissioned external consultants to find out whether there are additional costs involved in policing sparsely populated rural areas. We are expecting their report shortly. The results of this study will be available to inform funding settlements from 2000–2001.

Council Cases Review Commission

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 to ensure that the Criminal Cases Review Commission can deal with cases where a person is found not guilty by reason of insanity; and if he will make a statement. [63106]

Kate Hoey: The Government accept that the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 should be amended to enable the Criminal Cases Review Commission to refer to the Court of Appeal a special verdict of 'guilty but insane', under section 2(1) of the Trial of Lunatics Act 1993; and to give the Court of Appeal powers to hear and dispose of an appeal upon such a reference. Such a measure will be brought forward as soon as Parliamentary time allows.

HEALTH

Waiting Lists

12. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on current trends in NHS waiting lists (a) regionally and (b) nationally. [62454]

Mr. Dobson: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave earlier today, Official Report, column 759.

27. Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made in reducing waiting lists. [62470]

Mr. Milburn: The Government inherited the biggest and fastest-rising NHS waiting lists ever. Since April, the number of people waiting for hospital treatment has fallen by 119,000.

31. Siobhain McDonagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients currently have been waiting over 18 months for hospital treatment; and what was the largest figure for those waiting over 18 months in the NHS in the period 1979 to 1997. [62474]

Mr. Milburn: There were no patients waiting over 18 months for hospital inpatient treatment at the end of October 1998.

Data on the number of patients waiting over 18 months for hospital treatment were not collected centrally until June 1992. At the end of June 1992 there were 20,559 patients waiting over 18 months for hospital treatment which is the highest recorded number.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to reduce waiting times for operations in the NHS. [62463]

Mr. Milburn: The Government's successful drive to reduce the numbers of patients waiting for hospital admission is also reducing waiting times for patients, and latest figures show there were no patients waiting over 18 months for hospital treatment at the end of October.

Primary Care Groups

21. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress in the establishment of primary care groups. [62464]

30. Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the development of primary care groups. [62473]

Mr. Milburn: We are well on target to establishing Primary Care Groups by 1 April 1999. There are now 481 shadow Primary Care Groups in place. The Autumn guidance, Health Service Circular 1998/228 and guidance on governance, Health Service Circular 1998/229 were published on 8 December. Copies are available in the Library. These are the latest in a rolling programme of guidance.

22. Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will relax the restrictions on health authorities in inner city areas in relation to the development of primary care premises. [62465]

Mr. Milburn: Since coming into Government, we have introduced a number of new flexibilities to support our aim of improving primary care premises. We will consider whether other flexibilities might be helpful and provide value for money in achieving this aim.

32. Mr. Darvill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the progress towards implementation of the nine specific recommendations on primary care set out in the strategic review of London health services conducted by the independent advisory panel chaired by Professor Sir Leslie Turnberg. [62475]

Mr. Milburn: The implementation of the recommendations in the Turnberg report, on primary care and on other matters, is being taken forward by the NHS Executive in conjunction with local National Health Service organisations. Good progress is being made. The new NHS Executive regional office for London will be established on 1 January 1999 as the strategic health body for London in response to the London review. The regional office will produce a report on implementation which will be published in the new year.

NHS Hospitals

24. Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for encouraging co-operation between NHS hospitals. [62467]

Mr. Milburn: In the White Paper The new NHS we set out our plans to replace the internal market with a system based on partnership and driven by performance. National Health Service trusts, other NHS organisations and local authorities are already working more closely together to improve health and healthcare.

28. Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for encouraging management co-operation between NHS hospitals in order to reduce administration costs. [62471]

Mr. Milburn: The new NHS White Paper set out our plans to abolish the internal market and shift the focus from competition to co-operation across the National Health Service. NHS trusts, working with health authorities and Primary Care Groups, are being encouraged to share support functions to eliminate duplication and free up extra resources for direct patient care. This will ensure we focus NHS management effort on improving health and health care, by cutting unnecessary bureaucracy.

NHS Treatment

25. Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under what circumstances the age of a patient is the determining factor in the provision of NHS treatment. [62468]

Mr. Hutton: The fundamental principle of the National Health Service is to provide services for everybody on the basis of clinical need.

There are particular circumstances in which age may be one factor in determining the provision of NHS services. Immunisation programmes are targeted at certain age groups, for example this year for the first time all people over 75 have been targeted for influenza vaccination. Screening services may also be targeted at particular age groups, for example breast screening is targeted at women between the ages of 50 and 64. As natural fertility declines with age, health authorities may operate eligibility criteria for specialised infertility treatment which may include age.

Mount Vernon Hospital Burns Unit

26. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) letters and (b) other representations his Department has received against Hillingdon health authority's proposal to move the Burns, Plastic and Oral Maxillofacial Surgery Unit from Mount Vernon Hospital, Northwood. [62469]

Mr. Hutton: We have received approximately 1,082 letters.

All petitions sent to the Department were referred to Hillingdon Health Authority. it is understood that the Health Authority received over 80,000 signatures.

Meetings have also taken place between the Chairman of the North Thames Regional Office and local MPs.

Winter Pressures

29. Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to monitor co-operation between health and social services bodies in dealing with winter pressures. [62472]

Mr. Hutton: We are managing this winter in the normal way through regional offices supported by the Emergency Services Action Team. We have made it clear that health authorities should work closely with social services in managing winter pressures and announced a further £159 million on 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 33–46, to support them in this.

NHS Staff

33. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to protect NHS staff in the event of inaccurate attacks on their professional integrity and performance. [62476]

Mr. Milburn: Complaints regarding the professional integrity and performance of National Health Service staff are dealt with through the official complaints procedure or through the regulatory bodies of the professions concerned.

GP Fundholding

34. Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the effect on management costs of abolishing GP fundholding. [62477]

35. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the savings in administrative costs to be made from abolishing GP fundholding. [62478]

Mr. Dobson: The White Paper sets out a programme of action to sweep away the bureaucracy of the internal market. Over the lifetime of this parliament, £1 billion that would otherwise have been spent on bureaucracy will be released for patient care. Of this, savings of £20 million were made in 1997–98 by deferring the eighth wave of general practitioner fundholding, with a further saving of £25 million in GP fundholding costs to be made in 1998–99.

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations he has had with representatives of general practitioners about retaining fundholding after 31 March 1999. [63688]

Mr. Milburn: Consultations have taken place and continue to do so with organisations involved in, or affected by, general practitioner fundholding about all aspects of the Government's implementation of the new National Health Service.

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, in the event of the Bill to abolish fundholding not having received Royal Assent by 31 March 1999, GP fundholders will receive their fundholding budget for 1999–2000. [63684]

Mr. Milburn: We propose, subject to the outcome of consultations currently in hand, to lay regulations that will bring the existing general practitioner fundholding schemes to an end on 31 March 1999 and substitute a residual scheme.

NHS Resources

36. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the elements of the weighted capitation formula for the allocation of NHS resources to health authorities; and if he will make a statement. [62479]

Mr. Milburn: On 10 November 1998, we announced a wide ranging review of the weighted capitation formula used to inform allocations to health authorities and primary care groups.

Nurses (Recruitment)

37. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on how he intends to meet his target for nurse recruitment. [62480]

Mr. Milburn: We announced on 23 September 1998 a four-point recruitment and retention plan. The plan takes into account the need to increase the numbers of nursing and midwifery students in training, target staff who have left the profession to return, broaden career structures and improve the working lives of people working in the National Health Service.

Road Traffic Accidents (Costs)

38. Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of the correlation between road traffic levels and health service costs. [62481]

Mr. Hutton: As part of the work which has been undertaken in association with the Road Traffic (NHS Charges) Bill, which is currently before the House, we have looked at the number of road traffic accidents which take place, their level of severity and the cost of treating those people injured in accidents. This information has informed the tariff of charges which will be applied under the terms of the Bill.

Care Standards

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what roles and responsibilities he proposes for regional commissions for care standards. [62447]

Mr. Hutton: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave earlier today.

Mental Health Services (Leeds)

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the provision of mental health services in the city of Leeds. [62466]

Mr. Hutton: I understand there have been concerns about mental health services in Leeds and I welcome the Leeds Health Authority's commitment to improve services through increased funding and the modernisation of facilities over the next few years.

Trainee General Practitioners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the trend in the number of trainee general practitioners in the NHS over the past 12 months. [63339]

Mr. Milburn: Information about general practitioner Registrars (previously referred to as trainees) over the past 12 months is not available. Between October 1996 and October 1997, the number of GP Registrars in England increased by 2.9 per cent.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps he is taking to revise the current system of funding for NHS treatment and care services for HIV/AIDS; [63608]

(2) when he will announce the outcome of the Stocktake Group on spending on HIV/AIDS and the allocations to health authorities for treatment and care services for HIV/AIDS. [63607]

Ms Jowell: We set up the Stocktake Group last year to advise on a lasting formula for the distribution of the HIV/AIDS treatment and care budget. The group's recommendations are currently with Ministers and an announcement on their decision and on the allocations to health authorities of the HIV/AIDS treatment and care budget for the financial year 1999/2000 will be made in due course.

CS Sprays

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions the Chief Medical Officer has compiled an assessment of, or report into, the safety of CS sprays since January 1993. [63779]

Ms Jowell: The Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment (COT) is currently considering the health effects of CS spray when used as an incapacitant. A comprehensive review of the available data has been prepared by officials at the Department for this purpose. The COT will consider the subject further at their February 1999 meeting. Their conclusions will be made known publicly once agreed and a copy of the review will be placed in the Library at the same time.

Officials at the Department have previously reviewed the scientific data on CS gas and sprays but they have not produced any scientific papers or reports on the subject. A list of the published scientific literature which was fully reviewed has been placed previously in the Library.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many accident and emergency departments are planned to be refurbished during the coming financial year. [62655]

Mr. Hutton: We are investing £30 million from the National Health Service modernisation fund to upgrade around 50 accident and emergency departments in England next year.

Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the Annual Report of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority. [64266]

Ms Jowell: The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority has published its seventh Annual Report today. The Report has been laid before the House in accordance with the requirements of section 7(3) of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Sodium Valproate

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the effects of prescribing sodium valproate to epileptics during pregnancy; and if he will make a statement. [63944]

Ms Jowell: We are not currently aware of any representations concerning the effects of prescribing sodium valproate to people with epilepsy during pregnancy. Risks to the foetus are recognised for anticonvulsant therapies and information about whether and how to use medicines in pregnant patients can be found in the authorised product information for health professionals and patients. Women taking antiepileptic drugs who may become pregnant should be informed of the possible consequences. Those who wish to become pregnant should be referred to an appropriate specialist for advice. Women who become pregnant should be counselled and offered antenatal screening. The risks of epileptic control need to be weighed against the risks to the foetus of these treatments.

Chemical Weapons Attack (Iraq)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what work his Department has funded (a) to treat the victims of Halabja in northern Iraq following the chemical weapons attack by Iraqi military forces on the town in March 1998 and (b) to monitor the long-term effects of the chemical weapons on the residents of the town; and if he will make a statement. [63778]

Ms Jowell: The Department of Health has not provided any assistance to the people of Halabja since the chemical weapons attack in March 1988, as international assistance of this kind is channelled through the Department for International Development (DfID). My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development provided a written answer on DfID's efforts on 29 July 1998, Official Report, column 283 and this represents the current state of play.

National Foetal Anti-convulsant Syndrome Association

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what support is given out of public funds to the National Foetal Anti-Convulsant Syndrome Association; and if he will make a statement. [63937]

Ms Jowell: The Department provides no funding at present. The Association recently applied for a grant under Section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968 and this is under consideration.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal (League Tables)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish league tables of units of delivery for the New Deal in such a form as to enable a comparison to be made between the performance of the private sector, the Employment Service and other providers. [63273]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 14 December 1998]: Yesterday I published performance tables for all units of delivery. The tables compare progress at local level of all those young people who entered the New Deal in April—the first month of full national operation—and in particular shows what proportion of those young people has moved into jobs. Copies will be placed in the Libraries.

Environmental Skills

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress has been made by the Sustainable Development Education Panel in identifying environmental key skills. [63443]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Earlier this year the Panel made two submissions to the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority identifying sustainable development skills at each of the key stages. The sustainable charity Forum For The Future is publishing position papers on the Panel's behalf, identifying sustainable development curriculums in higher education for design, business and teacher education.

I have placed copies of these document in the Library of the House. Later this month the Panel will make its first annual report to the Government. I will deposit this in the Library of the House when it is published.

Further Education

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance he will give to further education colleges on the use of hardship funds. [63472]

Mr. Mudie: College hardship funds are provided by colleges themselves and their use is not subject to guidance by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. In many cases hardship funds are paid alongside Further Education Access Funds. My right hon. Friend's guidance on the use of these Funds is that they should address financial barriers to the access and completion of training and encourage participation.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will review the range of assistance available to further education students out of access funds. [63471]

Mr. Mudie: My right hon. the Secretary of State has recently reviewed the assistance available to further education students from Access Funds and last month announced significant improvements in funding and an extension of scope to students aged 16 to 18 years old.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he intends to publish his response to the representations received by his Department in respect of his consultation paper regarding accountability in the governance of further education colleges. [63469]

Mr. Mudie: My right hon. Friend published the Department's response to this consultation on 27 November. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to increase the average level of funding per unit at FE colleges in (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01; and if he will list the average level of funding unit values for each of the previous five years. [62090]

Mr. Mudie: Latest information for the financial years 1994–95 to 1998–99 gives the following cash figures for public funding per full-time equivalent student in further education:

£000

Financial years
1994–95	3,040
1995–96	2,930
1996–97	2,920
1997–98 estimated	2,950
1998–99 planned	2,900

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has announced additional funding of £725 million for the Further Education sector over the next two years. In the first of these years, 1999–2000, the average level of funding per full-time equivalent student, including additional employer contributions but excluding the allocations for capital and the Further Education Standards Fund, will be subject to a 1 per cent. efficiency gain. This compares with an estimated average annual efficiency gain of over 3.5 per cent. for the period 1994–95 to 1998–99. An announcement on the position for 2000–2001 will be made next year.

New Deal (Winchester)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have entered the New Deal Gateway in the Winchester City Council area since its inception; and how many took up each New Deal option. [63159]

Mr. Andrew Smith: It is not possible to provide separate figures for individual towns or council areas.

The latest Government Statistical Service figures for the Mid Hampshire Unit of Delivery, which covers Winchester, show that to the end of September 1998 (a) 206 young people had entered the Gateway and 41 have secured unsubsidised employment; (b) 17 had joined one of the four options. This breaks down to: 2 on the Employment option; 3 on the Voluntary Sector option; and 12 on the Full-Time Education and Training option.

EU (Educational Material)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many requests his Department received prior to the United Kingdom presidency of the European Union, to update material available on the EU; and if he will make a statement. [64092]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Under-Secretary of State with responsibility for lifelong learning, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, East (Mr. Mudie), on 18 November 1998, Official Report, columns 639–40.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in how many cases convicted sex offenders have been offered placements working with children under the New Deal programme; and when he was informed of such cases. [63886]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 14 December 1998]: I am not aware of any cases of convicted sex offenders being offered placements working with children under the New Deal programme. We have investigated the allegations in press articles of 8 December, but have been unable to substantiate them.

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to instigate a review of New Deal placements involving contact with children. [63370]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 14 December 1998]: Those providing such placements are contractually required to undertake relevant checks. We will investigate any specific cases in which it is claimed that unsuitable people have gained jobs with children through the New Deal. There is currently a wider review through an Interdepartmental Working Group looking at many issues around preventing unsuitable people working with children.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what steps he is taking to prevent convicted sex offenders obtaining placements working with children under the New Deal programme; [63887]

(2) what assessment he has made of the risk of convicted sex offenders being offered placements working with children under the New Deal programme; and what steps he is taking to prevent such placements being made. [63888]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The primary responsibility for checking the suitability of people they recruit rests firmly with the employers. Guidance has been issued to ensure that everybody working in the Employment Service understands their responsibilities. No Employment Service officer would knowingly submit a serious offender for a job working with children but they have been reminded of the need for vigilance and of the importance of reminding employers of their responsibilities.

The Employment Service is already working closely with other agencies, including the Home Office, to explore what else can be done, including more effective arrangements for the exchange of information.

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the monthly expenditure on (a) Gateway provision and (b) other provision for the New Deal for young people by region from January to the end of September. [63276]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 14 December 1998]: Expenditure which has been brought to account by the Employment Service since national roll-out of New Deal for Gateway provision is £814,540 and £8.9 million for the New Deal options. This is shown in the table.

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to include Irish as a category in his Department's ethnic monitoring of staff recruitment. [63875]

Mr. Mudie: The overriding principle of Civil Service recruitment procedures is that they should be fair, and selection should be on merit at each stage.

Monitoring in this area is based on ethnic origin, and not nationality. The 10 minority ethnic origin categories monitored by DfEE are those used in the 1991 census, which did not include an Irish category. The use of these categories will be reviewed in the light of any suggested changes for the 2001 Population Census.

Engineering Qualifications

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received concerning the current range of engineering qualifications in further and higher education; and what work he has commissioned to review these qualifications. [63551]

Mr. Mudie: The Department has received a number of letters on these issues. The results of a Department-commissioned study of national occupational standards for engineering were published in 1996. National Vocational Qualifications at levels 2 and 3 were subsequently revised to take account of those standards. Draft Higher Level National Occupational Standards for Engineering were published recently and once those have been approved NVQs at level 4 will be revised. As part of its creation of a national framework of qualifications, the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority is working with the awarding bodies to ensure that other vocational qualifications in engineering meet the criteria for approval.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the special advisers in his Department and the issues on which they specialise; and to what level they have been security cleared. [62840]

Mr. Mudie: The Special Advisers in the Department for Education and Employment are Conor Ryan (full time), Hilary Benn (full time), Tom Bentley (part time) and Sophie Linden (part time); equivalent to three full time posts. They advise on the full range of Education and Employment issues for which the Department is responsible. The additional post was agreed by the Prime Minister to provide support to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in dealing with written material, reflecting the particular circumstances he faces in undertaking his job on equal terms with other ministerial colleagues. In addition, Professor Michael Barber has been appointed as Standards and Effectiveness Adviser.

Special Advisers are subject to the usual security clearance arrangements.

Teaching Assistants

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many teaching assistants were in post in schools at 30 September. [60980]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 27 November 1998]: The available information is shown in the table:

Full-time equivalent number of education support staff in maintained[1] schools in England

[5] Not applicable.

Teachers

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the schools which have been successful in bidding for advanced skills teacher status for a member of their staff. [63253]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Complete information about school participation is not yet available in respect of the bids for more than 1,100 AST posts submitted so far by local education authorities for 1999–2000. Schools and LEAs have until 5 February 1999 to bid for the funding from April 1999. We plan to create 5,000 advanced skills teacher posts over the two school years 1999–2000 and 2000–01. The specialist schools which have been successful in bidding for advanced skills teacher status for one or more members of their staff in the 1998–99 introductory phase are list

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what guidance his Department has issued to schools on the provision of supply cover for advanced skills teachers while they are operating in schools other than those in which they are usually employed; [63247]

(2) what financial arrangements will need to be put in place between the schools concerned where an advanced skills teacher from one school is providing support, advice or training in another school. [63252]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 10 December 1998]: The guidance in Circular 9/98, Teachers' Pay and Conditions of Employment 1998, applies. The funding available through the Standards Fund to the school which is an advanced skills teacher's main employer includes an element to meet the cost of supply cover when the advanced skills teacher is operating outside the school. Advanced skills teachers are expected to spend most of their time teaching in their own school.

Teachers (PE)

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and what percentage of teachers in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools are PE trained. [63440]

Mr. Charles Clarke: In 1996–97, some 26,000 full and part-time teachers in English maintained secondary schools (approximately 13 per cent.) had a post A level qualification in physical education.

Similar information for primary teachers is not available. However, primary teachers are trained to deliver the whole primary curriculum including physical education.

Post-devolution Expenditure

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the expenditure to be incurred this year by his Department on programmes or activities located in Wales as part of UK-wide programmes; and what will be the mechanism for supporting such expenditure when the National Assembly for Wales has been established. [63478]

Mr. Mudie: As part of UK-wide programmes, I estimate that the Department for Education and Employment will spend around £200,000 on programmes or activities located in Wales. The Government of Wales Act 1998 provided for a Transfer of Functions Order to be made to transfer Ministerial functions to the National Assembly for Wales. This Order was published in draft for public consultation on 12 November. Until the content of the Order has been finalised it is not possible to say with certainty what functions will transfer. Work is continuing within government to finalise the text of the Order and to establish whether any programme expenditure relates to those functions which will transfer. Funds will be transferred as necessary on this basis.

School Sport

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received concerning the teaching of sport in schools. [63442]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Department has received a number of representations from organisations and individuals about aspects of teaching PE, including sport, in schools. Physical education must be taught to all children throughout their compulsory schooling and is a key part of providing them with a broad and balanced education.

Class Sizes

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will require admission limits for infant Key Stage 1 schools to be limited to multiples of 30 in order to meet the class size regulations. [63310]

Ms Estelle Morris: No. Although admission authorities have a duty to vary standard numbers where these are incompatible with the class size limit, adjusting school admission numbers to multiples of 30 is only one of a number of ways of meeting the limit.

Disabled Students' Allowance

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students in full-time post school education took up the disabled students' allowance in each of the last five years. [63399]

Mr. Mudie: The disabled students allowance forms part of the mandatory award. Mandatory awards are payable to personally eligible students attending full-time sandwich courses leading to a first-degree or comparable qualification, DipHE or HND courses and courses of initial teacher training. There are three separate allowances—that for specialist equipment; for non-medical helpers; and the general disabled students allowance. Travel costs resulting from a disability can also be met as part of the award. The number of disabled students' allowances made by Local Education Authorities in England and Wales as part of mandatory awards in the academic years 1992–93 to 1996–97—the latest year for which figures are available—are shown in the table:

Number[1] of disabled students' allowances England and Wales[2]: academic years 1992–93 to 1996–97

Academic year	Number of awards[3]
1992–93	2,490
1993–94	4,050
1994–95	5,320
1995–96	6,550
1996–97	8,120

[1] The table shows the number of awards, not the number of students. Students can receive more than one type of disabled students allowance.

[2] Made by Local Education Authorities in England and Wales to students normally domiciled in their area.

CABINET OFFICE

Public Bodies

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement about Public Bodies 1998 and the Executive NDPB 1998 report. [64385]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Government have today published Public Bodies 1998, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House, and the Executive NDPB 1998 Report (CM 4157) which has been laid before both Houses. Quangos: Opening the Doors, published on 29 June 1998, promised that future editions of both publications would develop in line with the Government's policy of making public bodies more efficient, transparent and accountable. Public Bodies 1998 and the Executive NDPB Report 1998 take important steps in that direction.

Public Bodies 1998 provides a range of statistical information on those national and regional public bodies for which Ministers retain a degree of responsibility. This includes all nationalised industries and non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) as well as certain public corporations and NHS bodies. On 1 April 1998, there were 1,073 NDPBs, a reduction of 55 over the previous year. As of 1 September 1998, 32 per cent. of appointments to bodies listed in Public Bodies were held by women; and 3.7 per cent. were held by ethnic minorities. In line with the Government's commitment to increase substantially the information publicly available on these bodies, Public Bodies includes for the first time the terms of reference of each of the bodies listed, the names of individual chairmen and chief executives (or their equivalents) and e-mail and Internet addresses where these are available. Public Bodies 1998 provides more information than ever before in a single document about this sector of government.

The Executive NDPB 1998 Report brings together performance and trend data on 81 of the largest executive NDPBs each with expenditure of over £20 million in 1997–98. The contribution of NDPBs is important to achieving the policy goals of the Government and the results that people want. The individual entries covering annual performance measures and key business summary data show that some NDPBs are performing well both in terms of meeting stringent performance targets and delivering more efficient and effective services. However, there are no grounds for complacency. Too many of the bodies do not have adequate performance measures in place nor proper measures of efficiency. It is vital that these measures are put in place so that it is clear where success is being achieved and where there are problems to be resolved if we are to make the best use of taxpayers' money.

NDPBs, like other parts of government, have the opportunity to increase the impact of their work and contribute to improvements in the quality and convenience of public services by linking up with other public bodies and working across boundaries to match people's needs. This will be a key area for further development over the next few years, and the Better Government White Paper to be published in the Spring will have more to say about what has been achieved and possible ways forward.

The Public Bodies and the Executive NDPB 1998 Report will in future years continue to develop and widen in scope. The Government recognise the important roles performed by the bodies listed in these publications and are committed to ensuring that they, like other parts of the public service, play their full part in helping to achieve the high level policy objectives set out in the Comprehensive Spending Review and the Public Service Agreements.

Both Public Bodies 1998 and the Executive NDPB 1998 Report are available on the Internet via the Cabinet Office home page (www.open.gov.uk/co/cohome.htm).

Better Government White Paper

Ms Moran: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when he expects to publish the Better Government White Paper. [63782]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: As I explained to the House on 21 October 1998, Official Report, columns 1267–68, the Government will publish a White Paper in the spring, setting out proposals for modernising government and joining up public services, to secure effective decision-making and services that work and respond to the people who need them. The Prime Minister has asked me to chair a Cabinet Committee to drive this agenda forward and the timetable remains firmly on course. I am keen to take into account a wide range of views and ideas in preparing the White Paper.

WALES

Ministerial E-mail Address

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his e-mail address. [62553]

Mr. Michael: I have asked my officials to introduce systems to provide e-mail access from outside the Department as quickly as possible. Work is already in hand to provide this facility on a general basis. My Department is already able to provide e-mail facilities to specific officials where a specific need can be demonstrated. In addition the Department publishes e-mail addresses for replies to consultation exercises. On the Internet Web site for the National Assembly for Wales, members of the public are encouraged to enter into a debate about Assembly issues by posting views and questions to the Web site by e-mail.

Beef (Schools)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he is taking to encourage local education authorities to allow beef to be served in schools in Wales. [63404]

Mr. Hain: Decisions on whether to allow beef to be served in schools in Wales are for local education authorities and, in the grant maintained sector, schools themselves to take.

Mental Health Services

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what provision he has made for additional expenditure over the next three years on NHS mental health services in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [63476]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales to my hon. Friend the Member for Vale of Clwyd (Mr. Ruane) on 14 December 1998, Official Report, column 392. This set out the additional cash that will be available for the NHS over the next three years. I am now considering in detail my spending priorities in view of the range of pressures, including those arising from developments in mental health services in Wales and will make a further announcement in due course.

Community Hospital, Porthmadog

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give approval for the North Wales Health Authority to go ahead with its proposal to build a new community hospital at Porthmadog to serve eastern Dwyfor and northern Meirionnydd. [63445]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The proposal to build a North Meirionnydd East Dwyfor community hospital will be considered along with all other priorities for 1999–2000.

Roads (Flintshire)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total cost of (a) the new River Dee Bridge in Flintshire and its associated road works, (b) the Grade Interchange at the entrance to the Deeside Industrial Park, (c) the Queensferry Flyover and (d) the Hawarden By-Pass, at current prices; and if he will make a statement. [63938]

Mr. Hain: Scheme costs at current prices are:

(a) The A548 Third Dee Crossing (the responsibility of Flintshire County Council): £74.300 million (est.);

(b) A550 Deeside Park Interchange: £10.399 million;

(c) A494 Queensferry Interchange: £13.829 million; and

(d) A55 Hawarden Bypass: £66.007 million.

The figures for the three schemes for which the Welsh Office are responsible have been revalued to 1998–99 prices using current Treasury deflators.

Health Authority Spending

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the total amount spent on administration by each health authority in Wales in the last year for which figures are available. [63705]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The information requested is given in the following table:

Bro Taf	4,772
Dyfed Powys	3,112
Gwent	3,264
Morgannwg	2,605
North Wales	3,744

A5-A55 Dual Carriageway

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 8 December 1998, Official Report, column 184, on the A5-A55 dual carriageway, what is the name of the preferred bidder. [63707]

Mr. Hain: The preferred bidder is UK Highways.

North Wales Health Authority

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many administrative staff are employed by North Wales Health Authority. [63706]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: At 30 June 1998, the latest date for which data are available, there were 153 administrative and clerical staff (equivalent to 149 staff working whole-time) in post at North Wales Health Authority.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioners

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost (a) of giving in the current uprating to all those pensioners eligible for the National Insurance retirement pension who are aged 80 years or more an increase in benefit in line with earnings and (b) of such an increase if the current year's increase in pension for those aged 80 years or more reflected the rise in earnings since 1980. [62630]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested because average earnings figures for September 1998 are not yet available. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

The estimated cost if the April 1998 retirement pension rates for pensioners aged over 79 years had been uprated in line with rises in earnings up to and including September 1997

Retirement Pension cost	40	2,780
Means-tested benefit offsets	–20	–940
Net cost	20	1,840

Notes:

1. The RP cost has been provided by the Government Actuary's Department.

2. Means-tested benefit offsets have been estimated using the 1995/6 Family Resources Survey and the May 1997 Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry, both uprated to 1998/9 benefits and earnings levels.

3. Estimates are rounded to the nearest £10 million.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the total numbers of pensioners for the current year who are (a) receiving income support, (b) entitled to income support but are not receiving these funds at present, (c) with incomes below £5,600, excluding those already accounted for by (a) and (b), (d) aged 65 to 74 with incomes between £5,410 and £9,710, (e) aged 65 to 74 with incomes between £9,711 and £16,200, (f) aged 65 to 74 with incomes between £16,201 and £17,000, (g) aged 65 to 74 with incomes between £17,001 and £18,630, (h) aged 65 to 74 with incomes above £18,630, (i) aged 75 and over with incomes between £5,600 and £9,900, (j) aged 75 and over with incomes between £9,901 and £16,200, (k) aged 75 and over with incomes between £16,201 and £18,000, (l) aged 75 and over with incomes between £18,001 and £19,010 and (m) aged 75 years and over with incomes above £19,010. [62628]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

There are 1,425,000 pensioner benefit units currently in receipt of Income Support, excluding Residential Care and Nursing Home recipients. Information for other parts of the question is not available for the current year.

The number of pensioner benefit units estimated to be entitled to, but not receiving, Income Support in 1996–97 is provisionally estimated to be between 400,000 and 700,000. These estimates differ from those published on 1 October. An error in the published take-up estimates for pensioners has been discovered; a full set of corrected figures will be published in the new year.

In 1996–97 there were an estimated 1,250,000 pensioner benefit units with incomes of £5,600 or less who were not entitled to Income Support and did not receive it.

Notes:

1. Estimates in brackets are based on small sample sizes and should be treated with caution.
2. Estimates of recipients are rounded to the nearest 1,000.
3. Estimates based on the Family Resources Survey exclude the full time self-employed and are rounded to the nearest 10,000.
4. Benefit units are classified into age groups according to the age of the elder pensioner in the benefit unit
5. A pensioner benefit unit is defined as a single person aged 60 or over or a couple (not necessarily married) where at least one member of the couple is aged 60 or over.
6. Pensioner incomes are defined as before housing costs net income including all benefits, pensions, investment income and earnings, net of Income Tax, National Insurance contributions, contributions to occupational pensions schemes and Council Tax.

1. Estimates of the number of recipients of Income Support are taken from the May 1998 Quarterly Statistical Enquiry and exclude pensioners in Residential Care or Nursing Homes.
2. All other estimates are based on an analysis of the 1996–97 Family Resources Survey which is a survey of private households in Great Britain.

Child Support

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what powers the CSA possesses to follow up cases in respect of absent parents who have moved to a different country; and what plans he has to review them. [63395]

Angela Eagle: The Child Support Act only applies where both parents and the child are habitually resident in the UK. In some circumstances a person can be regarded as habitually resident in more than one country. In such cases, child support liability may still exist even though a non-resident parent is living abroad.

If there is no child support liability the parent with care has recourse to the courts to obtain maintenance. The Lord Chancellor's Department administers reciprocal enforcement arrangements with a number of other countries. Under these provisions many foreign courts can enforce a British order for maintenance.

The outcome of the consultation process on the Green Paper, "Children First: a new approach to child support", together with our detailed proposals for reforming the Child Support system, will be announced in due course.

Incapacity Benefit (Appeals)

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many incapacity benefit paper appeals relating to the all-work-test were processed in the last four quarters for which figures are available; and what percentage was decided in the claimant's favour. [63958]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many incapacity benefit claimants have (a) failed the all-work test, (b) appealed against disallowance of the test, (c) had their benefit re-instated prior to the hearing of the appeal and (d) had their appeals upheld. [63956]

Mr. Timms: Between April 1995 and 31 August 1998, 321,791 claims for Incapacity Benefit were disallowed following examination under the all work test.

Up to 31 August 1998, 169,247 appeals had been lodged with the Independent Tribunal Service. In the cases appealed, 2,797 decisions were reversed on review by the adjudication officer and 49,951 by an appeal tribunal.

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to include Irish as a category in his Department's ethnic monitoring of staff recruitment. [63882]

Mr. Denham: Civil Service recruitment is based on the principle of fair and open competition and that selection should be on merit at each stage.

Monitoring in this area is based on ethnic origin and not nationality. The nine ethnic origin categories monitored by this Department are those used in the 1991 census, which did not include an Irish category. They will be reviewed in the light of any suggested changes for the 2001 Population Census.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the annual savings are to date, including administrative costs, arising from the replacement of invalidity benefit by incapacity benefit; and what estimate he made of the savings which would arise from the change. [63955]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

The original estimates for benefit savings from the introduction of Incapacity Benefit and revised estimates produced in 1996

£ million

	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
Initial savings estimates (September 1993)	415	1,185	1,720	—
Latest available savings estimates (November 1996)	280	790	1,350	1,830

Notes:
1. No further estimates have been made and it is not possible to quantify the effects on administrative costs.
2. Actual savings figures arising from the replacement of Invalidity Benefit by Incapacity Benefit are not available as it is not possible to say whether an individual found capable of work following application of the all work test would have been found capable under the old Invalidity Benefit medical controls.

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people between the ages of 20 and 25 years do not have the required national insurance contribution record to qualify for incapacity benefit (a) under the current system and (b) under the changes proposed in Support for Disabled People (Cm 4103). [63949]

Mr. Timms: The main change proposed is that people should be required to have paid National Insurance contributions on earnings equivalent to 25 times the lower earnings limit in one of the two tax years preceding their claim, rather than in any tax year.

The latest available figures show that there are about 2,470,000 people aged 20 to 25 who have not paid the contributions in any tax year necessary for entitlement to Incapacity Benefit under the current system and about 2,530,000 who have not paid the contributions in the two most recent tax years for entitlement under the proposed system. It is not known how many of these would actually claim Incapacity Benefit.

Notes:

1. The information refers to the number of people without the required National Insurance contributions in 1997 (the most recent information available). The qualifying tax years for the new condition are therefore tax years 1994–95 and 1995–96.

2. Numbers have been rounded to the nearest 10,000.

Widows' Benefits

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the current average SERPS enhancement to the widow's pension and to widowed mother's benefits is for those whose husbands have remained contracted into SERPS; and what the average widow's benefit is for contracted-out occupational pension schemes. [63951]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

The average additional pension paid to a widow, resident in Great Britain, whose husband had never contracted out of SERPS is £10.75 per week.

Where the husband contracted out of SERPS at some point in his working life, the average additional pension paid is £21.70 per week.

The average additional pension for all widows resident in Great Britain is £16.09.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many new claimants there have been since July for (a) state pension, (b) state pension with a SERPS enhancement, (c) contribution-based jobseeker's allowance, (d) incapacity benefit and (e) widow's benefit. [63953]

Mr. Timms: The information is in the table.

Benefit	Number of claims July-October 1998
Retirement Pension	194,000
Retirement Pension with SERPS[1]	97,000
Jobseekers Allowance[2]	1,100,000

Widows Benefit including Widows Payment[3]	13,000
Widows Pension/Widowed Mother's Allowance included in above[4]	10,000

[1] Exact numbers not known but about half of all Retirement Pension claims have SERPS entitlement

[2] A claim for Jobseeker's Allowance has to be made before it can be established whether the contributory element of Jobseeker's Allowance is payable. To date no figures are available for the number of individuals who are paid the contributory element of Jobseeker's Allowance.

National Insurance

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by what date those who have been underpaid as a result of the shut-down of the new national insurance computer will receive the full payments to which they are entitled. [63954]

Mr. Timms: All customers who are receiving interim or emergency awards of benefit will automatically have their entitlement reviewed. Any arrears due will be paid in full. The NIRS2 system is supporting the majority of business processes and once full functionality is available review of the cases affected will commence. It is not yet certain when this work will be complete.

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners have, as a result of the shut-down of the new national insurance computer, been underpaid by (a) 1p to £1 per week, (b) £1 to £10 per week and (c) £10 to £100 per week. [63952]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available until all the affected cases have been reassessed. This reassessment is expected to commence in the first quarter of 1999.

Lone Parents

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the total cost of running the New Deal for Lone Parents from July 1997 to 25 September 1998 has been, broken down by Employment Service regions; and how much of this was spent on (a) advertising, (b) personal advisers and (c) other Employment Agency services. [63950]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows:

Phase 1 of the New Deal for Lone Parents (NDLP) started on 21 July 1997 and ran until the main national rollout of the programme commenced on 26 October 1998. It was delivered in four areas by the Benefits Agency and four areas by the Employment Service. Phase 2 commenced on 6 April 1998. There was a period of overlap between Phases 1 and 2.

The Benefits Agency ran the NDLP in Phase 1 only between 21 July 1997 and 25 October 1998. There are no separate figures for the Benefits Agency advertising costs for Phase 1.

The cost of the Advisers in the four Benefits Agency areas for that period was as follows:

	Adviser costs
North Cheshire	241,337
North Worcestershire	233,776
Sheffield	248,253
Cambridge	339,469

The Benefits Agency did not have a separate allocation for Employment Service Programmes but were able to refer people to the Employment Service.

Expenditure details are not available in the same format for the Employment Service for Phase 1 of the NDLP between the period 21 July 1997 until 31 March 1998. However, the Employment Service's financial allocations for their regions for Phase 1 for 21 July 1997 to 31 March 1998 was as follows:

	Running costs	ES Programmes
London and South East	262,676	85,100
Wales	208,132	67,429
West Midlands	145,824	44,203
Scotland	103,225	33,442

Phase 2 of the NDLP extended the service to all lone parents who made a new claim for Income Support whose youngest child was aged at least 5 years and three months and those with younger children who put themselves forward. There were costs involved with the preparation of this phase of the programme which fell in the 1997–98 financial year. Expenditure details on Phase 2 of the NDLP in the 1997–98 financial year were not separately captured. However, the Employment Service financial allocations during that financial year for Phase 2 was as follows:

	Running costs[1]
Northern	58,235
Yorks and Humberside	80,665
East Midlands and Eastern	79,004
London and South East	296,497
South West	64,648
Wales	58,854
West Midlands	83,187
North West	116,862
Scotland	84,034

The Employment Service captured actual expenditure for the period 1 April 1998 to 30 September 1998 for the combined Phase 1 and Phase 2 of the NDLP. Separate expenditure for the two distinct strands of the NDLP is not available. The regional breakdown of this is as follows:

	Running costs[1]
Northern	204,327
Yorks and Humberside	297,436
East Midlands and Eastern	270,455
London and South East	987,706
South West	375,845
Office for Wales	305,076
West Midlands	333,279
North West	518,405
Office for Scotland	344,028

[1] From 1 April 1998 Employment Service is recording expenditure details in respect of NDLP under the headings of Paybill, General Administrative Expenditure and ES Programme expenditure. The Paybill details do not show the costs of Advisers as a separate item and would include the costs of Adviser managers and clerical support etc.

The vast majority of publicity costs surrounding Phase 1 of NDLP were paid centrally and fell in the 1997–98 financial year. These amounted to £384,553. There would have been other much smaller local publicity costs for both Phase 1 and Phase 2 of NDLP and these would be contained in the expenditure/allocation details shown above.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many lone parents with children of school age were receiving income support in Oxfordshire on 1 December. [63647]

Angela Eagle: The administration of benefits is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mr. Peter Mathison to Mr. Shaun Woodward, dated 14 December 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many lone parents with children of school age were receiving income support in Oxfordshire on 1st December.

The available figures are included in the attached table.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

	Number
May 1998
Lone Parents with children of school age in receipt of Income Support in Oxfordshire	4,000

Notes:

1. Lone Parents are defined as single people with dependants who are not in receipt of a disability or pensioner premium.
2. School age children are taken to be aged between 5 and 18 years inclusive, and it is lone parents who have at least one child within this range who are included. However, these lone parents might also have children younger than school age.
3. The information has been provided by the Analytical Services Division 1 of the DSS using the postcode's for Oxfordshire. The figures are provisional and subject to change.
4. The definition of Oxfordshire used is based on version 1 of the 1998 postcode directory.
5. The figures provided relate to receipt of Income Support as at May 1998 and have been taken from the Income Support Statistics Quarterly Enquiry May 1998 which is the latest available.
6. Figures are based on a 5% sample and therefore subject to a degree of sampling error.
7. Figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Income Support (Pensioners)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library the report on research into why some pensioners do not claim income support. [63703]

Mr. Denham: Research to understand why pensioners do not claim the Income Support to which they are entitled was begun at the end of last year. The fieldwork is now complete and a report is being prepared. Preliminary findings from qualitative research were published in June 1998 and a copy was placed in the Library. Full results are due next year, and publication will follow as soon as possible. The report will also be placed in the Library.

Scotland Act 1998 (Schedule 5)

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) total expenditure and (b) expenditure by programme by his Department in Scotland on areas covered by the exceptions under (i) D.5 of Head D and (ii) F.1 of Head F in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998. [63799]

Mr. Timms: Schedule 5, Head D.5 of the Scotland Act relates to Parliament's role in promoting energy conservation. This Department is conscious of the need to conserve energy, but does not directly incur expenditure in doing so, following the letting of its estates contract to an outside contractor, Trillium, in April 1998. Trillium are currently developing a number of spend-to-save measures.

Schedule 5, Head F.1 of the Scotland Act lists social welfare matters which are excepted from the reservation of Social Security. All these matters in Scotland are currently the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and this Department has no responsibility for expenditure on them. They are identified in the Act to make it clear that they are not included within the definition of Social Security.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the offices or agencies under his control which will be subject to L.2 of Head L in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998; how many people are currently employed in these offices; and what equal opportunities practices are adopted in these offices. [63800]

Mr. Timms: This Department consists of a Headquarters business unit and a number of Executive Agencies; the Benefits Agency, Contributions Agency, Child Support Agency, Information Technology Services Agency and War Pensions Agency. In total, there are 9,434 Departmental staff in Scotland.

The Department is committed to providing equality of opportunity for all staff, in all of its business units, in all locations. This commitment is set out in the Department's Equal Opportunities policy statement which was revised and issued to all staff in September. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Equal Opportunities practices are integral to the work of the Department, both in terms of employment practices and service to customers. Examples include Equal Opportunities training for all staff, establishing consultative/development staff groups, a network of Harassment Advisers in each business unit, and implementing a range of "family friendly" policies such as career breaks and alternative working patterns.

In addition, the Department uses the Employment Service's "positive about disabled people" symbol, conducts disability awareness sessions for staff and has completed staff disability surveys using the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA) definition of disability. An increasing number of buildings occupied by the Department now fully meet the requirements of the DDA, and the impetus will be maintained by our private sector partner, Trillium, as they continue to upgrade the buildings.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter dated 27 October to the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency regarding a constituent (ref. 6432). [64008]

Angela Eagle: The Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency replied to the hon. Member on 11 December 1998.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what percentage of cases reviewed under the Benefit Integrity Project have resulted in claimants (a) losing their entitlement, (b) having the level of their entitlement reduced and (c) having the level of their entitlement increased; [63507]

(2) how many complaints have been lodged by disability living allowance claimants as a result of decisions reached as a result of the Benefit Integrity Project, in each month since its introduction; [63508]

(3) how many people in receipt of disability living allowance have been reviewed under the Benefit Integrity Project since its introduction. [63506]

Mr. Timms: The administration of the Benefit Integrity Project is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, Peter Mathison. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 14 December 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how many people in receipt of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) have been reviewed under the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP), what percentage of cases reviewed under the BIP have resulted in claimants (a) losing their entitlement, (b) having the level of their entitlement reduced and (c) having the level of their entitlement increased, and how many complaints have been lodged by DLA claimants as a result of decisions reached following a BIP review for each month since its introduction.

Since its introduction 149,054 customers in receipt DLA have had their claims examined by the BIP. Benefit was removed in 8.13% (12,118) cases, reduced in 13.03% (19,424), and increased in 2.26% (3,373). In 76.58% (114,139) of cases entitlement was unchanged.

Statistical information about the BIP is published on a monthly basis and is placed in the House of Commons Library.

Where a customer is dissatisfied with the outcome of a BIP review, or simply dissatisfied with a decision, their normal course of action would be to request a review or appeal. There have been 22,689 reviews and 5,925 appeals received. Complaints are recorded only where a customer is dissatisfied with the standard of service they have received. Records of customer complaints about the BIP are available from June 1998 only and are as follows:

June: 121

July: 127

August: 179

September: 159

October: 111

I hope you find this reply useful.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the impact of the Benefit Integrity Project in generating cost savings and reducing the level of benefit fraud. [63509]

Mr. Timms: The administration of the Benefit Integrity Project is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, Peter Mathison. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 14 December 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what assessment he has made to the impact of the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP) in generating cost savings and reducing the level of benefit fraud.

The current estimate of benefit expenditure savings from the Benefit Integrity Project are: £8m in 1997–98, £30m in 1998–99 and £35m in 1999–2000.

The purpose of the BIP is to identify and put right incorrectness in the payment of Disability Living Allowance (DLA). The Benefits Agency carries out investigations into cases of suspected fraud in DLA. 1,929 cases, including 75 cases generated by BIP, were referred up to 31 March 1998. None of the cases generated by BIP have been referred for prosecution.

I hope you find this reply useful.

Benefits Agency (New Milton)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will review the provision of Benefits Agency services in New Milton. [62318]

Angela Eagle: The administration of the Benefits Agency is a matter for Peter Mathison, its Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Desmond Swayne, dated 14 December 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will review the provision of Benefits Agency services in New Milton.

There are no plans at present to review the services provided by the Benefits Agency (BA) to the residents of New Milton. However the Agency is always seeking to ensure its services in line with the modern delivery of services expected by Ministers to support their Welfare Reform Programme. the District Manager for Solent and Forest, John Cullen, based in Southampton would be pleased to receive your suggestions on the service we currently offer our customers in New Milton.

Whilst there is no specific BA outlet at New Milton there is a Public Caller Office at Lymington which is co-located with the Employment Service Jobcentre (ESJ) and which offers a full BA enquiry service. The main BA processing site for the area in which New Milton is situated is at Totton. There are also ESJs situated at Hythe and Ringwood.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Sea Anglers

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how anglers' landings are taken into account for quota management purposes when anglers' catches are unknown; [63361]

(2) which EU Member States impose restrictions on sea angling; [63360]

(3) how much fish was caught by sea anglers in (a) January to June 1997, (b) June to December 1997, (c) January to June 1998 and (d) June to September 1998 or other periods in 1997 and 1998 for which figures are available. [63359]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 14 December 1998]: European Union regulations on annual total allowable catches and quotas require that all landings be counted against a Member State's share of the total allowable catch for each quota stock. It is for each Member State to decide how its quotas are managed. We do not have detailed information on the management arrangements operating in other Member States although we understand that some have imposed restrictions on sea angling.

The Ministry does not collect information on catches made by vessels engaged in recreational angling. For the purposes of quota management in the UK all vessels used to convey pleasure anglers are, irrespective of their length, grouped with under 10 metre commercial fishing vessels. When therefore fisheries for individual stocks are closed to the under 10 metre commercial fleet by means of statutory prohibition orders, all vessels used to convey anglers fishing for pleasure are also prohibited from landing fish. Closures are imposed when the total available quota allocation for a particular species has been taken.

Zinc Bacitracin

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultations he has undertaken with (a) the manufacturers of zinc bacitracin, (b) poultry breeders and (c) farming unions about the European Commission's proposal to withdraw authorisation of zinc bacitracin; and if he will make a statement. [64030]

Mr. Rooker: We have received a number of communications from Forum Holdings Ltd. and are fully aware of their concerns. Copies of the Commission's proposal have been sent informally to the major interested parties and a formal information letter was sent to interests including poultry breeders and farming unions on 11 December.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the consistency of the European Commission's decision to withdraw authorisation for zinc bacitracin and three other veterinary medicines with the precautionary principle of the Commission's guidelines for its implementation; and if he will make a statement. [64026]

Mr. Rooker: Zinc bacitracin and the three other antibiotics covered by the proposed suspension are authorised as zootechnical feed additives for growth promotion and not as veterinary medicines. The proposal was made because of evidence assessed by the EU

Commission's Scientific Committee for Animal Nutrition that the use of certain antibiotics for growth promotion contributes to the overall selected pressure for resistant bacteria. The Government have received advice from the Chairman of the Advisory Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Food and from the Veterinary Products Committee which recommends the phasing out of certain antibiotic growth promoters. This advice confirms the principles laid down in the Swann Report in 1969 that antibiotics which may impair the efficacy of prescribed therapeutic antibiotics used in human medicine through the development of resistant strains of organisms should not be authorised for growth promotion.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the animal welfare implications of the proposed European Union ban on the use of zinc bacitracin; and if he will make a statement. [64033]

Mr. Rooker: An abrupt suspension, as originally proposed by the European Commission, would have been likely to cause considerable health and welfare problems for livestock. That is why we argued successfully for an extension which permits us to introduce the ban with effect from 1 July 1999, allowing producers some time to adapt to the loss of zinc bacitracin.

Eggs

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of (a) the number of intensive poultry units in England and (b) the average number of birds found within such units. [63375]

Mr. Rooker: The figures obtained from the June Census returns do not provide sufficient detail to determine the number of intensive poultry units in England. In England and Wales, there are 23,000 farms with laying hens but not all of these will be cage production and indeed the vast majority have fewer than 100 birds.

It may be of interest to look at the current breakdown of shell eggs packed by type of production system. This is:

cage eggs—82 per cent.

free range—14 per cent.

barn/other—4 per cent.

This is from an estimated UK annual production (in 1997) of 9,540 million eggs.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take measures to prohibit the use of the term 'farm-fresh' eggs to designate those eggs which originate from a battery system. [63378]

Mr. Rooker: The terms 'farm fresh', 'naturally fresh' and 'country fresh' may be used to describe eggs produced under any system. The word 'fresh' is reserved for eggs of Grade A quality, which is the highest standard of freshness and cleanliness laid down in the Regulations. The words 'farm' and 'country' are not considered to be misleading, as nearly all eggs are produced on farms of one kind or another or in the country.

I am aware that consumer research, undertaken by welfare organisations, has indicated that some consumers are under the impression that this reflects the method of production. No legislative action is currently proposed and any changes would have to be discussed in Brussels. I am aware, however, that the egg industry and supermarkets themselves are addressing this consumer concern.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with supermarkets concerning the descriptions applied to eggs offered for sale to the public. [63377]

Mr. Rooker: None.

EC legislation governing the marketing of shell eggs specifies which exclusive terms can be used to indicate type of farming (but exempts organic/biological farming). These optional descriptions are 'free range' eggs; 'semi-intensive' eggs; 'deep litter' eggs; 'perchery' eggs (barn eggs) and 'eggs from caged hens'. All these marketing terms are optional. Producers or marketing outlets can therefore use these terms if they wish to clarify the method of production for consumers, providing the minimum production criteria set out in the marketing legislation is met.

As far as other descriptions are concerned, there is an obligation that neither the pictures nor terms used on egg packs are misleading. Trading Standards officers of local authorities have the power to act if this is the case.

Veterinary Medicines

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to resist the withdrawal of authorisation of any veterinary medicine unless he is satisfied that the alternative products available on the market are at least as safe for (a) animals and (b) humans; and if he will make a statement. [64027]

Mr. Rooker: No veterinary medicine is authorised for use unless it satisfies stringent statutory criteria of safety, quality and efficacy. Safety includes the safety of treated animals and humans.

Antibiotics

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the weight of antibiotics used annually in farming; what is his policy in respect of this application; and if he will make a statement. [63381]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not kept centrally. However, industry sources indicate that a total of 756 tonnes of antibiotics, including 99 tonnes of growth promoters, were supplied to users including the farming industry and keepers of pets in the UK during 1996.

We are very concerned to ensure that human health is not compromised by the use of antibiotics in livestock production. To that end we have supported a proposal by the European Commission to suspend the use of four antibiotic growth promoters that are related to antibiotics used in human medicine.

Scotland Act 1998 (Schedule 5)

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the offices or agencies under his control which will be subject to L.2 of Head L in

Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998; how many people are currently employed in these offices; and what equal opportunities practices are adopted in these offices. [63795]

Mr. Morley: As regards cross-border authorities, a list of these cannot be specified until appropriate subordinate legislation is made under the Act.

The State Veterinary Service (SVS) of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has 15 offices in Scotland and employs 81 veterinary and animal health staff. These staff are covered by the Ministry's policy of equality of opportunity for all staff. The Ministry's network of Equal Opportunities Officers includes two Equal Opportunities Officers with Responsibility for matters arising for SVS staff in these grades.

The Veterinary Laboratory Agency employs 26 staff at its Lasswade Laboratory. These staff are covered by the Agency's equal opportunities policy which has been developed within the framework of the Ministry's overall policy. There is an Agency Equal Opportunities Officer with responsibility for matters arising for these staff.

Recruitment Procedures

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received on the recruitment procedure for staff of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [63045]

Mr. Morley: None.

Correspondence

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the exact number of letters he received from Labour hon. Members on problems facing the United Kingdom agricultural industry in the three months prior to 11 November. [61659]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 7 December 1998]: In the period 12 August to 11 November inclusive, MAFF Ministers received 1,894 letters from hon. Members. Many letters dealt with multiple subjects. To verify the exact number of letter from Labour hon. Members that raised problems facing the UK agricultural industry would require each one to be checked individually; the information could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Plaskitt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the total payments were by county in 1996 and 1997 under (i) the arable area payments, (ii) the suckler cow premium and (iii) the sheep annual premium schemes of the CAP; and in each case what the average farm payment was in each county. [62885]

Mr. Rooker: The following tables give the information requested. Payments are attributed to the country of the claimant's main holding. These figures represent payments by MAFF, in England, in respect of 1996 and 1997 claims—not the payments which were made in those years. For 1996 arable area payments, the figures update those previously published. These were given in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Sherwood (Mr. Tipping) on 30 July 1997, Official Report, columns 327–30.

Turkeys

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has in respect of the sale of uneviscerated turkeys. [62924]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 10 December 1998]: Farm fresh turkeys give consumers a choice and the Government would like to see traditional production of this product continue.

The Ministry will be issuing for public consultation a consultation document recommending that small off-farm poultry meat slaughterhouses should no longer be exempt from licensing. These proposals will not affect the exemption for small-scale on-farm production of traditional farm fresh turkeys.

Pesticides

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer about a possible tax on pesticides; and if he will make a statement. [63452]

Mr. Rooker: My right hon. Friend the Minister has made no representations to the Chancellor of the Exchequer on this matter.

Research Programmes (Wales)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list (a) the research programmes and (b) the activities undertaken in Wales and funded by his Department, and the total estimated annual expenditure on each in 1998–99; and what proportion of this funding will be transferred to the National Assembly for Wales when it has been established. [63480]

Mr. Rooker: Decisions on the placing of research contracts are based on the scientific quality and value for money of research proposals and not on the geographical location of contractors. The Ministry expects to pay some £125 million for research in 1998–99, spread between contractors throughout the UK. Some £7.8 million of this sum will be paid to Welsh contractors, but Wales will benefit from all relevant research regardless of where it is carried out. Post-devolution, it is intended that the Ministry will retain responsibility for the budget for R&D carried out in England and Wales. The National Assembly for Wales will be consulted about priorities for R&D and these will be reflected in the programme of work commissioned.

SCOTLAND

Skye Bridge

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the (a) draft Toll Order for the Skye Bridge and (b) draft Assignation Statement were placed in the Library in 1991; and if he will make a statement. [63320]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 10 December 1998]: A draft of the Order and the Assignation Statement were not placed in the Library. The Order was not subject to parliamentary procedure but the proposal to make the Order was advertised and a draft of the Order was available for inspection in accordance with the required procedures under the Roads (Scotland) Act 1984. There was no draft Statement. The procedures in the 1984 Act require the Assignation Statement itself to be made available for inspection with the draft Order and this was done.

Local Authority Capital Receipts

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what powers the devolved Scottish Parliament will have to alter the rules governing the amount of capital receipts from right to buy which local authorities must use to repay their capital debt. [63323]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 10 December 1998]: These arrangements were applied as a condition of the consent to local authorities to incur capital expenditure under section 94 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973 and it would be open to the Scottish Executive to alter those conditions.

Coalmining Communities

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress he has made in allocating resources to help with the regeneration of Scotland's former coalmining communities. [64628]

Mr. Macdonald: Scotland's former coalmining communities will benefit from a share of the £10 million being made available in recognition of miners' pension fund surpluses. In addition, we are making £1 million available to help these communities. I will be announcing details about how we will be targeting the funding for these communities, following consultation with Scottish Enterprise, the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities and the Scottish Region of the Coalfield Communities Campaign. We will ensure that it is deployed to complement the range of initiatives already underway, including the new Social Inclusion Partnerships, which will be supported by £48 million over the next 3 years, for which former coalfield areas are eligible.

Procurators Fiscal

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the suitability of procurators fiscal with qualifications as solicitor-advocate (a) to be advocate deputes and (b) to prosecute in the High Court. [62670]

Mr. McLeish: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate is responsible for the appointment of Advocate Deputes. My noble and learned Friend is satisfied about the competence of many Procurators Fiscal, including some with qualifications as Solicitor-Advocate, to undertake the work carried out by Advocate Deputes, including prosecuting in the High Court. However, he takes the view that it is necessary for the proper operation of the prosecution system in Scotland to maintain the traditional separation between the role of the Procurator Fiscal and that of Crown Counsel, to ensure independence of decision making and prosecution in respect of High Court cases. He is not, therefore, inclined to appoint Procurators Fiscal as Advocate Deputes.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the relative costs of using (a) members of the Faculty of Advocates and (b) procurators fiscal qualified as solicitor-advocates, as advocate deputes. [62671]

Mr. McLeish: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate has responsibility for prosecutions in Scotland. The post of Advocate Depute is assessed for remuneration purposes at rates comparable with the Senior Civil Service, on which individual pay is based regardless of whether the incumbent is a member of the Faculty of Advocates or a Procurator Fiscal. There is therefore no significant difference in their relative costs.

RSA Priority Initiative

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the companies which to date have been offered additional grant if they employ residents of assisted areas under the RSA Priority Initiative launched on 22 May. [63908]

Mr. Dewar: Under the pilot "RSA Priority" initiative, launched on 22 May 1998 in five particularly deprived areas of Scotland, nine companies have to date been offered the opportunity to receive additional grant if they employ residents of the designated areas. Information regarding offers of Regional Selective Assistance to individual companies is generally regarded as commercially confidential, although details of offers of £75,000 or more are published in "Labour Market Trends" once the company has received its first payment.

Identity Cards

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the proposed identity card scheme for young people announced by Health and Home Department ministers will operate in Scotland. [63857]

Mr. Galbraith: The Government have no plans to introduce an identity card scheme for young people in Scotland, or in the rest of the United Kingdom. Ministers have, however, welcomed the various proof of age card schemes covering age-restricted products such as alcohol, tobacco and fireworks, and we have encouraged representatives from these industries to consider the feasibility of developing a multi-purpose proof of age card.

Water and Sewerage Charges

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which categories of properties, which are not owned or operated by recognised charities or other non-profit making bodies, benefit from relief on their water or sewerage rates; and what figures he has for the number of properties concerned and the amount of the relief afforded them. [63859]

Mr. Macdonald: Following the establishment of the three Scottish water authorities, relief from water and sewerage charges is no longer specified in statute, and is a matter for the authorities. Overall, it is estimated that the amount of relief is some £14 million per annum.

The exact information requested is, therefore, not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Local Authority Ward Boundaries

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his timetable is for making further orders to give effect to local authority ward boundary changes following the recommendations of the Local Government Boundary Commission for Scotland. [64035]

Mr. McLeish: It is the intention to have orders made in respect of all local authority areas (apart from Orkney and Shetlands) by 31 December 1998. As a consequence of the Petitions for Judicial Review submitted by Orkney and Shetlands Island Councils, we will delay making an order in respect of these 2 areas until 15 January 1999, the latest practicable date if the new arrangements are to take effect for the elections due in May 1999. No order will be made, however, if the Court gives an indication before that date that a decree of reduction is to be granted in respect of the relevant Petition.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in respect of which local authority areas in Scotland he has made orders to give effect to ward boundary changes following the recommendations of the Local Government Boundary Commission for Scotland. [64034]

Mr. McLeish: To date, orders have been made in respect of the following 16 local authority areas:

Aberdeen City
Angus
City of Edinburgh
Clackmannanshire
Dumfries and Galloway
Dundee City
East Lothian
East Renfrewshire
Glasgow City
Inverclyde
Midlothian
North Ayrshire
Perth and Kinross
Scottish Borders
West Dunbartonshire
West Lothian.

Incapable Adults Report

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on the Scottish Law Commission's Incapable Adults report (Scots Law Com. No. 151). [64388]

Mr. McLeish: The subject of decision-making on behalf of adults who are unable to manage their own affairs is an important one. The Government have been made fully aware of the issues through the report by the Scottish Law Commission in 1995 and subsequent public consultation, which attracted a substantial and carefully considered response. We accept the need for reform of the existing legislation in this important area of the law that provides support and protection for some of the most vulnerable people in society.

It will be within the competence of the Scottish Parliament to legislate in this area and this statement cannot pre-empt announcements about the Scottish Parliament's legislative programme. It excludes consideration of the SLC's recommendations about medical treatment and research and advance statements. These are sensitive issues and we received many responses on them in the consultation exercise. We have not made any decisions on these matters yet; and we shall also want to consider what emerges from the Lord Chancellor's recent consultation exercise on similar proposals for England and Wales.

We agree with the general principles proposed by the SLC that any intervention should produce a benefit for the adult; be least restrictive of the adult's freedom; wherever possible encourage the adult to use existing skills and acquire new skills, and take account of the present and past wishes of the adult.

In relation to particular aspects of the Report we agree with the SLC on the following:

The proposed definition of mental incapacity;

The current office of the Accountant of Court should be expanded to form a new office of Public Guardian;

The function of the Public Guardian should be to maintain public registers of all those authorised to take decisions on behalf of an incapable adult and to supervise and monitor the performance of financial guardians;

The recognition of continuing and welfare powers of attorney and the introduction of public scrutiny of the exercise of such powers;

The creation of a new concept of guardianship to provide for a broad and flexible system of one-off intervention orders and longer term guardianship, with appropriate welfare or financial powers as ordered by the court; and

That key decisions on applications, and in other proceedings under the proposed legislation, should be dealt with in the sheriff courts.

There are a small number of areas where we propose to vary the SLC's recommendations.

We propose to modify the SLC scheme for carers in domestic settings to have access to funds from the bank accounts of incapable adults, in order to meet daily living expenses. Under the revised scheme, the Public Guardian would grant authority to have stipulated payments made for a time limited period from the incapable adult's account to a designated account. The Public Guardian would have powers to check that the incapable adult's funds were being applied for the intended purpose.

We propose to modify the SLC recommendations that residential homes should apply to the Public Guardian for authority to manage residents' finances. Under the revised proposals, registration and inspection authorities in local authorities and Health Boards would authorise the managers of residential establishments to manage the funds of residents who are incapable of so doing, up to prescribed limits, and in circumstances where no other arrangements would be appropriate for managing the finances of these residents.

We do not propose to follow the SLC recommendation that the Public Guardian should be able to be appointed as financial guardian to an incapable adult. We take the view, however, that the arrangements recommended for withdrawals from bank accounts and for intervention orders, and also for management of finances by residential establishments, should be sufficient to meet the needs of incapable adults with modest estates. The Public Guardian's functions will be focused on maintaining public registers of guardians and monitoring and supervising guardians with financial powers. Local authorities and the Mental Welfare Commission will monitor those exercising welfare powers on behalf of incapable adults.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Millennium Celebrations

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to amend liquor licensing arrangements in respect of New Year's Eve celebrations for the Millennium, covering opening hours for 31 December 1999 and 1 January 2000; and if she will make a statement. [63277]

Mr. McFall: It is my intention to issue a consultation paper on 17 December seeking comments on a proposed relaxation of permitted hours for licensed premises and registered clubs in Northern Ireland at the Millennium Holiday and each subsequent New Year's Eve.

Countryside

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps she is taking to increase access to the open countryside in Northern Ireland. [63785]

Mr. Paul Murphy: It is proposed to issue a consultation paper on providing access to the countryside early in 1999.

World Heritage Sites

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the organisations in Northern Ireland involved in reviewing world heritage site nominations as a result of the Government's recent consultation. [64398]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Environment and Heritage Service under its chief executive, Mr. Robert C. Martin. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert C. Martin to Mr. Cynog Dafis, dated 16 December 1998:

As Chief Executive of the Environment and Heritage Service, I am responsible for operational aspects of protection of the built heritage on behalf of the Department of the Environment in Northern Ireland. I am responding to the Parliamentary Question which you put down on 17 December 1998 about the organisations involved in the review heritage site nominations.

In Northern Ireland, Environment and Heritage Service (EHS), in liaison with the Department of Culture Media and Sport (DCMS), reviews world heritage site nominations on behalf of Government. Specifically, EHS has attended a specialist working group convened by English Heritage on behalf of DCMS to advise on the compiling of a new UK tentative list. The Service consults the Department's statutory advisory councils, the Historic Monuments Council, the Historic Buildings Council and the Council for Nature Conservation and the Countryside about proposed nominations.

I trust you will find this helpful.

Export Surveys

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what categories of data are used in gathering information concerning export surveys from Northern Ireland; how the data are collected; and what part the NIERC plays in the gathering of such information. [63962]

Mr. Ingram: Export data for the UK as a whole are gathered by HM Customs and Excise. However, due to the limitations of this data at regional level, the Department of Economic Development and the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland jointly commission the Northern Ireland Economic Research Centre (NIERC) to undertake a bespoke annual survey of Northern Ireland sales and exports. NIERC designs the survey questionnaire, collects and analyses the data and assists with the preparation of the survey report for publication.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons the analysis of export behaviour by size of firm was discontinued after the first export survey of 1990; and if she will carry out a retrospective analysis of export data for the period 1990–97. [63964]

Mr. Ingram: A detailed academic report was produced on the first export survey published in 1992 (in respect of 1990 data). Subsequent export survey reports have been produced within a tighter timetable with the objective of giving a snapshot of key export information. Additional information is available on request including the retrospective analysis referred to in the question.

Inward Investment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to what extent the outflow of the profits of externally owned manufacturing companies is taken into account when evaluating the size of grants and subsidies to be given to companies to encourage them to locate in Northern Ireland. [63975]

Mr. Ingram: The potential outflow of profits from externally owned companies seeking to establish manufacturing operations in Northern Ireland is fully evaluated in assessing the amount of grant that can be made available.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the studies carried out by DED of Northern Ireland's competitive advantages in attracting inward investment; and if she will place copies in the Library. [63963]

Mr. Ingram: The Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland (IDB) the arm of DED responsible for inward investment, examines among other issues Northern Ireland's performance in the inward investment market relative to competitors. IDB has not directly purchased or commissioned any study into Northern Ireland's competitive advantage in attracting inward investment. However, a report prepared by Price Waterhouse Coopers in 1996 into Northern Ireland's investment performance compared with the UK and Republic of Ireland makes comment on Northern Ireland's competitive advantages. For copyright and commercial confidentiality reasons this report cannot be placed in the public domain by IDB.

Census of Production

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how long the period is between completion of the collection of Northern Ireland Annual Census of Production data and their publication by the National Statistics Office in its annual Business Monitor. [63966]

Mr. Ingram: The Office for National Statistics publishes regional estimates of industrial production in the Annual Business Monitor approximately twelve months after the completion of data collection.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if data collected in Northern Ireland for the Annual Census of Production are available on a sub-regional basis. [63968]

Mr. Ingram: The Department of Economic Development does not have any results from the Annual Census of Production (now referred to as the Annual Business Inquiry) below NI level. However, the Office for National Statistics is refining the methodology for providing ABI sub-regional estimates with the intention of publishing these from the 1999 inquiry onwards.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the parties which have access to Annual Census of Production data on a confidential basis before the data are published by the National Statistics Office; and on what criteria such organisations are chosen. [63967]

Mr. Ingram: The Northern Ireland Economic Research Centre, commissioned by the Department of Economic Development to undertake the annual Survey of Sales and Exports, has confidential access to Census of Production data prior to publication. The Centre is the only organisation with access to such information which is given under legal direction (as authorised by Article 7 of the Statistics of Trade and Employment (Northern Ireland) Order 1988).

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will introduce local publication of the Annual Census of Production in Northern Ireland, following the establishment of the Northern Ireland Assembly; and what were the reasons for the discontinuation of local publication. [63965]

Mr. Ingram: I have no plans to reintroduce this publication which was suspended, due to lack of demand, following release of the 1985 results. Current data is available from the Office for National Statistics Business Monitor series. Future arrangements will be for consideration by the NI Assembly.

Economic Policies (Inquiries)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will publish for each year since 1990 the number of contracts entered into by her Department and Northern Ireland Government departments and agencies with outside agencies and consultancy firms for the investigation of economic policy matters, indicating the subject matter of each inquiry and the date the report was (a) completed and (b) published, the name of the consultancy firm or outside agency involved and the cost of each contract; and how many contracts in each year went out to tender. [63978]

Mr. Ingram: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

Regional Accounts

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what estimate she has made of the effect on data for Northern Ireland GDP of manufacturing company profit outflows; and what estimate she has made of the size of such outflows; [63973]

(2) what plans she has to provide provisional estimates of the main macro-sectoral aggregates in the intervals between the publication of regional accounts in order to facilitate planning by the public and private sector; [63976]

(3) if she will list the parties which have access to the data for Northern Ireland Regional Accounts on a confidential basis, before the data are published in Regional Trends; and on what criteria such parties are chosen; [63970]

(4) what plans she has to reformulate the Northern Ireland regional account in line with EUROSTAT standards; [63971]

(5) which Northern Ireland departments are responsible for the preparation of the Northern Ireland Regional Accounts; and what is the length of the period between the collection and completion of such accounts and their eventual publication by the National Statistics Office in Regional Trends. [63969]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency under its chief executive, Mr. E. F. Jardine. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. F. Jardine to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 15 December 1998:

I am replying to your questions to the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland about regional accounts as this matter falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency.

Answers to the five questions you tabled are given in the Annex to this letter.

Several of your questions mention the Regional Trends publication. Normally, the Office for National Statistics first publish the regional accounts in their monthly Economic Trends journal and in a news release. The information is then included in Regional Trends which is an annual publication.

If I can be of further assistance please do not hesitate to contact me.

Question:

To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what estimate she has made of the effect on data for Northern Ireland GDP of manufacturing company profit outflows; and what estimate she has made of the size of such outflows.

Reply:

Gross Domestic Product is concerned with the physical location of economic activity and therefore its calculation is unaffected by profit outflows. No estimation has been made of the size of such outflows.

Question:

To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what plans she has to provide provisional estimates of the main macro-sectoral aggregates in the intervals between the publication of regional accounts in order to facilitate planning by the public and private sector.

Reply:

The Office for National Statistics, who compile the annual United Kingdom regional accounts, have no plans to provide interim figures.

Question:

To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, if she will list the parties which have access to the data for Northern Ireland Regional Accounts on a confidential basis, before the data is published in Regional Trends; and on what criteria such parties are chosen.

Reply:

Regional accounts data are made available to all users at the same time by the Office for National Statistics, with limited exceptions on a strict need-to-know basis. These are: (1) government statisticians involved in the production and quality assurance of the estimates; and (2) Ministers and senior officials who are provided with copies of the articles containing the figures, no more than two days before publication in Economic Trends.

Question:

To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to reformulate the Northern Ireland regional account in line with EUROSTAT standards.

Reply:

From January 1999, the Office for National Statistics intend to publish the United Kingdom regional accounts, including those for Northern Ireland, on the new European System of Accounts (1995) basis.

Question:

To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which Northern Ireland departments are responsible for the preparation of the Northern Ireland Regional Accounts; and what is the length of period between the collection and completion of such accounts and their eventual publication by the National Statistics Office in Regional Trends.

Reply:

The United Kingdom regional accounts are prepared and published centrally by the Office for National Statistics. The Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency, which is an agency within the Department of Finance and Personnel, assists in the quality assurance assessment of the Northern Ireland portion of the accounts before they are published by the Office for National Statistics. There is no delay between the completion of the accounts and their publication in Economic Trends.

Economic Forecasts

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to publish short-term and medium-term forecasts of the Northern Ireland economy to assist the private sector in its economic and forward investment planning. [63977]

Mr. Paul Murphy: There are no plans to publish Government forecasts for the Northern Ireland economy. However, the Northern Ireland Economic Research Centre—an independent research body—regularly publishes short-term and medium-term forecasts for the local economy. The Centre's most recent set of forecasts was published at the beginning of December 1998.

Profit Outflows

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what studies her Department has undertaken of the economic consequences of profit outflows for the economy of Northern Ireland. [63974]

Mr. Ingram: No studies have been undertaken by Government of the economic consequences of profit outflows for the economy of Northern Ireland.

DEFENCE

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the journeys taken by members of the Cabinet in VC10s of the RAF fleet since 1 May 1997 indicating in each case (a) the name of the Minister, (b) the numbers of accompanying people, (c) the date, (d) their destinations, (e) the costs of the flight and (f) the identification number of VC10s involved. [62053]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 2 December 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 19 November 1998, Official Report, column 711.

Gulf War Veterans

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the document relating to Gulf War illness and depleted uranium leaked to Gulf War veterans; and if he will make a statement. [63046]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Two unclassified documents, both containing references to depleted uranium (DU), are known to have been removed without authorisation from the MOD's Medical Assessment Programme (MAP) last month and have since received some publicity. The investigation into their removal is now a matter for the Ministry of Defence Police. In view of the considerable public concern raised by misinformed media reporting of the contents of these two documents, I am today formally releasing both of them and placing copies in the Library of the House.

In addition, I have asked my Department to collate the information which it possesses concerning mechanisms which could be used to test for the presence of uranium in the human body. I will publish this work shortly. Contrary to some media reports, which were based on a misreading of these two documents, the MOD is not conducting testing in relation to the possible exposure of Gulf veterans to DU, secret or otherwise. However, as might be expected, we continue to consider all aspects of Gulf veterans' illnesses, including any developments concerning the various suggested relevant exposures, where DU is one issue among many.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to test Gulf War veterans for the effects of depleted uranium. [63036]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 8 December 1998]: Any Gulf veteran who is concerned that his or her health has been adversely affected by Service during the Gulf conflict, including possible exposure to depleted uranium (DU), is advised to seek a referral to the Ministry of Defence's Medical Assessment Programme (MAP) for a full medical assessment. During this assessment, MAP patients are asked by the examining MAP physician to provide detailed information about possible factors, including DU, to which they may have been exposed during the Gulf conflict.

The kidneys are the organs most likely to be affected by the presence of uranium and the standard battery of tests carried out as a matter of routine on MAP patients includes a baseline trawl of renal function, which in turn includes serum creatinine, urea and electrolytes, a urine test for protein and blood and an ultrasound abdominal scan. Such tests should indicate the presence of any kidney damage in patients, although such damage would not necessarily have been caused by the presence of DU. The standard MAP tests do not, however, currently include a specific test to detect the presence of DU. The veterans who have so far been examined by MAP physicians have not exhibited symptoms which, in the clinical judgment of the examining physician, have indicated a requirement for a specific referral to another agency or organisation for DU testing. If the examining physician at the MAP considered it clinically appropriate for a patient to be tested for the presence of uranium, the necessary arrangements would be made.

I have asked my Department to collate the information which it possesses concerning mechanisms which could be used to test for the presence of uranium in the human body. I will publish this work shortly. The MOD is well aware that a link has been suggested between possible exposure to DU and the illnesses being experienced by some Gulf veterans. However, this is only one of a number of factors which have been suggested as causes of Gulf veterans' illnesses and, pending further medical and scientific evidence, my Department is keeping an open mind on this issue.

Our plans for future activity in relation to Gulf veterans' illnesses, including as regards DU, will continue to be guided by the emerging medical and scientific evidence on this subject.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research he is undertaking on a relationship between Gulf War Syndrome and depleted uranium. [63064]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Ministry of Defence is conducting a range of research into aspects of Gulf veterans' illnesses. However, none of these programmes is specifically aimed at investigating the relationship between possible exposure to depleted uranium (DU) and the illnesses being experienced by some Gulf veterans. The MOD is well aware that a link has been suggested between DU exposure and Gulf veterans' illnesses. However, this is only one of a number of factors which have been suggested as causes of Gulf veterans' illnesses and, pending further medical and scientific evidence, my Department is keeping an open mind on this issue. My Department would, of course, be very interested to see any new relevant information on this subject.

Any Gulf veteran who is concerned that his or her health has been adversely affected by Service during the Gulf conflict, including possible exposure to depleted uranium (DU), is entitled to seek a referral to the Gulf veterans' Medical Assessment Programme (MAP) for a full medical assessment.

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of the Medical Assessment Programme documents (reference MAP/102/22/1/Med pt 1) (a) DU Teleconference-Lt Col Graham, (b) DU Testing Protocol-Alan Casson, (c) Prime for 51 G EDTA-Dr R. Gabriel, (d) DU Information Pack-Alan Casson, (e) DU Testing of United Kingdom Gulf Veterans-Alan Casson, (f) Update-4 Sep 96-Lt Col Graham; what assessment the Medical Assessment Programme has made of the possible link between Gulf War Syndrome and depleted uranium poisoning; and if he will make a statement. [63306]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 10 December 1998]: The Ministry of Defence has already received a request from a member of the public for copies of the documents designated (a) to (e) in the hon. Member's question. This is currently being considered under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. When this consideration, which has now been extended to include document (f) in the hon. Member's question, is complete, I will write to the hon. Member to advise him of the outcome.

The MOD is well aware that a link has been suggested between possible exposure to depleted uranium (DU) and the illnesses being experienced by some Gulf veterans. However, this is only one of a number of factors which have been suggested as possible causes of Gulf veterans' illnesses and, pending further medical and scientific evidence, my Department is keeping an open mind on this issue. We would, of course, be very interested to see any new relevant information on this subject.

Territorial Army

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many officer vacancies exist in TA centres in North Wales; what proportion this represents of total officer positions in North Wales; and what is the shortfall of officers in each TA centre in North Wales. [63653]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: There are 49 established officer posts in TA centres in North Wales, of which currently 7 are not filled. TA Officer posts not filled in each TA Centre in North Wales are:

Hightown Wrexham: 3

Colwyn Bay: 1

Queensferry: 1

Bangor: 1

Prestatyn: 1.

REME (Chorley)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the costs of the extension and conversion of the existing premises at Queensferry Barracks to accommodate 101 Battalion REME after its transfer from Chorley. [63624]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: Work into the exact cost of adapting the TA Centre at Queensferry to accommodate the Headquarters of 101 Battalion the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers is currently underway.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations his Department has received in favour of retaining 101 Battalion REME and Cadet Force at Devonshire Road Barracks, Chorley. [63620]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: My Department has received representations in favour of retaining 101 Battalion REME and Cadet Force at Devonshire Road Barracks, Chorley, from my hon. Friend the Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle), the North West Parliamentary Labour Group, Chorley Borough Council, Adlington Borough Council, Whittle-le-Woods Parish Council and one individual who works at the TA Centre.

Plastic Baton Rounds (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons plastic baton rounds replaced rubber bullets for use by the armed forces in Northern Ireland. [63931]

Mr. Spellar: Plastic baton rounds provide a more effective means of combating physical violence than the rubber bullets they replaced. The increased accuracy of plastic baton rounds also reduces the risk of accidental injury.

EU Defence Expenditure

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent by each nation in the EU in each of the last 10 years in pounds sterling on defence (a) in total and (b) per head of the population. [64195]

Mr. Spellar: The information requested for calendar years 1987 to 1997 is shown for NATO members of the European Union. Comparisons of defence spending between nations are conventionally given in US Dollars rather than pounds sterling. Figures for calendar years 1987 to 1995 are those which have been published in successive versions of the Statement on the Defence Estimates (SDE). Figures for 1996 are based on information drawn from NATO sources and those for 1997 are as published in the MOD Performance Report 1997–98 (Cm4170).

Where possible the figures are published against a common definition of defence spending so that true comparisons can be made. Some anomalies and inconsistencies will, however, remain. Particular care is needed in making year on year comparisons of the figures for the UK where there have been changes in the definition of defence spending in recent years and major transfers of responsibility to and from other Government Departments.

Army Training and Recruitment Agency

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the key targets for 1998–99 for the Chief Executive of the Army Training and Recruitment Agency. [64627]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Chief Executive of the Army Training and Recruiting Agency has been set the following Key Target for 1998–1999.

1. To meet the Adjutant General's requirement for commissioned officers.
2. To meet the Adjutant General's requirement for officers qualified for service in Field Force units following successful Special to Army training.
3. To meet the Adjutant General's requirement for officers' professional development training.
4. To meet the Adjutant General's requirement for soldiers qualified for service in a Field Force unit following successful Special to Arm training.
5. To meet the Adjutant General's requirement for soldiers' professional development training.
6. To achieve efficiency savings of 6% (34.7M).

Army Personnel Centre

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the key targets for 1998–99 for the Chief Executive of the Army Personnel Centre. [64625]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Chief Executive of the Army Personnel Centre has been set the following Key Targets for 1998–1999:

1. To increase the percentage of posts which are manned (excluding posts gapped for less than 28 days and all posts for private soldiers and subaltern officers) to 91 per cent.
2. To increase to 91 per cent. the proportion of personnel posted in-year by the APC whose rank and Service qualifications meet the specifications of the post.
3. To increase the percentage of in-year postings authorised by the APC where personnel are given at least 6 months notification to 52 per cent.
4. To increase the percentage of change requests received by the APC which are authorised and/or accurately processed within 5 working days of receipt at the Document Handling Centre to 92 per cent.
5. To increase the percentage of due terminal benefits made by the 5th working day after discharge/retirement or following receipt of the correct authorisation paperwork by Pensions Division, whichever is later, to 96 per cent.
6. To develop by March 99 the comprehensive feedback mechanism for the continual measurement of customer satisfaction and to maintain that system thereafter.
7. To achieve a year-on-year reduction of 1 per cent. in operating costs.

Defence Military Assistance Fund

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the breakdown of expenditure under the Defence Military Assistance Fund in each of the last three years. [63864]

Mr. George Robertson: The Defence Military Assistance Fund is a cash fund, which is available to subsidise the cost of overseas military assistance in support of the Defence Diplomacy and Support to Wider British Interests Missions. The latter mission includes support to defence sales. Assistance may include the provision of training (either in country or in the UK), advice (by either military or civilian personnel), Loan Service Personnel and Short Term Training Teams.

The table breaks down expenditure, by country, under the Defence Military Assistance Fund for each of the last three years. This breakdown covers centrally administered programmes only, and does not include military assistance activities funded by Top Level Budget Holders, since these costs cannot be identified separately. Nor does it cover costs borne by other Government Departments, which are a matter for the Departments concerned.

Defence Export Sales Organisation

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what role the Defence Export Sales Organisation has in co-ordinating defence sales promotions with the Defence Military Assistance Fund. [63862]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. and learned Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Defence Diplomacy Mission

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the budget is for the Defence Diplomacy Mission. [63863]

Mr. George Robertson: The Defence Diplomacy Mission is funded either by those Top Level Budget Holders responsible for specific activities or from the Defence Military Assistance Fund (DMAF). Figures on the former are not separately identified. The DMAF budget for 1998–99 is some £11 million, of which about £7 million is allocated to activities which now fall within the Defence Diplomacy Mission.

The increases we intend to make to the DMAF of around £5 million next year and up to £15 million in the two subsequent years, will also be used largely for Defence Diplomacy-related activities.

Bosnia

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what Christmas season entertainment he is arranging for the troops in Bosnia. [63909]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The principal Christmas entertainment provided for troops in Bosnia this year was a Combined Services Entertainment show which ran from 27 November to 4 December. It played at all major sites and all troops had the opportunity to see it. In addition to this, the British Forces Broadcasting Service will be broadcasting Christmas messages and conducting a radio link with families. There will also be a Christmas delivery of library books and the Service Sound and Vision Corporation are donating videos.

Units will also be arranging their own activities such as Christmas lunches and carol services. In addition, all troops will be given extra telephone time free of charge over the holiday period.

Services Personnel

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) men and (b) women are currently serving in the (i) Army, (ii) Royal Airforce and (iii) Royal Navy. [64391]

Mr. Spellar: The number of men and women serving in the UK Regular Armed Forces on 1 November 1998, were:

	Men	Women	Total
Naval Service	40,668	3,302	43,970
Army	102,174	7,673	109,847
Royal Air Force	50,351	5,073	55,424
Total	193,193	16,048	209,241

These figures do not include the 4,512 personnel serving in the Royal Irish Regiment (men 4,072, women 440), or the number of Gurkhas totalling 3,578.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what conclusions his Department has drawn from the consequences of the explosion at Bhopal as regards the results of bombing chemical and biological weapons facilities. [62662]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The accidental explosion at a chemical factory in Bhopal, India in 1984 provided a large amount of information on the dangers in the storage of very large quantities of toxic chemicals, and on the possible consequences of the destruction, by accident or otherwise, of such storage facilities.

We advise caution, however, before this information is directly applied to other scenarios. In particular, we do not consider the information on Bhopal forms a suitable basis from which to construct predictions of the consequences of bombing of chemical or biological weapons facilities.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the likely target accuracy in possible bombing campaigns in Iraq. [62656]

Mr. George Robertson: I am not prepared to discuss detailed operational issues under exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. However, I can say that only precision guided weaponry would be used.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are to ensure the safety of those with diplomatic status in Baghdad in the event of a bombing campaign. [62657]

Mr. George Robertson: I am not prepared to discuss detailed operational issues under exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. I can say, however, that all relevant factors are taken into account in selecting targets.

PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Visits

12. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to make an official visit to East Anglia. [62734]

The Prime Minister: I have no immediate plans to do so, but I hope to be able to pay a visit in the future.

14. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Prime Minister when he next intends to pay an official visit to the Congleton constituency. [62736]

The Prime Minister: I have no immediate plans to do so.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Wednesday 16 December. [63664]

The Prime Minister: This morning I attended a meeting of the Parliamentary Labour Party and had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I will have further such meetings later today.

Homosexual Age of Consent

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Prime Minister how many letters he has received since 2 May 1997 (a) in favour of and (b) opposed to lowering the age of consent for homosexual acts to 16 years; and how many replies have been sent in a standard form. [64278]

The Prime Minister: Since 2 May 1997 I have received over 3,500 letters on this subject, the large majority of which were opposed to lowering the age of consent for homosexual acts to 16 years. All would have been acknowledged by No. 10 and almost all would have received a reply from the relevant Department which made clear the Government's position on this matter.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the political consequences in Iraq of removing Saddam Hussein from power, with particular reference to possible fragmentation. [62658]

The Prime Minister: I am aware of my hon. Friend's concerns about the possibility of fragmentation if the Iraqi regime should fall.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the likely impact of a bombing campaign in Iraq on the strength of Saddam Hussein's support in (a) Iraq, (b) the rest of the Arab world and (c) the rest of the Islamic world. [62659]

The Prime Minister: I am not prepared to speculate about the possibility of military action or its possible consequences. The statement on 12 November by the Damascus Declaration countries made clear that the Arab world holds Saddam Hussein responsible for the consequences of his actions and the Gulf Co-operation Council summit earlier this month reinforced the message that the Government of Iraq were responsible for the suffering of the Iraqi people. The Iraqi people would no doubt express similar views, if they were allowed to do so.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the reasons for the length of time so far taken by UNSCOM to fulfil its mission. [62663]

The Prime Minister: UNSCOM is mandated under United Nations Security Council Resolution 687 to ensure that Iraq gives up its weapons of mass destruction (WMD). With full co-operation from Iraq, UNSCOM's work could have been completed very quickly. Instead, Iraq has chosen to attempt to retain its WMD capability at all costs. Its behaviour towards UNSCOM has been marked by persistent duplicity, evasion and confrontation.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the current officials of UNSCOM, indicating their (a) nationality, (b) salaries and (c) dates of appointment. [62664]

The Prime Minister: We do not keep this information. This is a matter for UNSCOM.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what steps the Government will take to ensure that documents requested by UNSCOM exist before using the Iraqi Government's refusal to provide them as the reason for a military attack. [62665]

The Prime Minister: I am satisfied that UNSCOM would not have requested these documents without good grounds to believe they existed. I will not speculate on when and if military action will be necessary. I have made clear that I am watching Iraq's behaviour closely against a range of criteria. Iraq's response to UNSCOM's requested for documents is not a good start.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the observations by Mr. Denis Halliday, the UN's former humanitarian co-ordinator, in Middle East International on 13 November, concerning the deaths of children as a result of the UN sanctions against Iraq. [62668]

The Prime Minister: Like Mr. Halliday, we deeply regret the suffering of the Iraqi people and we agree with him that it is unfortunate that the UN has been obliged to sustain a sanctions regime against Iraq for so long. But we reject claims that the Iraqi people are suffering because of sanctions.

The international community has done all it can to protect the Iraqi people from the effects of sanctions. It is the Iraqi Government, by consistently seeking to thwart these efforts in an attempt to bring pressure for sanctions to be lifted before it has complied with its obligations, who bear responsibility for the suffering of the Iraqi people. The latest report by the UN Special Rapporteur Mr. Max van der Stoel into the human rights situation in Iraq also holds Iraq primarily responsible for the precarious food and health situation in Iraq.

Council of Europe and WEU

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library the latest Information Bulletin on the activities of the United Kingdom delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe and the Assembly of Western European Union covering the period May to September. [64281]

The Prime Minister: I have done so today.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Shipping Policy Paper

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to publish his shipping policy paper. [64267]

Mr. Prescott: I have today published the Government's shipping policy paper "British Shipping: Charting a new course" and I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Library of both Houses.

The policy document sets out a long-term, integrated strategy for British shipping in partnership between Government and the shipping industry, including the trade unions. Drawing on the report of the Shipping Working Group which I set up late last year, the paper sets out 33 inter-related actions designed to develop the UK's maritime skills; secure British seafaring employment; enhance the UK's attractiveness to shipping enterprises; and gain safety and environmental benefits.

Speed Reduction Measures

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to encourage the introduction of speed reduction measures on UK roads. [62934]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department has recently started a review of speed policy taking account of its effects on safety, the environment, the economy, and the quality of life.

The Department already issues advice to local highway authorities on the type of speed reducing measures that are available to them and best practice on their use. We shall also shortly be introducing legislation freeing authorities from the requirement to seek central Government consent to make 20 mph speed limits; advice about introducing such limits will stress the need to ensure the required reduction in traffic speed is achieved by making the limits self enforcing through the use of speed reducing features where necessary.

Officials from the relevant Departments are discussing detailed methods for funding the operation of speed cameras from fine income.

Northern Line

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about the delay in providing new trains on the London Underground Northern Line and what is the expected date when the trains will be operational; and if he will list the financial penalties imposed for the late delivery of the trains. [63402]

Ms Glenda Jackson: London Underground and ALSTOM are working together to introduce the new Northern Line trains as quickly as possible. The first of the new trains entered passenger service on 12 June 1998 and London Underground expect that a full Northern Line service will be provided with new trains by early Autumn 1999.

Under the terms of the contract, ALSTOM is liable to pay liquidated damages to London Underground in respect of delays in the delivery of the new trains. The amount is commercially confidential.

Young People (Housing)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assistance his Department gives to local authorities to enable them to help children between the ages of 16 and 18 years to enter into tenancies for homes of their own; and what guidance it gives local authorities on this subject. [63468]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department does not provide any specific assistance to local housing authorities to enable them to allocate tenancies in self-contained accommodation to 16 to 18-year-olds.

The Housing Act 1996 requires authorities to allocate social housing on the basis of housing need. A person aged 16 to 18 with dependent children would have to be given priority under an authority's allocation scheme. However, it is the practice of many local authorities to include under 18-year-olds on their housing registers only if the social services authority supports the application or if an adult is prepared to act as a guarantor for any tenancy allocated to the young person. 16 to 18 year olds who are unintentionally homeless and considered vulnerable for the purpose of the homelessness legislation are also required to be given priority under an allocation scheme. My Department's Code of Guidance on the Allocation of Housing and Homelessness, which is currently being revised, provides general guidance to authorities on these matters.

Electric Cars

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 8 December 1998, Official Report, column 118, on the Energy Savings Trust, what was the value of the grants awarded for the purchase or conversion of electric vehicles. [64142]

Mr. Meale: The Energy Saving Trust has provided grants totalling £501,500 for the purchase or conversion of electric vehicles.

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many grants, and of what value, have been awarded as part of the Powershift programme to overseas-based companies for the conversion of vehicles to run on electricity. [64005]

Mr. Meale: No grants have been provided to companies not registered in the UK for the purchase or conversion of vehicles to run on electricity. One grant of £120,000 was made available to a company registered outside the UK for the purchase of 6 electric buses for use in a demonstration project in Merseyside.

Valuation Tribunals

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many staff were employed by valuation tribunals in England on (a) 1 May 1997, (b) 1 April 1998 and (c) 1 December 1998. [63691]

Mr. Raynsford: The number of full time equivalent staff employed by valuation tribunals in England on the dates were as follows:

1 May 1997: 242

1 April 1998: 225

1 December 1998: 211.

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many offices served valuation tribunals in England on (a) 1 May 1997, (b) 1 April 1998 and (c) 1 December 1998. [63692]

Mr. Raynsford: The number of offices serving valuation tribunals in England on the dates were as follows:

1 May 1997: 38

1 April 1998: 36

1 December 1998: 34.

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many (a) staff and (b) offices he expects to be required to serve valuation tribunals in England on (i) 1 April 1999 and (ii) 1 April 2000. [63690]

Mr. Raynsford: Staffing levels are primarily determined by the appeals workload. The staffing complement as at 1 April 1998, which has generally been retained for the financial year commencing 1 April 1999, is for 180 staff. Continuing reductions towards that level are dependent on local decisions by the valuation tribunals and their staff. The staffing complement from 1 April 2000 will need to take account of estimates of the number of appeals likely to arise from the non-domestic revaluation in that year.

The longer term aim is to move to a structure of 14 administrative units to serve valuation tribunals in England, with one or at most two offices per unit. Progress by the stated dates will depend on discussions with the individual valuation tribunals in each of the administrative units. We expect there to be at most 32 offices by 1 April 1999. It is impossible to be precise about the figure on 1 April 2000, because this will depend on progress locally, but it will probably number 30 or less.

London Government Headquarters

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions under what circumstances new or revised bids can be submitted for shortlisting for the headquarters of London government. [64085]

Mr. Raynsford: There has been a careful and open selection and short-listing process, which has reduced an initial 55 locations down to seven, and then to a short-list of two. I expect to announce a decision in the new year.

Jubilee Line Extension

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the latest estimated total cost for the construction of the Jubilee Line extension; and from what sources the funds will be derived. [63697]

Ms Glenda Jackson: London Transport review Jubilee Line Extension cost estimates regularly. The latest issued estimate of final cost was £2.85 billion (derived from a review in August). LT is currently undertaking a cost review, in the light of the rephased programme for line opening.

The majority of the project (some £2 billion) has been funded by ring-fenced Government grant. Private sector contributions have also been secured from the developers of Canary Wharf, and British Gas. The remainder is being funded from within LT's overall finances. It is the responsibility of LT to control costs on the project. JLE costs are taken into account by the Government in deciding on the level of overall funding for LT.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what has been the total expenditure and the breakdown of expenditure in his Department since May 1997 on (a) public opinion research, (b) television, radio and newspaper advertising and (c) direct mail. [63923]

Mr. Meale: The Department carries out public opinion research, television, radio and press advertising and direct mailings in support of publicity campaigns. The total expenditure since May 1997 is £10,630,000. The breakdown of that expenditure is as follows:

Project	Expenditure [1]
(a) Public opinion research on DETR campaigns	560,000
(b) Television advertising	6,500,000
Radio advertising	1,560,000

South West Regional Planning Conference

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what powers he has to override decisions made by the South West regional planning conference. [64147]

Mr. Caborn: Under the new arrangements for the preparation of regional planning guidance set out in the planning policy statement "Planning for the Communities of the Future" (Cmnd 3885), Regional Planning Conferences will have greater responsibility for determining the most sustainable way of meeting housing needs in their region. It is intended that this should be a more inclusive process, Conference will work together with the Government Office, the Regional Development Agency and other regional stakeholders to produce draft Regional Planning Guidance. Increased legitimacy and transparency of the Regional Planning Guidance will be achieved through new procedures for a public examination before an independent panel. The panel report will be taken into account by the Secretary of State in finalising the regional planning guidance.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance he has given the South West regional planning conference on the effect of the future household projections on each county in the region. [64146]

Mr. Caborn: As indicated in the policy statement, "Planning for the Communities of the Future" (Cmnd 3885) we need to provide enough housing to help meet the housing objective of offering everyone the opportunity of a decent home and so promote social cohesion, well-being and self-dependence. Achieving sustainable development means addressing economic, social and environmental objectives equally, both for present and future generations. The Government's objective is to provide sustainable solutions which will help ensure that new housing will, by its nature and location, enhance the quality of the environment. The household projections are the starting point for assessing housing requirements and local authorities will need to be realistic in the assumptions that they make about the number of households likely to form and how they should be accommodated.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance he has given the South West regional planning conference on how to meet the needs assumed by his projections for future household numbers. [64145]

Mr. Caborn: The Government's approach to offering everyone the opportunity of a decent home is set out in its response (Cmnd 4080) to the tenth report from the Environment, Transport and Regional Affairs Committee, Session 1997–98, on Housing and the policy statement "Planning for the Communities of the Future" (Cmnd 3885). In considering the broad distribution of housing within the region the South West Regional Planning Conference is also expected to have regard to the Government's policy for urban regeneration, transport and sustainable development and to the Regional Development Agency's regional economic strategy.

South-west Region (Projected Households)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received regarding his projections for the south-west region future household numbers. [64144]

Mr. Caborn: None. Work is currently underway on the 1996 based household projections, which will be issued next Spring.

South-west Development (Brown-field Land)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will allow local authorities in the south-west to postpone development plans until regional planning guidance is revised following the result of his survey of brown-field land. [64149]

Mr. Caborn: No. The importance for the plan-led system of keeping plans up to date was emphasised in the statement on Modernising planning, published on 15 January. Under the Town and Country Planning Act 1990, as amended, local planning authorities, in preparing their development plans, must have regard to any regional or strategic planning guidance issued by the Secretary of State, as well as to current national policies and other matters. Therefore, where development plans are being replaced or altered in the short term, they should continue to have regard to existing regional guidance, including, where specified, the housing provision figures.

South-west Region (Housing)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance he has given local authorities in the south-west region on sustainable means of meeting the housing needs of their community. [64148]

Mr. Caborn: The policy statement "Planning for the Communities of the Future" (Cmnd 3885) set out the Government's broad approach. The consultation document, "Opportunities for Change", issued in February set out four broad objectives on which the Government's vision of sustainable development is based and what needs to be done to put it into practice. Further guidance is set out in "Planning for Sustainable Development: Towards Better Practice", published by my Department in October.

Local Planning Authorities

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to assist local planning authorities in delivering more sustainable patterns of development. [64150]

Mr. Caborn: In October my Department issued a guide to local planning authorities entitled "Planning for Sustainable Development: Towards Better Practice". This document has been well-received as a source of practical ideas about how sustainability principles can be implemented on the ground.

My Department's series of Planning Policy Guidance notes (PPGs) advise local planning authorities on how they should draw up their plans to ensure more sustainable patterns of development. We intend to issue shortly a new draft PPG11 on regional planning guidance. This will advise the regional planning bodies that the promotion of sustainable development should be a central feature of RPG. Moreover, we will also shortly be issuing a full revision of PPG12 (Development Plans) for public consultation. This will include a section devoted to the relationship between the content of development plans, for which local planning authorities are responsible, and sustainable development.

Devon County Structure Plan

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what response he has made to the draft Devon County Structure Plan. [64152]

Mr. Caborn: We have carefully considered the proposed modifications to the Devon Structure Plan First Review which were published on 28 September and have made objections to a number of policies that appear to conflict with national guidance. A number of objections have been resolved and the extant objections relate to policies S6, C7, C12, C23, T14, H1, E8 and T12.

The objection to policy HI stated:

"There is no clear justification for a reduction in the overall provision for housing, below that recommended by the Panel. There appears to be no justification for reducing provision in anticipation of a reduction in vacancy rates, having regard to the Panel's findings. Taking account of the panels findings, there does not appear to be a sound basis for projecting a lower level of net in-migration and household formation and that contained in the DETR 1992 based household projections.

"From a regional perspective, the district distribution is in part consequential on the county provision. However, the reduced allocations for Plymouth and Exeter (compared to those recommended by the Panel) appear to conflict with national and regional objectives in PPG13 para 3.2 and RPG10 para 6.7 and 'Planning for the Communities of the Future' para 58".

Concessionary Fares (Pensioners)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will issue guidance to local authorities, transport authorities and public transport bodies pending the introduction of legislation to encourage greater consistency in concessionary fares schemes for pensioners. [63998]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We announced our intention to legislate for a statutory minimum concessionary fare scheme for pensioners in our White Paper "A New Deal for Transport", the minimum scheme will entail half fares, on purchase of a £5 annual bus pass. Meanwhile, decisions on concessionary fare schemes will remain for individual local authorities. I have no plans to issue guidance to them, but I should, of course, be glad if those authorities who at present offer less generous schemes were to implement the proposed minimum in advance of legislation.

Voluntary and Community Transport

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library the summary of the findings of the National Review of Voluntary and Community Transport as presented to delegates at the annual community transport conference. [63813]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The summary is an informal document meant only to stimulate discussion at the recent Conference. I will send a personal copy to my hon. Friend. I will ensure that copies of the final report—which is due early in the New Year—are placed in the Library.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what increased provision was made in the local government financial settlement for each local authority to manage current and improved public access to the countryside. [63832]

Ms Armstrong: The need for revenue expenditure by local authorities on public rights of way is taken into account, along with other spending pressures and the scope for efficiencies, in the local government finance settlement.

The Government recognise that their proposals for increasing public access to the countryside are likely to have cost implications for local authorities, and will take these into account in future financial settlements.

Countryside (Public Access)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the response to the Government's consultation on improving public access to the countryside; and if he will list the main concerns raised by local authorities. [63831]

Mr. Meale: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers given by my right hon. Friend, the Minister for the Environment, to the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo) on 27 October 1998, Official Report, column 103, and to the hon. Member for West Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) on 18 November 1998, Official Report, column 672. My Department's analysis of responses to the consultation paper, "Access to the Open Countryside in England and Wales," will summarise the key issues raised by respondents, including the representations made by local authorities.

Leaseholders

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate how many dwellings in which the household is headed by a person aged over 65 years are leasehold; and how many of these are (a) flats and (b) houses. [64003]

Mr. Raynsford: The estimates[1] in the table are taken from the Department's Survey of English Housing for 1997–98.

Households owning a lease

Thousands

Age of head of household	Type of accommodation House	Flat	Total
Under 65 years	668	691	1,359
Over 65 years	163	258	422
Total	831	949	1,780

Note:

[1] Like all estimates from sample surveys, these figures are subject to sampling variability

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of all leaseholders are aged over 65 years. [64002]

Mr. Raynsford: Estimates[1] from the Department's Survey of English Housing show that in 1997–98, twenty four per cent. (24%) of leaseholders were aged over 65 years.

Notes:

[1] Like all estimates from sample surveys, these figures are subject to sample variability.

Trains (First Aid Equipment)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with train operators regarding access to first aid equipment on trains. [63811]

Ms Glenda Jackson: None. The provisions of the Health and Safety (First Aid) Regulations 1981 (HSFAR), a relevant statutory provision of the Health and Safety at Work etc Act, 1974, which apply to train operating companies, require employers to provide access to adequate first aid facilities for their employees in the workplace. All trains must therefore be fitted with first aid equipment which on modern trains is located in the drivers cab and on older trains in the guards van.

There is no legislation which requires train operating companies to provide first aid equipment for use by the public. It is a matter for each train operating company to decide what first aid facilities it makes available to the public. In practice, first aid equipment provided under the HSFAR 1981 is available to train passengers.

Kyoto Protocol

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many countries are required to ratify the Kyoto Climate Change Convention Protocol for it to enter into force; and which countries have done so to date. [63775]

Mr. Meacher: The Kyoto Protocol to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change will enter into force on the ninetieth day after the date on which not less than 55 Parties to the Convention incorporating Annex I Parties (i.e. developed countries) which accounted in total for at least 55 per cent. of the total carbon dioxide emissions for 1990 from that group have deposited their instruments of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession. To date, Fiji and Tuvalu have ratified the Kyoto Protocol.

Hazardous Waste Landfill Sites

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the analysis in The Lancet of 8 August 1998 concerning the risk of congenital anomalies near hazardous waste landfill sites in Europe, including the United Kingdom. [63903]

Mr. Meale: The Government would be most concerned if a casual link was established between congenital anomalies and hazardous waste landfill sites. The study reported in The Lancet did not establish cause and effect, but concluded that there was a need for further study. The commentary in The Lancet on the study pointed out that the lack of adequate exposure information made the present results difficult to interpret.

My Department has nevertheless been looking at the results of the study very carefully with the Department of Health and the Environment Agency. The Small Area Health Statistics Unit (SAHSU) at Imperial College has been commissioned by the Government to carry out a substantial survey of health effects around landfill sites, including congenital malformations. This work will take at least two years to complete. In addition, my Department and the Department of Health have asked the Institute for Environment and Health (IEH) to arrange a one-day meeting of invited experts to discuss The Lancet report, to identify gaps in the knowledge base and to explore priorities for future Government research. We anticipate that a range of expertise will be represented at the meeting including environmental epidemiology, reproductive toxicology, landfill technology and exposure assessment.

Radioactive Discharges

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has made to secure the OSPAR agreed cessation of radioactive discharges from the reprocessing plant at Cap de La Hague in France. [64104]

Mr. Meacher: It is for France, as an OSPAR Contracting Party, to decide how it will implement the undertakings made at the OSPAR Ministerial Meeting last July. I understand that the French Government are carrying out a full review of discharge authorisations for the La Hague site and that they expect to make an announcement shortly.

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress towards the cessation of (a) liquid and (b) gaseous radioactive discharges from (i) nuclear reprocessing plants and (ii) nuclear generating stations in accordance with the OSPAR agreement. [64103]

Mr. Meacher: In accordance with the undertakings made at the OSPAR Ministerial Meeting last July, the Government are working towards achieving further substantial reductions or elimination of discharges of radioactive substances. UK nuclear operators will be producing twenty-year strategies to show options for reducing discharges, by 2020, to levels which add negligible amounts to historic concentrations in the marine environment.

The Environment Agency has completed its consideration of BNFL's applications to vary radioactive discharges from the Sellafield site and the Agency's draft decisions are being considered by Ministers. Requests for the applications to be "called-in" for the Secretary of State's own determination are also being considered and decisions will be announced as soon as possible.

School Playing Fields

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures his Department proposes to meet the Government's pledge to stop the loss of school playing fields. [64387]

Mr. Caborn: We have published The Town and Country Planning (Playing Fields)(England) Direction 1998 which is one of the key measures in a co-ordinated approach between my Department, the Department of Education and Employment, and the Department of Culture, Media and Sport to stop the loss of playing fields. The Direction requires local planning authorities to notify my Department of planning applications where they wish to grant planning permission, but where the English Sports Council advises against the development, because there is, or the development would result in, a deficiency in playing field provision for schools or the wider community in the area.

This Direction applies to local authority-owned playing fields and all others which are currently used, or which have been used in the past five years, by educational institutions. The effect of the Direction will be to give the Secretary of State the opportunity to decide whether to call-in a notified planning applications for his own determination, or leave the matter for the local planning authority to decide. Taken together with measures by the Department for Education and Employment to limit the sale of playing fields, these new controls will help to ensure that playing fields which schools and local communities need are not lost for ever.

Homelessness

Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many and what percentage of schemes supported initially by section 180 and section 73 grants have continued to operate after the grants were tapered to 0 per cent. in each of the last five years. [64215]

Mr. Raynsford: The section 180 (formerly section 73) grant programme run by my Department provides grants to voluntary sector organisations concerned with homelessness. The grants are provided on a tapered basis, initially for up to three years to allow organisations to set up new projects to prevent and tackle single homelessness. All organisations are made aware of the tapered and time-limited nature of the grant when they apply, and are expected to have a fund-raising strategy in place to secure the continuation of the project. This approach allows more new projects around the country to benefit from grants than would otherwise be possible. The taper has been applied flexibly and many organisations have benefited from grant for periods well in excess of three years. This year 79 of the 205 projects in receipt of grant have been funded for between four and eight years. All aspects of project performance are considered when deciding whether funding should be offered beyond the usual three year period.

Detailed records are not kept on whether projects continue to operate when they are no longer in receipt of section 180 grant.

Scotland Act 1998 (Schedule 5)

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list (a) total expenditure and (b) expenditure by programme by his Department in Scotland on areas covered by the exception under (i) E.1, (ii) E.2 and (iii) E.3 of Head E in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998. [63805]

Mr. Meale [holding answer 15 December 1998]: Expenditure by the Department in 1997–98 on research and development, grants and consultancies related to road safety, which is the subject of the exception listed in Head E1 of Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998, was £4.2m. The Department does not record separately how much of this expenditure takes place in Scotland.

In 1997–98, the Department undertook the following programme expenditure[1] on grants relating to railway services which are the subject of exceptions listed in Head E2 of Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998;

£ million

DETR expenditure	Total GB	Scotland
Payments by the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising to train operating companies	1,425	[2]136
Freight Facilities Grant	8	[3]nil
Track Access Grant	21	not separately recorded

[1] These figures include any expenditure incurred in relation to those areas listed in Schedule 5, Head E2 (a-c), to which the exception does not apply, on which separate information is not recorded.
[2] Payments made to Scotrail.
[3] Freight Facilities Grants in Scotland paid by Scottish Office.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list (a) total expenditure and (b) expenditure by programme over £50,000 by his Department in Scotland on areas covered by each exception under Head D in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998. [63798]

Mr. Meale: [holding answer 15 December 1998]: Expenditure by the Department on the regulation of the energy supply industry under Part 1 of the Environment Protection Act 1990 and the Radioactive Substances Act 1993, which are the subject of the exceptions listed in Heads D1, D2, D3 and D4 of the Scotland Act 1998, is not separately recorded. The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions is not responsible for funding the relevant regulatory authorities in Scotland.

Expenditure by the Department in 1997–98 on the Energy Saving Trust, which is the subject of the exception listed in Head D5 of Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998, was £19.7m, of which £1.23m was expenditure in Scotland.

Quayside Guided Bus Transit System

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he has given his approval of funding towards the Quayside Guided Bus Transit System in the City of Newcastle upon Tyne; and if he will make a statement. [64424]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The details of the annual Local Transport Capital Settlement for 1999–2000 are being announced tomorrow. Information about allocations to individual local authorities, and to passenger transport authorities, will be sent directly to Members of Parliament.

Housing Capital Resources

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to make an announcement about the distribution to local authorities of housing capital resources for 1999–2000. [64485]

Ms Armstrong: Details of housing capital allocations for local authorities for 1999–2000 will be announced tomorrow. I am arranging for tables giving individual Housing Investment Programme and Capital Receipts Initiative allocations to be placed in the Library of the House. These tables will also show the performance band in which each authority has been placed.

Flooding

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will provide financial assistance to Cherwell District Council and Melton Borough Council under the Bellwin scheme for costs incurred following the severe flooding on the weekend of 9 to 12 April 1998. [64486]

Ms Armstrong: I am satisfied that financial assistance under the Bellwin scheme is justified in the case of Cherwell and Melton councils, given the exceptional nature of the floods and the damage caused. Schemes will, therefore, be established under section 155 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Grant will be paid to each authority to cover 85 per cent. of eligible costs above a threshold and which have been incurred by the authority in dealing with the flooding.

British Board of Agrément

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he has reached conclusions on the status of the British Board of Agrément; and if he will make a statement. [64559]

Mr. Raynsford: On 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 637, I announced to the House that a Financial Management and Policy Review of the British Board of Agrément (BBA) would be carried out this year.

The first stage of the Review—the Prior Options Review—was completed by consultants last July. I have since considered the consultants' report very carefully, and having discussed this with the Chairman of the BBA Council, I have reached a number of conclusions:

- the BBA provides an essential service to the construction industry, and should be encouraged to continue to provide that service;
- the BBA no longer needs to be constrained by the Government rules and procedures necessary for Non Departmental Public Bodies and should have the commercial freedoms necessary to allow it to develop its business; and
- in partnership with Government, the BBA should continue to promote Agrément and European Technical Approvals in accordance with a Memorandum of Understanding to be drawn up by my Department and the BBA.

To these ends, I propose to invite the Council to amend the Company's Memorandum and Articles of Association so that the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions can relinquish many of the powers he currently has. The BBA will retain its existing status as a Company limited by guarantee under the Companies Act.

In order to emphasise the importance to Government of the BBA, I propose that the Secretary of State should be represented on its ruling Council, and, in order to protect previous investments of public funds, that he retains controls over the disposal of the Company or its assets, through specific clawback provisions. Other commercial and organisational issues should, rightly, be passed to the BBA Council to decide. The Secretary of State will cease to make appointments to the Council, but will be consulted upon them.

As part of the process to promote the BBA, I have asked them to commission a survey of the products market to assist in drawing up a strategy for future development of business opportunities.

Local Transport Infrastructure

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will announce the allocation of capital resources for expenditure on local transport infrastructure. [64630]

Dr. Reid: Details of the allocations to local highway authorities and passenger transport authorities in England for capital expenditure on their transport infrastructure in 1999–2000 will be placed in the Library of the House at 10.00 am on Thursday 17 December. Information about allocations to individual authorities will be sent directly to Members of Parliament.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when decisions will be issued to applicants under the scheme of redress for extreme and exceptional hardship for those affected by blight from Channel Tunnel Rail Link route options between 1990 and 1994. [64631]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I am today announcing that 28 applicants demonstrated that they suffered extreme and exceptional hardship as a result of past CTRL blight and will be receiving £10,000 each. This is an ex gratia scheme which is additional to normal compensation arrangements for those directly affected by the CTRL. The scheme originated from a finding of maladministration against the then Department of Transport by the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration.

Rural Bus Challenge

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will make an announcement on this year's Rural Bus Challenge competition. [64632]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The schemes listed have been approved for grant under this year's Rural Bus Challenge. This follows careful consideration of the 214 bids received from local authorities. The value of the bids totalled over £41.5 million, in comparison with the £11.4 million available for grant. A Special Grant Report under Section 88b of the Local Government Finance Act 1988 will be put forward for Parliamentary approval as soon as possible in the new year.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

University for Industry

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals he has to allow the University for Industry to be a direct provider of further education and higher education courses; and if resources for such provision will come directly from FEFC and HEFC budgets. [61826]

Mr. Mudie: The University for Industry will be launched nationally in the year 2000. There are no plans for UfI to be a direct learning provider but will rather act as a broker of learning opportunities. We expect the further and higher education sectors to make a major contribution to the UfI as a key part of the strategy to embed the Lifelong Learning culture.

It will be open to the Higher Education Funding Council England (HEFCE) and the Further Education Funding Council (FEFC) to allocate places with accompanying funding to enable institutions to develop joint provision of learning opportunities with the UfI.

GCSEs

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average number of hours per week spent teaching GCSE subjects by teachers, excluding head teachers and deputy headteachers, in LEA secondary schools in England. [62029]

Ms Estelle Morris: In 1996–97, in maintained secondary schools in England that had pupils in years 10 and 11, full-time teachers spent an average of 28 per cent. of the school week teaching years 10 and 11 in subjects which can be tested at GCSE, although not all such teaching will be for GCSE. For a school that has eight periods a day of 35 minutes each, this amounts to 6.5 hours a week.

Retraining

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to make further provision for retraining unemployed people between the age of 25 years and normal retirement age. [62781]

Mr. Mudie: The Government recognise the importance of the role played by training in helping unemployed adults back to work.

At present, learning by unemployed adults is supplied through Work Based Learning for Adults; the training option of New Deal 25+ which was introduced nationally from June 1998; further education; and the Single Regeneration Budget.

The Government continue to keep training for unemployed adults under review and is testing new ways in which training can be delivered in the future. These initiatives include the 25+ New Deal pilots which commenced in November, Employment Zones, Individual Learning Accounts and the University for Industry. Results from these are being carefully evaluated and those approaches we find most effective will be applied widely.

The future development of Work Based Learning for Adults is being considered as part of the TEC Review.

Departmental Papers (Schools Circulation)

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list all departmental papers circulated to schools since May 1997. [63060]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 8 December 1998]: A list of material sent to schools by the Department of Education and Employment from 2 May 1997 to 12 December 1998 has been placed in the Library.

Of the 216 items sent to schools, 130 were sent to all schools over the 20-month period. The remainder had a more limited circulation. Since June 1998 schools have received material in regular batches which clearly indicate the priority of items. From 1 December batches only contain: guidance on legal changes, curriculum development material on key strategies such as literacy and numeracy, data collection and 2 page summaries of documents on key policy issues.

Further Education

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the proportions of each kind of assistance given to further education students out of access funds in the last financial year for which figures are available. [63470]

Mr. Mudie: Over £6 million of Further Education Access Funds were allocated in the following proportions in 1996–97 (the latest year for which figures are available):

Category	Percentage of Access Fund allocated
Fees	17.50
Books	7.35
Equipment	10.66
Accommodation	6.13
Childcare	23.03
Transport	25.87
Other	9.46

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures the Government are taking to promote access to further and higher education for young people with special educational needs. [63400]

Mr. Mudie: The Government's policies on widening participation and increasing access are intended to be inclusive and to benefit students with learning difficulties and/or disabilities as well as others.

The Secretary of State has asked the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) when allocating funds to institutions to take into account the additional costs of providing learning support for students with learning difficulties and disabilities and to monitor the provision made by institutions for disabled students. This was made clear in the grant letter of 8 December to HEFCE. Under the new higher education student support arrangements for 1998–99, Disabled Students' Allowances will no longer be means tested for disabled full time students and the amount students may claim has been increased.

In further education, the funding mechanism provides for additional support for students with learning difficulties and/or disabilities according to need. The grant letter to the Further Education Funding Council of 8 December noted that the FE capital element of the Comprehensive Spending Review (comprising £195 million in total) would enable colleges to make progress on disabled access in the context of the Government's commitment to comprehensive and enforceable civil rights.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many official visits (a) he and (b) the Ministers in his Department have made to Buckinghamshire since 2 May 1997; and if he will list them. [64137]

Mr. Mudie: There have been no official visits to Buckinghamshire since 2 May 1997 by either my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State or any of his Ministers.

Higher Education Funding Council

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the administrative costs, as a percentage of the total budget, for (a) the Higher Education Funding Council, and (b) the Further Education Funding Council; and what is the national average for training and enterprise councils. [63270]

Mr. Mudie: The information that my hon. Friend has requested is listed below. All figures relate to the 1997–98 financial year, the last for which we have complete figures:

Higher Education Funding Council for England 0.29 per cent.

Further Education Funding Council 0.76 per cent.

Training and Enterprise Councils 13 per cent.

The figures for all three organisations are from their accounts.

The three figures are not comparable because of differences in responsibilities between the TECs, the HEFCE and the FEFC.

Specifically, the figure for TECs is much higher than either of the others because TECs are themselves directly involved in local business support and economic development.

Mixed Year Classes

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by local education authority how many Key Stage One and Key Stage Two pupils in maintained schools were being educated in the same class in January (a) 1997 and (b) 1998. [63515]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 14 December]: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by local education authority how many primary school pupils in maintained schools were educated in classes with children from more than one year group in January (a) 1997 and (b) 1998. [63516]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The information requested is not available for January 1997. Figures for January 1998 are shown in the following table:

British Beef

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the local authorities which permit British beef to be served on school menus. [64114]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not collected centrally.

New Deal

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the provision of data for the subsidised employment option under the New Deal. [64171]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 15 December 1998]: Over 11,000 young people have found work through the subsidised Employment option of the New Deal for 18–24 year olds, in addition to the over 27,000 young people who have found unsubsidised jobs. This figure is drawn from the latest Government Statistical Service data to the end of September 1998 and the provisional Management Information to the end of October 1998.

Scotland Act 1998 (Schedule 5)

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list (a) total expenditure and (b) expenditure by programme by his Department in Scotland on areas covered by the exception under H.3 of Head H in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998. [63801]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 15 December 1998]: Areas excepted under Schedule 5, Head H3 of the Scotland Act 1998 are careers services under the Employment and Training Act 1973, and assisting persons to establish themselves as self-employed under the Enterprise and New Towns (Scotland) Act 1990. This Department spends no money in Scotland on either.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the offices or agencies under his control which will be subject to L.2 of Head L in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998; how many people are currently employed in these offices; and what equal opportunities practices are adopted in these offices. [63802]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 15 December 1998]: Schedule 5, Head L2 of the Scotland Act 1998 denotes equal opportunities, a matter reserved to the UK Parliament. A DfEE offices and agencies are subject to the requirements of equal opportunities laws, which are GB-wide. Numbers employed in DfEE offices and agencies, and the DfEE's equal opportunities practices, are contained in the Departmental Report which is in the Library of the House. The published draft Statutory Instrument on Cross-Border Public Authorities lists two DfEE-sponsored bodies, the Construction Industry Training Board and Engineering Construction Industry Training Board, which employ 1,003 (CITB) and 41 (ECITB) staff, and whose equal opportunities practices follow their policies as published in their Annual Reports, which are in the Library.

Bureaucracy

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the working group on reducing bureaucracy was established; what are its terms of reference; who are its members; and when it is expected to report. [63960]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Working Group on Reducing the Bureaucratic Burden on Teachers was set up in July 1997.

The Group's terms of reference were to report to Ministers on:

- the sources of bureaucratic burdens in schools, including those from central government, local government, national bodies involved with schools and schools own management and administrative practices;
- ways of reducing those burdens, including:
  - clarifying minimum requirements for complying with legal obligations such as OFSTED inspections;
  - streamlining processes;
  - identifying best practice and how this can best be spread;
  - making best use of information technology;
- areas where further study is needed to identify improvements.

The Members of the Group were:

Peter Owen (chair): Director General for Schools, DfEE

Denis Allnut: Director, Analytical Services, DfEE

Nick Sanders: Director, School Curriculum, funding and Teachers, DfEE

Gwenlian Evans: Deputy General Secretary, Association of Teachers and Lecturers

Nigel de Gruchy: General Secretary, National Association of Schoolmasters/Union of Women Teachers

Rowie Shaw: Director of Professional Services, National Association of Head Teachers

John Bangs: Assistant Secretary, National Union of Teachers

David Jones: Acting General Secretary, Professional Association of Teachers

Colin Broomfield: Head of Cheshunt School, Honorary Secretary, Secondary Heads Association

Pat Petch: Chair, National Governors' Council

John Fowler: Local Government Association

Greg Hill: Education Officer for Information Technology, Metropolitan Borough of Solihull

Michael Collier: Chief Executive, Funding Agency for Schools

John Taylor HMI: Inspection Quality Monitoring and Development Team, Office for Standards in Education

Tony Millns: Assistant Chief Executive (Communications), School Curriculum and Assessment Authority

Stephen Hillier: Head of Corporate Management, Teacher Training Agency

Colin Muid: Deputy Director, Central IT Unit, Cabinet Office

Graham Walker: Senior Partner, Arthur Andersen

Tony Cann CBE: Chairman, Promethean Ltd.

The Group's final report to Ministers was published on 16 January 1998, and a copy is in the Library.

Musical Education

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to improve the musical education of school children. [63710]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government recognise that music is a key part of the broad and balanced education to which every child is entitled. Music is a foundation subject in the National Curriculum, which every child must study from the ages of 5 to 14, and it will maintain its key place in the curriculum. We also recognise the important contribution made by LEA music services; that is why we proposed new arrangements to safeguard them in our "Fair Funding" consultation document. We will be making a further announcement on this matter early in the new year.

HEALTH

Accident and Emergency Services

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the mechanism for the allocation within London of the £378 million capital budget for London's National Health Service will (a) take into account the levels of activity of accident and emergency departments, (b) take into account the effect on such accident and emergency departments of the closure over the last decade of nearby ones and (c) provide a compensation element for the relatively small increases in the annual settlements affecting some London health authorities; and if he will make a statement. [62514]

Mr. Milburn: The importance of improving the standard of facilities and equipment in accident and emergency departments has been recognised by the Government. As a result, £30 million from next year's Modernisation Fund for Capital has been earmarked for investment in accident and emergency departments of which £4.367 million has been allocated to London. These resources will be used to provide faster, better services for patients and a safer working environment for staff. Funds will be allocated across a range of schemes. Many factors will be taken into consideration in deciding which should have the greatest need for investment including, where applicable, the level of activity of accident and emergency departments.

In response to Sir Leslie Turnberg's review, we are determined to ensure that all Londoners have accessible top quality services with accident and emergency and ambulance services capable of meeting forseeable needs.

Nursing Agencies

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to reform nursing agencies; what representations he has received on this subject; and how much NHS organisations paid for agency nurses in each of the last 10 years. [63235]

Mr. Milburn: These agencies are currently required to be licensed under the provisions of the Nurses Agencies Act 1957. We are considering how the regulation of such agencies might be improved, particularly in the context of our plans to introduce regulation of domiciliary care providers. Departmental officials have had discussions with local authorities responsible for licensing agencies and with the Royal College of Nursing as well as representatives of the agencies. The information available on the cost of nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff not employed directly by individual trusts and health authorities is shown in the table. Data prior to 1991/2 are not directly comparable.

Dentistry

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will introduce regulations to lay down minimum quality standards for dentistry; [63483]

(2) what provision currently exists to ensure minimum standards of quality in NHS dentistry in the United Kingdom. [63484]

Mr. Milburn: General dental practitioners working in the National Health Service have to meet the conditions set out in the Dentists Act 1984 and rules made by the General Dental Council under this Act and must also comply with the terms of service contained in the National Health Service General Dental Services (Regulations) 1990.

We will be reviewing these arrangements in connection with our initiative to modernise the regulation of the health car professions.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what methods his Department records and evaluates complaints which arise in private dental practice. [63485]

Mr. Milburn: The General Dental Council, of which the Department's Chief Dental Officer is a member, investigates allegations of serious professional misconduct in private dental practice.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings he has had with the General Dental Council over the past twelve months and what was discussed. [63486]

Mr. Milburn: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State met the President of the General Dental Council, usually accompanied by the Registrar, on at least three occasions in the past twelve months. We have discussed a number of issues relating to dentistry and the regulation of the profession.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the proportion of dentistry services provided by corporate bodies in the United Kingdom; and if he will examine recent changes in that proportion. [63487]

Mr. Milburn: None. Only those corporate bodies referred to in Section 43 of the Dentists Act may carry out the business of dentistry.

Cancer

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the amount of public information available on cancer. [63713]

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the action which his Department is taking to increase public awareness of the availability of cancer services. [63466]

Mr. Hutton: We are committed to providing high quality, patient-centred care to all cancer patients and have introduced a package of measures to increase the amount of public information available on cancer. Patients need clear information to be fully involved in treatment decisions.

Cancer is a priority area in the Green Paper "Our Healthier Nation" and in conjunction with the Health Education Authority, we have produced information leaflets about early detection and life style factors relevant to cancer. In addition as part of the implementation of the new National Health Service "Information for Health", we are developing a cancer information strategy which will improve the information available to patients and the public. The voluntary secior also has a key role to play in increasing public information available on cancer. We will continue to work closely with them to ensure that patient needs are identified.

Cancer Services

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to create a nursing position which would provide a link between doctor, community and hospital in the treatment of cancer patients. [63712]

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce, on a national basis, the scheme under which GPs receive support from an oncology nurse who liaises between the hospital and GP. [63474]

Mr. Hutton: The Policy Framework for Commissioning Cancer Services (Calman/Hine report) covers the organisation and delivery of cancer services through the development of a specialist, multi-professional, multi-disciplinary workforce, better co-ordination between the primary, secondary and tertiary sectors and the greater involvement of patients in care and prevention. As part of the ongoing implementation of the Calman/Hine recommendations, a primary care and cancer working group will shortly put recommendations to Ministers on how primary care can best contribute to the provision of a seamless, comprehensive and high quality cancer service. We can then consider how nursing posts can best be developed to deliver high quality care for cancer patients within acute and community settings.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response he has made to representations from GPs on cancer care services. [63465]

Mr. Hutton: Substantial progress has already been made in improving the organisation and delivery of cancer services through the ongoing implementation of the Calman/Hine recommendations and an integrated network of cancer care. Primary care is seen as the focus of care and we welcome the results of a recent MORI poll that shows that general practitioners want to improve and be involved in improving cancer services.

A working group on primary care and cancer is currently considering how the primary care role can be developed to allow GPs to contribute fully to the ongoing improvements in cancer services. The group's recommendations will be put to Ministers shortly.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the total expenditure and the breakdown of expenditure in his Department since May 1997 on (a) public opinion research, (b) television, radio and newspaper advertising and (c) direct mail. [63921]

Mr. Milburn: Estimated expenditure on public opinion research, television, radio and newspaper advertising since 1 May 1997 is £8.09 million. The information on total expenditure on direct mail can be provided only at disproportionate cost. A breakdown of the total given is in the table.

£ million

	Expenditure 1997–98 (since 1 May)	Estimated expenditure 1998–99
(a) Public opinion research	0.88	[1]1.77
(b) Television, radio and newspaper advertising[2]	2.08	3.36

[1] The estimate includes the 1998–99 general population questionnaire £1 million (costs for this survey are earmarked only and the full cost is not yet known, although the total cost may be equal to £1.3 million).

[2] Excludes Departmental staff recruitment advertising expenditure which is not held centrally.

Colitis and Crohn's Disease

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what specific support his Department is able to give to the sufferers of colitis and Crohn's disease. [63661]

Mr. Hutton: People with colitis and Crohn's disease can receive a full range of treatment from the National Health Service. Support and information is also provided by the National Association for Colitis and Crohn's Disease, a registered charity to which the Department currently gives funding under Section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968.

The Department's policy research programme and the central NHS research and development programmes are not currently supporting any research into colitis and Crohn's disease, because of competing priorities. However, the Medical Research Council, the main agency through which the Government supports biomedical and clinical research, supports a significant portfolio of research related to intestinal diseases and inflammatory bowel diseases. The Council is currently funding three strategic project grants in this area, with a total cost of £186,000 in 1997–98.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to publish lists for each region indicating the performance of each hospital in each waiting list category. [64006]

Mr. Milburn: Details of waiting lists for each National Health Service Executive region and for NHS trusts are published quarterly in "Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to publish the patient waiting lists for each acute hospital broken down by type of operation awaited. [63999]

Mr. Milburn: Waiting lists for individual procedures are not collected centrally. However, specialty level information is published quarterly in "Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what details are currently made publicly available for each acute hospital on the order of patients on a waiting list. [64000]

Mr. Milburn: For reasons of patient confidentiality, the names of patients on a waiting list and the order in which they appear is not made public.

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to include Irish as a category in his Department's ethnic monitoring of staff recruitment. [63879]

Mr. Milburn: The overriding principle of Civil Service recruitment procedures is that they should be fair, and selection should be on merit at each stage.

Monitoring in this area is based on ethnic origin, and not nationality. The nine ethnic minority categories monitored by Department are based on those used in the 1991 census which did not include an Irish category. They will be reviewed in the light of any suggested changes for the 2001 Population Census.

Cannabis (Clinical Trials)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what input his Department intends to have into the Royal Pharmaceutical Society's discussions on the forthcoming clinical trials of cannabis; and if he will make a statement. [63987]

Mr. Hutton: It is the Government's policy to actively encourage research into cannabinoids and not to stand in the way of methodologically sound research into the therapeutic uses of cannabis.

The Department welcomed the Working Party on the Therapeutic Uses of Cannabinoids on which the Medical Research Council (MRC) has observer status.

We understand that the working party has now completed its deliberations and that outline proposals will be launched in January before an invited audience. The MRC, via its well established peer review procedures, will consider the proposals for funding.

The Medicines Control Agency has agreed to advise Professor Asscher's group on the regulatory aspects of their proposed trials.

Officials from the Department have been invited to, and will attend, the launch on 11 January 1999.

Smoking

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the average daily number of cigarettes smoked by a person who has died from a tobacco-related illness. [64098]

Ms Jowell: In 1996 cigarette smokers in the United Kingdom consumed an average of 104 cigarettes a week, which equates to about 15 a day. Information is not available on the average daily number of cigarettes smoked by a person who has died from a tobacco-related illness.

Farm Antibiotics

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the implications for human health of the use of antibiotics in farming. [63374]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 15 December 1998]: Both the Veterinary Products Committee and the Advisory Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Food (ACMSF) have taken into account the public health concerns when providing advice to Government on the use of antibiotics as growth promoters. The ACMSF is close to finalising a report on microbial antibiotic resistance in relation to food safety which will be submitted to Government when completed.

Zinc Bacitracin

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has sought from the Public Health Laboratory Service about the European Commission's proposal to withdraw authorisation of zinc bacitracin as a veterinary medicine; and if he will make a statement. [64028]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 15 December 1998]: The view of the Public Health Laboratory Service has not been sought on the proposal to ban zinc bacitracin as a growth promoter. Both the Veterinary Products Committee and the Advisory Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Food have provided advice to Government taking into account the public health concerns surrounding growth promoters, including zinc bacitracin.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the public health implications of a change by poultry producers from the use of zinc bacitracin to avilamycin; and if he will make a statement. [64029]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 15 December 1998]: A working group of the Advisory Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Food is considering the question of microbial antibiotic resistance in relation to food safety. In advance of its report, the Committee has advised Ministers that the use as growth promoters of antimicrobials where there is a medical equivalent in current or planned use should be phased out at the earliest opportunity. For growth promoters where there is currently no medical equivalent or where medical use is rare, the advice was that there is currently insufficient information available to justify an immediate ban. The use of substances like avilamycin should therefore be kept under review and if any evidence becomes available of medical equivalents being developed then their use as growth promoters should be phased out.

Medical Negligence

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his planned timescale for (a) making decisions on the recommendations contained in Lord Justice Atton's report on medical negligence and (b) putting forward proposals for reducing litigation in the NHS. [62672]

Mr. Milburn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is currently considering what further action to take in connection with the many replies to his call for ideas on reducing litigation in the National Health Service, including the recommendations in Lord Justice Otton's report

NHS Consultants

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will introduce maximum working times for NHS consultants. [63258]

Mr. Milburn: National Health Service consultants, in common with all directly employed hospital staff with the exception of doctors in training, are subject to the Working Time Regulations. These regulations came into force on 1 October 1998 and implement European Community Directive 93/104/EC on the organisation of working time. They set a maximum working time limit of 48 hours a week. Under the terms of the regulations, however, doctors can volunteer on an individual basis to work longer than 48 hours.

The Health Departments have agreed some derogations with the British Medical Association, as allowed under the regulations. These allow doctors and their employers to organise service cover flexibly to comply with the basic 48 hour limit, thereby maintaining high quality patient care around the clock.

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will introduce mechanisms for monitoring the amount of time consultants spend in private practice; and if he will review the current contracts between NHS trusts and NHS consultants. [63260]

Mr. Milburn: Negotiations have began between officials and representatives of the British Medical Association on a new contract for consultants. We want to see robust arrangements in place to ensure that the undoubted energy and commitment of consultants is clearly focused on NHS service priorities and on improving the quality of patient care.

The vast majority of our consultants work hard for the NHS and more than fulfil their contractual commitments. We need a contract which ensures that their undoubted energies are focused clearly on delivering key service goals and priorities, providing patients with the high quality care that they need and expect, increasing productivity where it is needed most and cutting waiting lists.

TREASURY

Share Transactions (Stamp Duty)

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the rate of stamp duty applied on share transactions in each member state of the European Union. [62277]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 3 December 1998]: Other Member States impose a variety of taxes on share transactions. The table gives a broad summary of the latest information we have about stamp duties and similar taxes on share transfers in EU Member States.

EU Member States
Austria	Stock exchange turnover tax at 0.15% or 2.5% depending on the type of company[1]
Belgium	Stock exchange turnover tax—normal rate 0.17%[2]
Denmark	Share transfer tax at 0.5%[3]
Finland	Share transfer tax (only for non-Stock Exchange deals) at 1.6%[4]
France	Stock exchange turnover tax at 0.3% on the fraction of each transaction under or equalling FF1m and at 0.15% on each fraction exceeding FF1m. An allowance of FF150 is applied to the tax due on each transaction and the tax due on each transaction may not exceed FF4,000.
	In addition registration duty at 4.8% on the sale of partnership shares in limited liability companies. The rate is 1% for founders' shares in corporations, subject to maximum tax of FF20,000 and exemption if there is no deed of transfer[5]
Germany	No stamp duty on share transfers.
Greece	Stock exchange transfer tax at 0.3%[6]
Ireland	Stamp duty on share transfers at 1%[7]
Italy	Stock exchange turnover tax at 0.14%[8]
Luxembourg	No stamp duty on share transfers.

EU Member States
Netherlands	No stamp duty on share transfers.
Portugal	Stamp duty is levied on the transfer of shares at 4% on commission[9]
Spain	Share transfers subject to transfer tax/stamp duty and VAT where more than 50% of a company's assets consist of real property situated in Spain and, as a result of the transfer, the acquired obtains full ownership of these assets or obtains control over the company[10]
Sweden	No stamp duty on share transfers.
UK	Stamp Duty or Stamp Duty Reserve Tax is charged on transfers of UK shares at 0.5% whether the transfers are made in the UK or elsewhere. There is no charge on transfers of depositary receipts or transfers within clearance services, but in both of these situations there is a single charge of 1.5% on the transfer or issue of shares into the depositary or clearance service.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of stamp duty on share transactions on the volume of shares traded in (a) London and (b) Frankfurt. [62278]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 3 December 1998]: Stamp duty is only one of a range of factors that may affect the volume of share transactions and, like all taxes, is kept under review.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the special advisers in his Department and the issues on which they specialise; and to what level they have been security cleared; [62846]

(2) if he will list the members of the Council of the Economic Advisers and their principal employment. [62782]

Ms Hewitt: There are four Special Advisers in the Treasury: Ed Balls, Charles [redacted] Ed Miliband and Spencer Livermore. They advise Treasury Ministers on the full range of Treasury policy issues.

In addition, Chris Wales has been appointed full-time to the Council of Economic Advisers and Paul Gregg has been appointed on a part-time basis. Both appointments are on Special Adviser terms. Mr. Gregg's principal employment is with the London School of Economics.

Special Advisers are subject to the usual security clearance arrangements.

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list (a) the (i) task forces, (ii) review panels and (iii) advisory groups his Department has, (b) the remit of each and (c) the members of each together with their principal employment and their level of remuneration. [62804]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Eastleigh (Mr. Chidgey) on 31 July 1998, Official Report, columns 665–66, which provided much of this information. Since then, the Treasury has appointed the following.

1. Public Services Productivity Panel

(a) remit: to advise Ministers on ways of improving the productivity of government departments and public sector agencies

(b) membership:Nine

(c) composition: 3 Ministers, one other public sector, 5 private sector

(d) remuneration: none

(e) budget: out of pocket expenses only

2. Policy Action Team: Business

(a) remit: to report on:

how successful business support organisations such as Business Links are in serving the most deprived communities;

how it can be made easier for people in poor neighbourhoods to get access to support to start a business or become self-employed;

how access to capital or small firms can be improved, especially for start-ups, including innovative approaches such as 'microcredit';

what can be learnt from new ways of encouraging self-employment, building on the New Deal and Employment Zones and how access to capital can be tied into regeneration strategies more generally.

(b) membership: twenty two

(c) composition: 14 civil servants, four other pubic sector, 4 private sector

(d) remuneration: none

(e) budget: out of pocket expenses only

3. Policy Action Team: Financial Services

(a) remit: to report on:

the scope for development of credit unions, building on planned legislative change; increasing the availability of insurance services to deprived communities;

the role of banks, Post Offices and other organisations in providing access to and delivery of financial services in deprived neighbourhoods.

(b) membership: eighteen

(c) composition: 9 civil servants, 5 other public sector, 3 voluntary sector, 1 private sector remuneration: none budget: out of pocket expenses only.

Eurobonds

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue arising from a 20 per cent. withholding tax on interest payments made on Eurobonds paid to (a) non-UK EU residents and (b) all non-UK residents, on the assumption that there is (i) no reduction (ii) a 25 per cent. reduction, (iii) a 50 per cent. reduction and (iv) a 75 per cent. reduction in the Eurobond market in the City of London. [62332]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 7 December 1998]: Reliable estimates are not available.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the value of Eurobond market business carried out in the City of London in each of the last three years. [62331]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 7 December 1998]: There are no official figures for the value of Eurobond market business carried out in the UK.

Drug Crime

Mr. Singh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of the controlled delivery method of drug importation into the United Kingdom as a means of combating drug crime. [63266]

Dawn Primarolo: This method of investigation is the subject of international agreement under Article 11 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances 1988 (The Vienna Convention) and is considered to be a very effective method of combating drug crime.

VAT Registration

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of the net gain or loss to the Exchequer consequent on changing the threshold for compulsory VAT registration. [63401]

Dawn Primarolo: The cost to the Exchequer from increasing the VAT registration threshold from £49,000 to £50,000 on 1 April 1998 was estimated to be £10 million in 1999–2000.

Pesticides Tax

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about a possible tax on pesticides; and if he will make a statement. [63451]

Ms Hewitt: We have received a number of representations on a possible tax on pesticides. As my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in the Pre-Budget Report, work is currently being carried out into whether a tax or charge on pesticides would be an effective way to reduce pollution. There is evidence to suggest that pesticides have harmful effects on wildlife, terrestrial and aquatic ecosystems, and on human health. The Government will evaluate the findings of the research project, and the results of other ongoing work, in considering how best to proceed. No decision has yet been taken on whether to proceed with a tax or charge on pesticides.

Devolution (Barnett Formula)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish his definition of the Barnett formula in the context of the establishment of the National Assembly for Wales and the Scottish Parliament; and what changes have been made to (a) the formula and (b) its interpretation as a result of those establishments. [63482]

Mr. Byers: The Government have already set out a statement of principles to govern changes to the devolved administrations' budgets in a reply given by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury to my hon. Friend the Member for East Ham (Mr. Timms) on 9 December 1998, Official Report, columns 510–13. I shall be publishing a paper describing the funding arrangements for the devolved administrations in due course. This will include details of the operation of the Barnett formula under devolution. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Rotherham Euro Experiment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the (a) costs (b) purpose and (c) results of the Rotherham Euro Experiment; and if he will list the organisations involved. [64190]

Ms Hewitt: "Rotherham Euro Week" was organised by the Rotherham Chamber of Commerce. There was no cost to central Government.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total expenditure and the breakdown of expenditure in his Department since May 1997 on (a) public opinion research, (b) television, radio and newspaper advertising and (c) direct mail. [63916]

Ms Hewitt: The information is as follows:

£000

	March 1997–March 1998	April 1998	Total
a) Public opinion research	121	306	427
b) Television, radio and newspaper advertising	57	[1]6,299	6,356
c) Direct mail	69	59	128

[1] Mainly comprises expenditure on providing information to business about the impact of the euro when it is introduced on 1 January 1999 in 11 EU countries, for which provision was taken in a Summer Supplementary Estimate (HC783).

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to include Irish as a category in his Department's ethnic monitoring of staff recruitment. [63871]

Ms Hewitt: Monitoring in this area is currently based on ethnic origin, not nationality. The nine ethnic origin categories monitored within the civil service are based on those used in the 1991 census, which did not include an Irish category. The categories will be reviewed in the light of any suggested changes for the 2001 Population census.

Budget

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to publish a Green Book alongside the Red Book in the March 1999 Budget. [63271]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The Government consider that information on environmental impacts should be presented alongside, and not separate from, information on economic and financial impacts. The Financial Statement and Budget Report released in March 1998 included, for the first time, an assessment of the environmental impact of those Budget measures which are expected to have a significant effect on the environment. An updated version of that assessment was given in the recent Pre-Budget Report. The Government are looking to build upon that approach in the future. Including an assessment of the environmental impact of Budget measures within Budget documentation reflects the Government's commitment to put the environment at the heart of the policy making.

Single Currency

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the changeover plans regarding preparations for British entry into the single currency will contain details of the Government's convergence strategy. [63866]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The Government's strategy for achieving convergence was set out by the Chancellor in his statement to the House of Commons on 27 October 1997, Official Report, columns 583–88. The Government believe that the UK economy needs a period of economic stability to deliver the sustainable convergence needed before we can join the single currency and there is no realistic prospect of our having demonstrated, before the end of this Parliament, that we have achieved convergence which is sustainable and settled, rather than transitory.

The outline national changeover plan will set out the practical steps that would need to be followed if the UK were to decide to join the single currency and is the result of Treasury consultation with our 100 organisations, including trade associations and businesses. Its focus is therefore practical business and public sector issues.

Unemployment

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate unemployment rates over the next three years. [64199]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 15 December 1998]: In line with the convention adopted by previous Administrations, the Government do not publish forecasts for unemployment.

Brazil

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking to assist Brazil in dealing with its current economic difficulties. [64556]

Ms Hewitt: We welcome and support the agreements between the Brazilian Government and the international community to restore confidence in the Brazilian economy. The UK's role in furthering this objective is explained in the written statement laid before both Houses today, pursuant to the International Monetary Arrangements Act 1983.

Pensions Mis-selling

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on progress made in the review of personal pensions mis-selling. [64557]

Ms Hewitt: Further advances have been made towards completion of the first phase of the review.

Of the 21 firms whose results are set out below only two have resolved less than 75 per cent. of their cases. Fourteen have now resolved over 90 per cent. of their cases.

This progress must be maintained. It is essential that all phase 1 cases are completed by 31 December. Although the industry has largely recognised the need for the pensions review to be completed quickly, some firms could still do better. The regulators will not tolerate further delays, and the Government will continue to support their efforts to see phase 1 completed and phase 2 underway.

The ABI's Pension Adviser's Support Scheme (PASS), which offers small firms assistance with actuarial facilities and financing for the review is a welcome development. All of the 30 major providers have joined PASS, which should prevent many businesses folding. It has aroused considerable interest among independent financial advisers, and will give a significant boost to the pensions review.

Swiss Investment Exchanges

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Swiss investment exchanges carry out investment business in the United Kingdom. [64626]

Ms Hewitt: With effect from today, the Swiss Exchange (SWX), having satisfied the conditions under sections 37 and 40 of the Financial Services Act 1986, has been granted recognition as an Overseas Investment Exchange. The Swiss Exchange is therefore able to carry out investment business in the UK.

Business Start-up Loans

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to encourage the availability of business start-up loans for people from social classes D and E. [63907]

Ms Hewitt: The DTI's Small Firm's Loan Guarantee Scheme already offers support to people with viable business proposals seeking finance but who lack the assets to offer as security against a conventional loan. By providing a guarantee against default the Scheme encourages lenders to lend where finance would not otherwise be available.

As part of the Government's Social Exclusion Agenda, I have established a Policy Action Team which will report by July 1999 on methods of encouraging businesses in poor neighbourhoods. The Team's remit includes examining ways of improving access to capital for small firms, especially start-ups in deprived areas.

Tax Reliefs

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what tax reliefs are currently available for companies giving money to universities and colleges. [63858]

Dawn Primarolo: Most universities and colleges are charities and companies can use tax-effective charitable giving for donations to them.

Companies can also claim tax relief when calculating the business's trading profits for tax purposes for payments made to an approved universtiy, college research institute or similar institution which are to used for scientific research related to the company's trade.

Any payments which a company makes to sponsor a university or college will qualify for a deduction when calculating the business's trading profits for tax purposes if the payment is a revenue payment made wholly and exclusively for trading purposes.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

St. Kilda World Heritage Site

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if it is his policy to urge UNESCO to place St. Kilda World Heritage Site on their in danger list; [63392]

(2) on what date the Government expects UNESCO to announce whether they intend to add the World Heritage Site of St. Kilda to their in danger list. [63393]

Mr. Macdonald: I have been asked to reply.

The Government were fully aware of the environmental sensitivities on and around St. Kilda, and of its status as a World Heritage Site, when they made the decision about which areas in the Atlantic should be offered for petroleum licensing.

We shall be responding to UNESCO to reassure it that there is no case for the placement of St. Kilda on the list of endangered World Heritage Sites.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list (a) the (i) task forces, (ii) review panels and (iii) advisory groups his Department has, (b) the remit of each and (c) the members of each together with their principal employment and their level of remuneration. [62812]

Mr. Chris Smith: A list of the taskforces, review panels and advisory groups have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

UK Sports Institute

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money has been spent to date by the UK Sports Institute. [62778]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 7 December 1998]: Sheffield is working closely with the UK and English Sports Councils to work up a successful application for Lottery funding. To date a total of £825,000 has been received from the Lottery Sports Fund by Phoenix Sports Limited, the company formed by the Sheffield Consortium which won the bid, to allow development work to progress. I have asked the Sports Councils to confirm by the end of December the extent and certainty of the matching funding put in place by Phoenix to take the project forward, to continue to exercise the closest control over payments while the project brief is developed, and to report on the final specification for the project in the light of their consultations with the sports which will use it.

National Curriculum (Sport)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on what dates he has had meetings with the DfEE to discuss the role of sport in the curriculum; and with whom such meetings have taken place. [63424]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 14 December 1998]: Both I and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State regularly discuss the role of sport in the Curriculum with colleagues from DfEE. My hon. Friend the Minister for School Standards and I attended the launch of the Sporting Ambassadors Scheme, an ESC initiative to provide opportunities for successful sports men and women of all ages to visit schools to enthuse young people about the benefits of physical activity and a healthy lifestyle, on 1 July. My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment and I both discussed sport when we spoke at the Youth Sport Trust's Annual Reception on 18 November.

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to include Irish as a category in his Department's ethnic monitoring of staff recruitment. [63880]

Mr. Chris Smith: The overriding principle on recruitment within the Civil Service is that procedures should be fair, and selection should be on merit at each stage.

Monitoring in the area of staff recruitment within DCMS is based on ethnic origin, not nationality. The nine categories monitored are based on those used in the 1991 census, which did not include an Irish category. This will be reviewed following any suggested changes for the 2001 Population Census.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which overseas countries the Minister for Sport has visited as part of his ministerial duties since 1 May 1997; and when. [63425]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The rules on travel in this Government are the same as the previous Government. The hon. Member will wish to be aware that I have visited the following countries as part of my Departmental duties since 1 May 1997:

Country	Date visited	Purpose of visit
France	10 June 1997	Meeting/reception with Madam Buffet re preparations for World Cup 1998
Italy	10 October 1997	Italy v England—Quarter final for 1998 World Cup
United States of America	23 October 1997	Campaign for the England 2006 World Cup
Trinidad and Tobago	25 October 1997	Campaign for the England 2006 World Cup
Costa Rica	28 October 1997	Campaign for the England 2006 World Cup
France	4 December 1997	1998 World Cup Draw
Belgium	27 January 1998	Intergroup meeting on Sport
Japan	6 February 1998	Winter Olympics
South Korea	12 February 1998	Winter Olympics
Thailand	14 February 1998	Campaign for the England 2006 World Cup
Belgium	17 March 1998	2006 Bid meeting
Paraguay	24 March 1998	Campaign for the England 2006 World Cup
Argentina	26 March 1998	Campaign for the England 2006 World Cup
Qatar	19 April 1998	Campaign for the England 2006 World Cup
France	10 June 1998	Meeting with Madam Buffet and European Union Ministers for Sport
France	10 July 1998	Campaign for the England 2006 World Cup
Switzerland	1 September 1998	Meeting with President Samaranch and Sepp Blatter
Malaysia	9 September 1998	Commonwealth Games
South Africa	12 September 1998	IAAF 8th Athletics World Cup
Republic of Ireland	27 September 1998	Gaelic Football—All Ireland Final
Spain	5 October 1998	Campaign for the England 2006 World Cup
France	23 October 1998	Council of Europe Hearing of Bosman Ruling
Cameroon	1 November 1998	Campaign for the England 2006 World Cup
Mali	3 November 1998	Campaign for the England 2006 World Cup
Malta	12 November 1998	Campaign for the England 2006 World Cup
Austria	24 November 1998	Troika Sports Ministers meeting

Heads of Missions overseas have reported on the value of these visits, not only to The Football Association's Campaign for the England 2006 World Cup but also in furthering relations between this country and the rest of the world. I will be writing to the hon. Member shortly about these reports.

In the new year I will be visiting Tunisia, New Zealand and Botswana with The Football Association's Bid team, and receiving in London the Vice-Chairman of FIFA, Mr. Jack Warner. Yesterday I had a meeting with my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Mr. Derek Fatchett) to discuss strategy. In the new year I will be meeting with The Football Association's full Executive Committee as part of the planning process for 1999.

National Lottery Retailers

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many National Lottery retailers there are in each parliamentary constituency ranked in order of the number of outlets. [63774]

Mr. Banks: Details on retailers are not held by the Department and are an operational matter for Camelot Group plc. I have therefore asked the Director General of the National Lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the Lottery, to write to my hon. Friend. Copies of his response will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Millennium Holiday

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what arrangements he has made to notify (a) the Home Office, (b) the DTI, (c) the CBI and (d) the Library that Friday 31 December 1999 will be a public holiday. [63708]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 15 December 1998]: The Government Departments referred to, and the CBI, were among the many organisations included in a consultation exercise carried out by my Department early this year, in order to establish that the proposal for an additional Bank Holiday on 31 December 199 was widely supported. The additional holiday was announced in the House on 3 June 1998, Official Report, column 218, and a press notice was issued on the same day. This was copied to interested Government Departments, and the announcement was widely covered in the media.

HM Nautical Almanac Office holds definitive information on public holidays, and provides an information service based at the National Maritime Museum in Greenwich.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list (a) the (i) task forces, (ii) review panels and (iii) advisory groups his Department has, (b) the remit of each and (c) the members of each together with their principal employment and their level of remuneration. [62817]

Mr. Mandelson: My Department has a large number of task forces, review panels and advisory groups.

I have arranged for the information requested for each of these groups to be placed in the Library of the House as soon as it is practicable.

In addition my Department publishes the names of all those appointed to its Nationalised Industries and its executive and advisory non-departmental public bodies on the Public Appointments Website (www.open.gove.uk/pau/paupoint.htm). This information was last updated as of 30 September 1998 and includes the date of appointment and remuneration. I placed a copy of the full list in the Libraries of both Houses in reply to a question tabled by my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) on 26 October 1998, to which I replied on 28 October 1998, Official Report, column 194.

Whales and Dolphins

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Government have to assess the cumulative impact of oil developments in the Atlantic Frontier on the breeding, feeding and migration of whales and dolphins in the area. [63054]

Mr. Battle: I understand from the Joint Nature Conservation Committee (JNCC—the Government's statutory advisers on environment matters) that there is no evidence of petroleum developments in the Atlantic Frontier or any other part of the UK Continental Shelf having had any impact on marine mammals. Nevertheless, the Offshore Petroleum Production and Pipe-lines (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1998 require that the cumulative impact of any relevant project on the UKCS should be assessed before any decision about the granting of consent for that project is taken.

Postal Services

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will establish an inquiry into the performance of Royal Mail postal services in rural areas; and if he will make a statement. [63150]

Mr. Ian McCartney: No. Operational responsibility for the performance of Royal Mail postal services nationally rests with the Post Office Board and management. However, under the package of reforms announced last week on 7 December 1998, Official Report, columns 21–39, to give the Post Office greater commercial freedom, there will also be a new independent Regulator and a strengthened role for the Post Office Users' National Council to protect customer interests, including standards of service and universal service commitments.

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of change in the quality of postal services in rural areas in the past three years in terms of the time of day by which deliveries are made. [63869]

Mr. Ian McCartney: None. Operational responsibility for postal delivery times and arrangements in rural areas and towns rests with the Post Office Board and management. Under the package of reforms announced last week, on 7 December 1998, Official Report, columns 21–39, to give the Post Office greater commercial freedom, there will be a new independent Regulator and a strengthened role for the Post Office Users' National Council to protect customer interests, including standards of service, and universal service commitments.

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on target delivery times for postal rounds in rural areas. [63885]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The target delivery times for postal rounds are set by the Post Office. Royal Mail aim to complete deliveries in rural areas by 2.00pm and in towns to complete first deliveries by 9.30am and to complete second deliveries by 2.00pm.

WS9 Turbofan

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when an export licence for the export to China of designs for a military aircraft engine now known as the WS9 turbofan was granted. [62920]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 9 December 1998]: I understand that the Spey engine was produced in China, under an agreement with Rolls-Royce, under the name of the WS9 turbofan between 1976 and 1979. As the then Minister for Trade said on 27 October 1995, Official Report, column 837, up to July 1991, all export licence application papers were destroyed after six years. Therefore details of any licence issued for the export of the designs in connection with that production agreement are no longer available.

ECGD

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those nations of the Arabian peninsula, the Middle East and Central Asia in which ECGD (a) short term and (b) long term and project cover (i) is not currently available but is under review and (ii) is currently available and the dates on which such cover was agreed. [62917]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 9 December 1998]: The markets where ECGD is on cover for (a) short term and (b) long term and project cover and the dates which such cover was agreed are as follows:

Country	(a) Short term [1]	(b) Long term [2]	Date cover agreed
Azerbaijan	Yes	Yes	Agreed—June 1996
Bahrain	Yes	Yes	Last Reviewed—August 1996
Egypt	Yes	Yes	Agreed December 1993—Last Review October 1998
Israel	Yes	Yes	Last Reviewed—April 1998
Jordan	Yes	Yes	Agreed—October 1995
Kazakhstan	Yes	Yes	Agreed—August 1993
Kuwait	Yes	Yes	Agreed—1991
Lebanon	Yes	Yes	Agreed—1994
Oman	Yes	Yes	Last Review—ongoing
Qatar	Yes	Yes	Last Review—1997
Saudia Arabia	Yes	Yes	Last Review—November 1998
Syria	Yes	No	ST agreed—1993
Turkmenistan	Yes	Yes	Agreed—May 1994
United Arab Emirates	Yes	Yes	Last Review—January 1994
Uzbekistan	Yes	Yes	Agreed—April 1994
West Bank and Gaza	Yes	Yes	Agreed—November 1996
Yemen	Yes	No	ST agreed—November 1997

[1] Short Term refers to sales of capital goods or projects on cash terms of repayment. Short Term consumer goods are covered by the Private Sector.
[2] Long Term refers to the general availability of medium and long term cover for the sales of capital goods.

The markets where either (a) or (b) are not currently provided, and cover is under review are:

Iran—long term cover is under review, short term cover has been provided since July 1998.

Kyrgyzstan—Currently no cover, but under review

In addition:

Iraq—ECGD is off cover for Iraq for all facilities.

Tajikistan—No cover available.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which countries have asked for a rescheduling of Export Credits Guarantee Department loans or interest in 1998; in respect of what sums the rescheduling has been requested; what the dates of such requests were; and if such requests have been agreed. [62918]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 9 December 1998]: Debts owed to ECGD are rescheduled through the auspices of the Paris Club. During 1998 the following countries sought and successfully negotiated debt reschedulings in Paris:

Country	Date of Paris Agreement	ECGD debt rescheduled
Cote d'Ivoire	23 April	10,456,000
Uganda	24 April	14,003,000
Mozambique	25 May	2,700,000
Senegal	17 June	2,630,000
Indonesia	23 September	260,000,000
Central African Republic	25 September	461,000
Bosnia	28 October	5,000,000
Bolivia	30 October	48,393,000
Russia	A recent request has still to be discussed

The Paris Club will shortly consider a request from Nicaragua in the wake of Hurricane Mitch. On 10 November the Chancellor and the International Development Secretary announced a willingness to explore, with other creditors, some kind of moratorium on debt for Nicaragua and Honduras.

Animal Welfare

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he plans to take to persuade EU partners to include among the EU's objectives for the next round of World Trade Organisation negotiations the need to revise the rules of the WTO and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade to take greater account of animal welfare standards; and if he will make a statement. [63490]

Mr. Wilson: The Government are committed to improving animal welfare standards. At the Amsterdam Summit last year, we achieved our goal of giving animal welfare a special place in the European Union's priorities, formalised in a Treaty Protocol.

We will need to consult our EU partners closely to consider whether and how best to get the issue on the agenda for the expected new round of negotiations. This will not be easy. There are no widely accepted international animal welfare standards. The WTO is not a standards making body, and developing countries would see any attempt to impose such standards through the WTO as protectionist. Any EU proposal will have to take full account of their legitimate concerns.

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he plans to take to ensure that EU producers are not placed at a competitive disadvantage in respect of imports from countries with lower animal welfare standards; and if he will make a statement. [63489]

Mr. Wilson: As a result of initiatives we took in our Presidency, the European Commission has been charged with producing a report by June 1999 considering the relationship between EU and third country farm animal welfare standards. If the problem is not soluble under current world trade rules, the EU may need to raise the issue as part of the comprehensive trade negotiations we hope will start in 2000. However, the Government will be determined to avoid imposing EU standards unfairly on developing country producers.

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received regarding the impact on animal welfare measures of the rules of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and the World Trade Organisation; and if he will make a statement. [63491]

Mr. Wilson: Since the beginning of September, my Department has received more than 200 letters from MPs and members of the public on this matter. I have also met with animal welfare groups to discuss the issues.

Coal Industry

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much of the British Coal Corporation's exceptional restructuring costs listed in the answer to the hon. Member for Teignbridge of 11 November 1998, Official Report, columns 223–24, was spent on redundancy payments in each year from 1979–80 to 1997–98. [63346]

Mr. Battle: The following table sets out expenditure by British Coal Corporation over the period 1987 to 1994 on redundancy payments to industrial workers. Prior to 1987 redundancy payments to coal miners were not made by British Coal Corporation but were made under the Government's Redundant Mineworkers' Payments Scheme.

[1] Management records of British Coal Redundancy Arrangements 1987–1994. Figures are on a calendar year basis.

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the average redundancy payment made to coal miners made redundant in each year from 1979–80 to 1997–98. [63347]

Mr. Battle: Prior to 1987 redundancy payments to coal miners were made under the Government's Redundant Mineworkers' Payments Scheme. These payments comprised lump sums plus ongoing weekly benefit for those over a certain age who remained unemployed. It is therefore not possible to calculate meaningful average redundancy payments to coal miners made redundant over that period. From April 1987 British Coal Corporation became responsible for its industrial redundancy arrangements and this comprised a system of lump sum payments only. The following table sets out the average redundancy payment made by British Coal Corporation to redundant colliery industrial workers over the period 1987 to 1994. These figures are on a calendar year basis.

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many coal miners were made redundant in each year from 1979–80 to 1997–98. [63345]

Mr. Battle: The following table sets out the number of coal miners made redundant from British Coal Corporation over the period 1979/80 up to privatisation in December 1994. Comparable data on redundancies after December 1994 are not readily available.

Year	Number of redundancies [1]

Energy Saving

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received regarding claims about energy saving by British Gas Trading Ltd. in promotional material. [64004]

Mr. Battle: Neither the Secretary of State nor I have received representations regarding energy saving claims by British Gas Trading Ltd. in its promotional material.

Baby Jag

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what grants or other assistance have been given or promised by his Department or by the European Commission to (a) Ford and (b) its suppliers in connection with the new manufacturing and assembly lines for the Baby Jag. [63985]

Mr. Battle: To secure the X400 investment for Halewood, Jaguar—a wholly owned subsidiary of Ford Motor Company—was offered a support package made up of £40 million Regional Selective Assistance (RSA) and up to a £3 million contribution from the local partners. No offer of support has been made to the suppliers for the X400 project.

Supermarkets (Prices)

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his oral statement of 9 December 1998, Official Report, columns 289–95, from whom the report published by Verdict Research was commissioned; and if he will place a copy of the report in the Library. [63997]

Dr. Howells: Verdict Research Limited Publishes a range of reports on the retailing sector. Their Report "Verdict on Grocers and Supermarkets 1999" was published on 7 December 1998 and copies are available from the publishers (price £890). Verdict Research reports provide independent analysis of retail sectors, key companies and trends. During the debate I quoted from Verdict's news release on their report and I shall arrange for copies of this news release to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Minimum Wage

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the representations received by his Department on the draft national minimum wage regulations concerning the level of the proposed accommodation deduction, indicating the balance of opinions submitted on the level of the proposed amount; and if he will make a statement. [63781]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Representations on the draft National Minimum Wage Regulations dealing with the level of deductions allowable for accommodation provided by the employer were received, by 6 November, the end of the consultation exercise, from the following:

Abbeyfield Society
ABTA
Acorn Ventures Limited
Action with Communities in Rural England
Action Centres UK
Association of British Riding Schools
B & N Housing
Brathay Hall Trust
Hampshire Care Association
Hothorpe Hall
Kingswood Group
L'Arche
MENCAP
British Activity Holidays Association
British Chamber of Commerce
Brewers & Licensed Retailers Association
British Horse Society
British Hospitality Association
Experience UK Limited
FRES
NCVO
Outward Bound Trust
PGL Travel Limited
Whiteley Homes Trust
YHA.

Few of those who responded to the exercise said that they would like the offset to be increased. We are currently considering the representations and will present the regulations to Parliament for approval shortly.

Chechnya

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library the written advice his Department gives to British companies considering contracts in Chechnya. [63630]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 14 December 1998]: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd) on 14 December 1998, Official Report, columns 402–03, and to the written travel advice which he placed in the Library of the House. If asked, the Department advises all companies travelling to destinations about which there may be concern to contact the Foreign Office for advice about travel.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice his Department gave to Granger Telecom, Surrey in respect of the safety of British Nationals working in Chechnya. [63629]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The Department did not receive a request from Granger Telecom for advice in respect of the safety of Granger's British staff working in Chechnya. Had such a request been received, the Department's officials would have referred Granger Telecom to the Foreign Office for travel advice.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date his Department was informed of negotiations relating to the contract between Granger Telecom, Surrey and Chechen Telecom. [63628]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 14 December 1998]: There is no record of Granger Telecom having informed the Department about negotiations relating to its contract with Chechen Telecom.

Credit Reference Agencies

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to review the rules and regulations in the Consumer Credit Act 1974 governing the granting of licences to credit reference agencies. [64078]

Dr. Howells: I have no current plans to review the rules and regulations governing the granting of licences to credit reference agencies. However, I am pleased to announce that later this month I will publish a consultation paper on the changes in Regulations needed to put the supervision of rights of individuals and sole traders on access to their credit reference files unequivocally under the Data Protection Registrar. This replaces the dual supervision by the Director General of Fair Trading and the DPR which currently exists under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 and the Data Protection Act 1984. It will complete the regulatory changes on this issue introduced in the Data Protection Act 1998. The change will also give sole traders the clear right to see their credit reference files, rather than the conditional right they currently have. The paper will also set out proposals for making clearer the statements of rights borrowers receive on correcting wrong information held on their files.

Freephone Numbers

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research his Department has undertaken to ascertain the impact upon business of changes proposed to the system of freephone numbers by OFTEL. [63521]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The administration of the National Numbering Scheme is a matter for Oftel. Oftel has consulted extensively on changes to numbering arrangements. The National Numbering Scheme was established following public consultation. Oftel's proposals to change freephone numbers, in line with the Scheme, were the subject of a separate consultation earlier this year and conclusions have yet to be reached.

Demand for freephone numbers increased by over 50 per cent. in 1998, compared to 1997. Oftel believes that a change to freephone numbers is necessary as it will shortly run out of 0800 blocks of numbers.

Departmental Visits

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many officials of his Department visited Chile in each year since 1990. [64021]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 15 December 1998]: Central records are not held for the years preceding 1995; however, the following figures are available for 1995 and subsequent years:

Year	Number
1995	3
1996	6
1997	6

Inward Investment (North-West)

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the inward investment projects in the North West which have (a) commenced operation and (b) been announced since May 1997. [64217]

Mrs. Roche: There is no requirement to notify projects to the Department. The list includes only those projects where the Department's Invest in Britain Bureau and its regional partners were involved or which have come to their notice. It does not include projects where the company has requested commercial confidentiality. It is based on information provided by the companies at the time of the announcement of the decision to invest in the UK. It takes no account of subsequent developments.

Civil Aerospace Research

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to promote British civil aerospace research and development; and if he will make a statement. [64243]

Mr. Battle: The Department has maintained a close dialogue with the aerospace industry concerning the support available for civil research which has been provided under the Department's Civil Aviation Research and Technology Demonstration (CARAD) Programme. Plans for the future promotion of research await decisions about detailed DTI budget allocations in future years.

Support has been provided by the Government for development of civil aerospace projects in the form of repayable risk-sharing investment known as Launch Investment. Applications for Launch Investment will be considered on their merits and against competing demands on public expenditure.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what sums his Department spent on the civil aerospace research and development programme in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [64245]

Mr. Battle: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer given to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) on 7 December 1998, Official Report, columns 67–68.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are his Department's (a) current and (b) planned levels of spending on the civil aerospace research and development programme; and if he will make a statement. [64244]

Mr. Battle: The budget for the Department's Civil Aviation Research and Technology Demonstration (CARAD) Programme for the current financial year is £21,102,000. No decisions have yet been made about detailed DTI budget allocations in future years.

Industrial Tribunal Claims

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the backlog of claims to industrial tribunals in respect of pension rights for part-time workers to have been dealt with. [64234]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Progress on these pension cases has been stayed pending the outcome of a further referral to the European Court of Justice in January 1998. When the outcome of this referral is known, the cases will be processed in accordance with directions given by the Presidents of Employment Tribunals.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many industrial tribunal claims relating to part-time workers' pension rights have been initiated since the European Court of Justice decision of September 1994; and how many have been settled. [64232]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Following the judgment of the European Court of Justice in September 1994 approximately 42,000 cases have been registered claiming part-time worker pension rights. The pension cases are not identified separately in the records of the Employment Tribunals, therefore, information is not available on the number of cases that have been settled.

Clergy (Employment Rights)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has for legislation which will affect the employment rights of clergy. [63711]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Fairness at Work White Paper contained a proposal for an order making power enabling the Government to extend the coverage of employment legislation to categories of workers not currently covered. It also indicated that the Government would consult fully on specific changes before exercising this power. The position of the clergy is one of the matters to which consideration will be given during the course of this consultative process.

Israel

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library the reports he has received from the IAEA concerning the (a) Negev Nuclear Research Centre in Dimona, (b) Nahal Soreq, (c) Yodefat, (d) Klar Zokhayra, (e) Eilabin, (f) Haifa (Yelloweake) and (g) Rehovot (Heavy Water) plants in Israel. [62667]

Mr. Battle: The only Israeli plant subject to IAEA safeguards inspections is Nahal Soreq. The IAEA have published only one report concerning this plant, a 1993 report entitled 'The Radiological Accident in Soreq'. I will be placing a copy of this report in the Library of the House.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library the reports he has received from the IAEA concerning the (a) Al Tuwaitha, (b) Al Quan, (c) Al Jesira, (d) Akashot, (e) Al Qa Qaa, (f) Al Athaar, (g) Al Hadre, (h) Roshdiya and (j) Ash Sharqat plants in Iraq. [62666]

Mr. Battle: The Iraqi Action Team of the IAEA have published twenty-nine reports covering their short-term safeguards inspections in the period 1991–1995. Since then they have published a further six six-monthly consolidated reports. My officials have ordered copies of these reports from the IAEA in Vienna and I will place these in the Library of the House once I have received them in the New Year.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the provision of regional selective assistance in euros. [64552]

Mr. Mandelson: With effect from 1 January 1999, recipients of Regional Selective Assistance (in Northern Ireland, Selective Financial Assistance) for internationally mobile investment will be given the option of having their grants denominated in euro where it is to the country's competitive advantage to do so. This will particularly help those companies which trade internationally and who may find it convenient to use the euro a common planning currency. It shows that the UK is well prepared for companies dealing in the euro and will help ensure that the UK remains the most favoured venue for foreign direct investment in the EU.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Terminator Gene Technology

11. Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the potential impact of terminator gene technology on developing countries. [62753]

Mr. Foulkes: My Department is currently undertaking a wide-ranging review of the implications of all aspects of genetically modified organisms for poor farmers in developing countries.

Our Government are strong supporters of a Bio Safety protocol which would establish standards to regulate the development and release of genetically modified organisations world wide.

Sustainable Projects

13. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she has taken to ensure that the objective of sustainability is included in UK aid programmes. [62755]

Clare Short: Sustainable development is crucial to the elimination of poverty and is central to the Government's policy on international development. My Department applies rigorous procedures to ensure that the projects and programmes we support have clear sustainable outcomes which benefit poor people.

We seek to work in partnership with recipient countries committed to pro-poor policies and explore with them how assistance will be economically and financially sustainable in the long term. This includes promoting effective planning of government expenditure and revenue, reduction of debt to sustainable levels and sustainable use of environmental resources.

HIV/AIDS

14. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the work undertaken by her Department to prevent the spread of AIDS and HIV in the developing world. [62756]

18. Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what initiatives her Department has taken to combat the spread of HIV and AIDS in developing countries. [62761]

Clare Short: We are supporting national programmes in 39 developing countries. We are also working in collaboration with UNAIDS and other UN agencies in co-ordinated efforts. And we are funding research into development of new methods of protection against HIV, providing subsidised contraceptives and programmes to encourage safe sex, and supporting the development of an HIV/AIDS vaccine by contributing to the International Aids Vaccine Initiative.

24. Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action her Department has taken to help prevent the spread of HIV in sub-Saharan Africa. [62767]

Clare Short: We are working to prevent the spread of AIDS and HIV in sub-Saharan Africa through contributions to the work of UNAIDS, the EC and international non-governmental organisations such as the International Planned Parenthood Federation. We have significant programmes with national governments in Kenya, Malawi, Nigeria, South Africa, Tanzania, Uganda, Zambia and Zimbabwe. We are also funding research into the development of new methods of protection against HIV, providing subsidised contraceptives and programmes to encourage safe sex, and supporting the development of an HIV/AIDS vaccine, by contributing to the International Aids Vaccine Initiative.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of her Department's budget is allocated to HIV and AIDS projects. [64174]

Clare Short: In calendar year 1997, 3.6 per cent. of the UK overseas development assistance (£73 million) was invested in reproductive health, excluding expenditure through the EC and the World Bank, which we are unable to dis-aggregate. Much of our spending on improving basic healthcare systems will also bring benefits to people with HIV and AIDS. We estimate that around 40 per cent. of this sum was invested in work which related directly to HIV/AIDS.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has made to the World Bank to increase support for HIV/AIDS vaccine development. [64182]

Clare Short: My officials meet regularly with counterparts in the World Bank to encourage them in their support for HIV/AIDS vaccine development through International Aids Vaccine Initiative (IAVI) and other channels. The latest of these meetings took place in Washington in November.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on progress made on establishing an HIV/AIDS vaccine purchase fund. [64183]

Clare Short: The World Bank is considering how best to establish a global HIV/AIDS vaccine purchase fund for the long term benefit of the poorest, most affected countries. Consultations continue with Governments and a range of profit and not-for-profit groups such as the International Aids Vaccine Initiative. Britain is committed to supporting the development of a safe and effective vaccine and to creating the conditions which make it affordable and accessible to affected developing countries.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list (a) by project and (b) by country the (i) HIV and AIDS and (ii) education projects her Department supports. [64180]

Clare Short: We provide direct support for HIV/AIDS activities in 39 Countries, intensively in ten of these. A list will be placed in the Library of the House. It does not include HIV/AIDS activities supported through multilateral institutions such as United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), the World Bank and World Health Organisation (WHO), all of whom receive funding from the British Government.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has made to the Governments of G8 countries to support the International Aids Vaccine Initiative. [64179]

Clare Short: We regularly encourage G8 counterparts to contribute to HIV/AIDS vaccine development through International Aids Vaccine Initiative (IAVI). We took the latest opportunity available for us in the margins of a meeting last week of the UNAIDS Programme Co-ordinating Board in Delhi.

Bangladesh

15. Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid her Department is currently providing to Bangladesh. [62757]

Clare Short: We have a substantial programme in Bangladesh and expect to invest around £67 million in 1998–99. This includes £45 million for our normal bilateral co-operation activities, of which more than half is spent on direct poverty assistance, with projects in health and education, micro-credit, employment generation, and food production. Other projects target infrastructure development, and public sector reform. We are also providing £22 million additional assistance this year to assist recovery from the recent devastating floods.

AIDS (South Africa)

16. Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to assist the South African Government in combating AIDS. [62758]

Clare Short: South Africa is one of the countries most badly affected by HIV/AIDS. The rate of new infections is estimated at 1,500 per day and 2.5 million people are already infected. South Africa's leaders are beginning to take the issue seriously and support for AIDS control and preventions is a priority for our development partnership. But the challenge also requires regional action and we are discussing with governments, UNAIDS and the European Commission how to intensify our support for sexual and reproductive health to develop more effective national and regional programmes.

Non-governmental Organisations

17. Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the role of NGOs in the delivery of aid. [62759]

Clare Short: NGOs have a very important role to play, along with other elements of civil society, in helping deliver programmes and in raising awareness of the needs and rights of poor people in both developing countries and Britain.

EC Development Assistance

19. Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department is taking to improve the quality of EC development assistance. [62762]

Clare Short: We have recently published our strategy for improving the quality of EC development assistance. It has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. It was prepared in consultation with a wide range of interested bodies. The paper sets out 18 detailed objectives for the Department for International Development (DFID) for its partnership with the EC. The main focus is on: improving the poverty focus of the EC's programmes, in particular through forthcoming decisions on resource allocation; rationalising the Commission's organisation structure for managing external assistance, and strengthening staffing; improving aid management systems and harmonising and streamlining procedures to increase the developmental impact of the EC's programmes; and strengthening coordination and collaboration between the Commission, member states and other donors, within a framework managed by beneficiary countries.

DFID will work with other member states, the Commission, the European Parliament and the Court of Auditors in pursuit of these objectives. We are committed to maximising the effectiveness of the EC's work to promote international development. Our approach will, as in the past, be informed by discussions with beneficiary countries, NGOs, the private sector and the academic community.

Nepal

20. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will assist programmes of good governance in Nepal; and if she will make a statement. [62763]

Clare Short: We are assisting programmes of good governance in Nepal and hope to do more in the future. Nepal's new democracy has led to increasing recognition of the need for fundamental reforms to bring about more effective government. The Government's plans for decentralisation may lead to improvements. We shall be looking at ways in which we can support this. We believe that Government and donors need to do more to empower the people to pursue their basic rights. The success of the national community forestry programme demonstrates that the right combination of legislative reform, administrative change and empowerment has great potential for changing the lives of the disadvantaged. This is part of DFID's strategy which we recently published in the Nepal Country Strategy Paper, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Hurricane Mitch

21. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the findings of the experts from her Department on the reconstruction needs of those central American countries affected by Hurricane Mitch which they visited. [62764]

Clare Short: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Halton (Mr. Twigg) on 3 December 1998, Official Report, column 238.

Debt Relief

22. Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what efforts she has made to involve the churches in raising awareness of the links between debt relief and the eradication of poverty. [62765]

Clare Short: I am in regular touch with churches and representatives of other faiths on this important issue. I addressed the General Synod of the Church of England on 18 November, and called for us to join forces to construct a world-wide alliance of world faiths for the elimination of poverty during the next century. In this speech I made plain the Government's support for faster and deeper debt relief in the right circumstances. But I also make it clear that debt relief was no "magic bullet" to end all poverty, as some campaigners appear to believe. Nor should debt relief be unconditional or unilateral. Not all poor countries need debt relief, and where it is needed it should go only to those countries which are committed to the eradication of poverty. This approach has been fully endorsed by church groups and NGOs.

Crises Assistance (International Co-ordination)

23. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made in the last 12 months on international co-ordination of assistance in response to crisis situations. [62766]

Clare Short: The United Nations' Secretary General's Track II reform process has led to improvements in inter-agency joint working and co-ordination within the international community: the UK has strongly supported this process.

The UK continues to play an important role in supporting the United Nation's disaster assessment and co-ordination (UNDAC) mechanism, including hosting, organising and contributing to disaster assessment, co-ordination and response training events, and regularly providing and meeting the costs of UK experts on UNDAC missions.

We are also working with the International Red Cross movement to strengthen their capacity to respond to emergency situations within the context of an internationally co-ordinated response system. We are also backing the efforts of non-governmental organisations to develop a code of conduct and minimum standards for humanitarian response.

Sudan

25. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made towards providing a corridor of tranquillity in Sudan. [62769]

Clare Short: The Inter-Governmental Authority on Development (IGAD) Technical Committee on Humanitarian Affairs met on 16 to 18 November 1998. An agreement on the operational standards for rail corridors and cross-line road corridors was signed by the Government of Sudan, the Sudan Peoples Liberation Movement and the UN. Further work is being undertaken to put this agreement into effect.

Child Labour

26. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she is taking to promote the outlawing of child labour. [62770]

Clare Short: We are supporting the International LabourOrganisation's work aimed at producing a new International Convention on the Worst Forms of Child Labour which we hope will be agreed by all members of the ILO at the International Labour Conference in June 1999. This will cover forms of labour which enslave, corrupt, maim and kill children and young people under the age of 18.

We are also working with developing country governments and international organisations to help tackle the problem in practical ways because in many countries despite laws against child labour, children from very poor families—often female headed—work as a result of extreme poverty. Programmes are needed to enable their parents to work for a better income and to provide schooling for children. Examples include a project in Sialkot to provide social support for children leaving the football stitching industry. We are also discussing with ILO's International Programme for the Elimination of Child Labour a possible programme on child labour in small-scale mining in Tanzania. Earlier this year we provided a grant of $1 million to IPEC to help take forward their programmes.

Kosovo

27. Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her Department's humanitarian work in Kosovo. [62771]

Clare Short: We have worked closely with international organisations, such as United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), to ensure that the humanitarian needs of those affected by the conflict in Kosovo are met. We have so far provided £3 million for this purpose.

A Department for International Development mission visited the Former Republic of Yugoslavia and Albania between 16–26 November to assess conditions on the ground and the state of aid co-ordination. A humanitarian disaster has been averted, but the situation remains serious and must be monitored carefully. The internally displaced persons who were living out of doors are now back under shelter. The international response is generally adequate to meet current emergency needs of displaced people and refugees for food, blankets, stoves, mattresses and fuels. It is vital that this current level of humanitarian operations be maintained.

AIDS (Africa)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proposals she has to promote support through market mechanisms for research on pharmaceutical products to combat AIDS in Africa. [62754]

Clare Short: Finding safe and effective vaccines, microbicides that prevent sexual infection and low cost means to reduce mother to child transmission are vital elements of efforts to reduce the spread of HIV/AIDS. The UK is supporting national and international initiatives to establish incentives for product discovery and product development in poor countries. Left to themselves, market forces will not develop products for the poorest countries. The UK is collaborating with the World Bank in exploring and devising market support mechanisms necessary for industry to engage in developing vaccines and other products of benefit to the poorer countries. This work is still in its early stages.

Colombia

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has received on the situation of street children in Colombia. [64178]

Clare Short: I have not received any representations on the specific situation of street children in Colombia. However, I recognise the severe problems faced by street children. In Colombia we provide support for two street children projects through the DFID Small Grants Scheme and through our Joint Funding Scheme supports a Save the Children Fund project aimed at improving regional policy towards child rights.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the projects that her Department is supporting in Colombia. [64181]

Clare Short: The projects that DFID currently support in Colombia are as follows:

Groundwater Pollution Control Project;

Integrated Coffee Pest Management;

SENA Post Fruit Handling;

Efficiency Unit Project;

London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine—link on a programme to assess intensive care provision.

We also provide funding for technical co-operation training, Chevening awards, and through DFID's Joint Funding Scheme and the DFID Small Grants Scheme which is administered by the British Embassy in Bogota.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list (a) the countries she has visited since 1 May 1997, (b) the duration of her stay in those countries and (c) the cost of travel to those countries. [63542]

Clare Short: Ministers are required under the terms of the Ministerial Code always to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements. The rules on travel for Ministers are the same as those that applied under the previous Administration. The details requested are as follows:

Country	Duration	Cost (£)	Purpose

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to include Irish as a category in her Department's ethnic monitoring of staff recruitment. [63881]

Clare Short: Monitoring in this area is based on ethnic origin and not nationality. The ethnic origin categories monitored by my Department are those used in the 1991 census which did not include an Irish category. They will be reviewed in the light of any suggested changes for the 2001 Population Census.

Maternal Health Projects

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list (a) by project and (b) by country, the maternal health projects her Department supports. [64173]

Clare Short: We directly support maternal health projects and programmes in around 20 countries, mainly in South Asia and Sub-Saharan Africa. A list will be placed in the Libraries of the House. It includes support for national safe motherhood programmes in Malawi and Nepal. It does not, however, include the maternal health work of multilateral organisations such as the World Health Organisation, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Population Fund, the European Community and the World Bank, or international civil society groups such as the International Planned Parenthood Federation, all of which receive substantial support from the UK's Department for International Development.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of her Department's budget is allocated to improving maternal health in developing countries. [64177]

Clare Short: In calendar year 1997, 3.6 per cent. of the UK overseas development assistance (£73 million) was invested in reproductive health, excluding expenditure through the EC and the World Bank, which we are unable to dis-aggregate. We estimate that around 15 per cent. of this spend was invested directly in reducing the dangers of pregnancy and childbirth. But clearly our spending on improving basic healthcare systems also benefit material health. We are reforming the Department's management information system to track all spending in relation to the International Development Goals. This will include a dedicated marker for contributions to reduced maternal mortality.

Hemp Industry

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans her Department has to support the development of the hemp industry into the production of industrial fibre. [64175]

Clare Short: While my Department has been active in the development and use of many vegetable fibre crops—e.g. jute, flax, sisal; it currently has no plans to support the hemp (Cannabis sativa) fibre industry in any developing country.

Palestinians (Aid)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is the current level of financial assistance the Government are providing to the Palestinians. [63860]

Clare Short: During the last financial year (1997–98), the Department for International Development (DFID) invested £30 million in development cooperation with the Palestinians. This comprised £16 million through DFID's direct programme in the West Bank and Gaza and contributions to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian refugees and £14 million in contributions to the EC's programmes for assistance for the Palestinians. DFID expects to spend a similar amount this financial year. In addition, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Department of Trade and Industry provided some small scale assistance totalling just over £50,000.

Ethical Trading

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the companies which have agreed to join the Ethical Trading Initiative. [64176]

Clare Short: The following companies have joined the Ethical Trading Initiative or have agreed to join and are in the process of doing so:

B&Q Plc.
CWS ("The Co-op")
J. Sainsbury Ltd.
Littlewoods
Pentland Group Plc.
Premier Brands
Reebok International Ltd.
Somerfield Stores Ltd.
Tesco
The Body Shop International.

In addition, a substantial number of other companies have expressed an interest in the Ethical Trading Initiative, especially since its annual conference which took place earlier this month, but I understand they are still deciding whether to become members. A number of NGOs and unions are also members and my Department has provided financial support to the ETI. I strongly commend all companies with supply chains in developing countries to consider joining.

Copies of ETI's base code and membership information have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Education Budgets

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of her Department's budget is spent on education projects. [64172]

Clare Short: The percentage of identifiable expenditure under my Department's bilateral programme spent on education (including scholarships) for developing countries in 1997 was 11 per cent. and is expected to be the same in 1998. It is not possible to identify the percentage of expenditure spent on education under our contributions to multilateral programmes.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

European Communities Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the vade-mecum for the European Communities budget line B2–5122. [64188]

Ms Quin: The vade-mecum for budget line B2–5122 can be found in Official Journal No. 44 (Volume 41) published on 16 February 1998, a copy of which is available in the House Library.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reason European Communities budget lines (i) B3–300 and (ii) B3–301 are not broken down by member state; what elements of these budget lines are known by his Department to have been distributed in the United Kingdom; and for what purpose. [64094]

Ms Quin: The Commission is not obliged by either Regulation or Treaty to maintain its accounts broken down by Member State for budget lines B3–300 and B3–301. the Commission is also not obliged, as a matter of course, to inform Member States which individuals or organisations have received information services or devolved funding. Official Journal No. L44 (Volume 41) published on 16 February 1998, a copy of which is available in the House Library, gives an explanation of the purpose of each Community budget line.

B3–300 covers a range of information measures including opinion polling, impact assessment, sponsored visits, publications, TV productions and internet sites. B3–301 funds, in the UK, European Document Centres in university libraries (45) and European Information Centres providing business intelligence on operating in the EU (21). The information held in these various centres generally includes UK Government publications, as well as EU documents and academic and commercial literature and databases.

European Information Association

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those publications from the European Information Association to which his Department subscribes; and if he will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library. [64093]

Ms Quin: This Department subscribes to the following European Information Association publications: European Information; EIA update. These are available in the House Library.

Treaty of Amsterdam

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the matters currently being discussed by European Community working groups which await treaty base pending the ratification of the treaty of Amsterdam; and what level of representation his Department provides to these groups. [64193]

Ms Quin: On 30 November 1998, the Presidency of the Council of Ministers published an interim progress report on the work in hand for the implementation of the Treaty of Amsterdam. This list covers work in the areas of Justice and Home Affairs, external EU relations/CFSP and Institutional questions. Work in these areas involve officials in the working groups and Ambassadors and Ministers as appropriate. I have placed a copy of the Presidency paper in the Libraries of the House.

Turkish Parliamentarians (Imprisonment)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Turkish Government on the imprisonment of (a) Mrs. Leyla Zana and (b) other members of the Turkish Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [64121]

Ms Quin: We have raised the imprisonment of Ms Zana and the other former Democracy (DEP) Party MPs with the Turkish authorities on a number of occasions. We have repeatedly stressed to the Turkish government that the prosecution of democratically elected politicians for the non-violent expression of their views is wrong, and damages Turkey's international standing.

I also refer my hon. Friend to the reply given in another place by my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State on 3 December 1998, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 596–98.

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to include Irish as a category in his Department's ethnic monitoring of staff recruitment. [63872]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The overriding principle of Civil Service recruitment procedures is that they should be fair, and selection should be on merit at each stage.

Monitoring in this area is based on ethnic origin, and not nationality. The nine ethnic origin categories monitored by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are those used in the 1991 census, which did not include an Irish category. They will be reviewed in the light of any suggested changes for the 2001 Population Census.

Dalit Community

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the Indian Government on human rights issues in relation to the Dalit community. [63867]

Mr. Fatchett: During my visit to India in November I raised human rights issues with the Indian authorities, including attacks on minority communities. I also mentioned our concerns about religious freedom and tolerance. We will continue to make clear to the Government of India our commitment to human rights.

Abdullah Ocalan

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has held with EU ministers over the arrest of Abdullah Ocalan in Italy. [63861]

Ms Quin: Prime Minister D'Alema of Italy raised the issue of the arrest of Abdullah Ocalan during his talks in London with my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 30 November.

European Union Foreign Ministers also discussed the issue briefly at the General Affairs Council in Brussels on 7 December.

Turkey

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's relations with Turkey. [63896]

Ms Quin: We attach great importance to our relations with Turkey and value our dialogue on a wide range of issues.

We have been working with the Austrian Presidency of the European Union and our EU Partners to develop the European Strategy for Turkey to enhance relations between Turkey and the Union.

Prime Ministerial Visits

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what occasions British prime ministers have visited (a) Poland, (b) Hungary, (c) the Czech Republic, (d) Slovenia and (e) Estonia in the last 10 years. [63562]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: In the last 10 years, British Prime Ministers made the following visits:

a) Poland

May 1988

May 1992

August 1994

b) Hungary

September 1990

May 1992

December 1994

c) Czech Republic

September 1990

May 1992

April 1996.

Note:

Prior to January 1993, the Czech Republic was part of Czechoslovakia.

No visits were made, in the last 10 years, to Slovenia or Estonia.

Heads of Government Visits

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received from United Kingdom embassies about the numbers and occasions of visits of heads of Government of other EU countries to (a) Poland, (b) Hungary, (c) the Czech Republic, (d) Slovenia and (e) Estonia since each of these countries submitted their formal applications for membership of the EU. [63561]

Ms Quin: British Embassies in Central Europe keep the FCO regularly informed of significant events in their host countries, including major inward visits. I am listing indicative details of visits made by heads of government of other European Union member states to the five Central European countries currently engaged in accession negotiations. The list for each applicant country covers the period since it formally applied for EU membership. Although careful efforts were made in compiling the lists to include all visits for which the FCO has records, it is possible some visits were made that are not reflected in the materials available to the FCO.

My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary place importance on developing strong bilateral relations between Britain and the countries of Central Europe. Visits at all levels play an important part in fostering these relationships. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has visited seven of the ten Central European countries that have applied for membership. He has met all his opposite numbers and has hosted all but the most recently appointed Central European Foreign Ministers.

Czech Republic

Visits by other EU Member state heads of government—since 17 January 1996

French Prime Minister, Lionel Jospin, November 1998

Luxembourg Prime Minister, Jean-Claude Juncker, August 1997

Netherlands Prime Minister, Wim Kok, March 1997

German Chancellor, Helmut Kohl, January 1997

Estonia

Visits by other EU Member state heads of government—since 24 November 1995

Irish Prime Minister, Bertie Ahern, April 1998

Italian Prime Minister, Romano Prodi, February 1998

Swedish Prime Minister, Goran Persson, December 1997

Finnish Prime Minister, Paavo Lipponen, November 1997

Swedish Prime Minister, Goran Persson, April 1996

Finnish Prime Minister, Paavo Lipponen, January 1996

Hungary

Visits by other EU Member state heads of government—since 31 March 1994

European Parliament (Elections)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 1 December 1998, Official Report, column 161, on European elections, if he will list the terms of the mandate given to the General Affairs Group by the Committee of Permanent Representatives; by whom that mandate was approved; and what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the European Parliament's proposed common principles. [64095]

Ms Quin: The Committee of Permanent Representatives made the procedural decision to ask the General Affairs Group to examine the European Parliament's proposal for common principles for European elections with a view to making recommendations to the General Affairs Council. The principle of proportional representation is in line wit the Government's plan for changes to the system for European parliamentary elections in Great Britain. The Government therefore supports the broad aim of the proposal, thought the detailed issues remain to be resolved.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the outcome of the Justice and Home Affairs Council held in Brussels on 3 and 4 December; and if he will make a statement. [63165]

Kate Hoey: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and I represented the United Kingdom at the Council. As the details of the main matters dealt with are lengthy, they have been placed in the Library.

Child Curfews

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of local child curfews which will be introduced in the next year; and if he will make a statement. [63686]

Mr. Boateng: Local child curfews are a permissive rather than a mandatory power. The decision to apply for a local child curfew scheme is one for an individual local authority. A curfew notice would be applied only where a local authority identifies a problem involving disruptive children and decides to intervene. The number of curfew notices imposed annually will therefore reflect the nature of youth crime problems as identified locally.

Local child curfews should be seen within the context of a general community safety strategy. The aim of such curfews is two fold. They will address the need to protect young children from being drawn into anti-social or criminal behaviour, and they will protect communities from the misery and distress which can be caused by groups of unsupervised children.

Law and Order

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many responses were received and from whom, to the consultation documents, "Joining Forces to Protect the Public", and "The Future Organisation of Family Courts". [63927]

Mr. Boateng: The number of responses we have received by 14 December to the two consultation documents, "Joining Forces to Protect the Public" and "The Future Organisation of Court Welfare Services", and the category within which the respondents fall, are as detailed:

Joining forces to protect the public

Category	Number of replies received
Members of Parliament	14
Probation committees and services	59
Probation representative groups	15
Sentencers, courts and associated representative organisations	48
Police forces and representative groups	18
Crown Prosecution Service	1
Other partnership agencies	16
Individual members of probation staff	9
Local Authority sources	31
Health Authorities	4
Others and the public	51
Total	266

Additionally, the Prison Service has conducted an internal consultation exercise including meetings with about 250 area managers, governors and others.

The future organisation of Court Welfare Services

Category	Number of replies received

Government departments/non-departmental public bodies	2
Voluntary organisations/partnership agencies	30
The public	10
Others/academics	8
Total	318

Some responses were submitted by one agency on behalf of interagency groups. The table illustrates the range of responses received.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total expenditure and the breakdown of expenditure in his Department since May 1997 on (a) public opinion research, (b) television, radio and newspaper advertising and (c) direct mail. [63920]

Mr. Straw: The total expenditure since May 1997 is £3,446,000, broken down as follows:

(a) public opinion research £179,000

(b) television, newspaper and radio advertising £3,267,000

(c) direct mail £ nil.

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to include Irish as a category in his Department's ethnic monitoring of staff recruitment. [63874]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is an overriding principle of Civil Service recruitment procedures that they should be fair and that selection should be on merit.

Monitoring in this area is based on ethnic origin and not nationality. The nine ethnic minority origin categories monitored by my Department are based on those used in the 1991 census which did not include Irish as a category. They will be reviewed in the light of any suggested changes for the 2001 Population Census.

Shotgun Licences

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances a shotgun licence can be revoked; what guidelines have been issued to the police concerning the revocation of shotgun licences; and if he will make a statement. [63983]

Mr. Boateng: Under section 30(c) of the Firearms Act 1968 (as amended), a shotgun certificate may be revoked by the chief officer of police for the area in which the holder resides if he is satisfied that the holder is prohibited by this Act from possessing a shotgun or cannot be permitted to possess a shotgun without danger to public safety or to the peace. The Home Office issued general guidance on this subject in the publication 'Firearms Law: Guidance to the Police' in 1989. A person aggrieved by a decision to revoke a certificate may appeal to the Crown Court against the police decision.

The Government will keep all controls on firearms under close scrutiny.

National Assembly for Wales

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which of his Department's expenditure responsibilities will be transferred to the National Assembly for Wales once that body has been established. [63658]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government of Wales Act 1998 provided for a Transfer of Functions Order to be made to transfer Ministerial functions to the National Assembly for Wales. This Order was published in draft for consultation on 12 November. Until the content of the order has been finalised, it is not possible to state with certainty what functions and associated expenditure will transfer.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what has been the cost to Essex County Council of maintaining illegal immigrants who arrived at Harwich Ferry Port in each of the last three years; [64219]

(2) what has been the cost to Kent County Council of maintaining illegal immigrants who arrived at Dover Ferry Port in each of the last three years; [64218]

(3) what has been the cost to (a) Dorset County Council and (b) Poole Borough Council of maintaining illegal immigrants who arrived at Poole Ferry Port in each of the last three years. [64220]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: This information is not available to the Home Office. The hon. Member should approach the local authority.

Illegal immigrants who do not claim asylum and who have no special needs are not eligible for support from public funds. Asylum seekers and other illegal immigrants (who are given temporary leave to enter) who are not otherwise detained and who are able to support themselves are free to live within the United Kingdom in a place of their own choosing. Asylum seekers who register their application for asylum at their port of entry may be eligible for Income Support and Housing Benefit and can then find their own accommodation. Asylum seekers who do not qualify for benefits but who may be supported under the terms of the National Assistance Act 1948 or the Children Act 1989 are supported by local authorities under the terms of that legislation. The Home Office currently has no role in providing support and is consequently not aware of the information sought. The Government plan a fundamental reform of the asylum and immigration laws to remove cash benefits and more strictly control where asylum seekers live.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many illegal immigrants who arrived at (a) Dover, (b) Harwich, (c) Portsmouth and (d) Newhaven are currently being detained; and what the equivalent figures were for each of the last six months. [64238]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information relating to the numbers of persons detained solely under Immigration Act powers, as at 14 December 1998, who have been served with a notice of illegal entry is that: 140 of those persons had been issued with illegal entry papers by the South East Ports Surveillance Team based at Dover; 5 by immigration officers at Harwich; 5 at Portsmouth; and none at Newhaven. Information relating to the previous six months could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many citizens of (a) Albania, (b) Bulgaria, (c) Hungary, (d) Macedonia and (e) Romania are currently being detained in the United Kingdom as illegal immigrants; and what the equivalent figures were for each of the last three years. [64241]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many illegal immigrants at (a) Portsmouth, (b) Newhaven, (c) Harwich and (d) Plymouth ferry ports have been refused entry and removed from the United Kingdom within seven days of arrival in each of the last 12 months. [64239]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information relating to the numbers of persons removed or departing voluntarily within seven days of being issued with a notice of illegal entry by the requested ports which issued the notices, between 1 July 1997 and 30 June 1998, is given in the table.

Number of illegal entrants recorded as removed or departing voluntarily [1] within 7 days of being issued with notice of illegal entry by selected port issuing notice of illegal entry July 1997 to June 1998

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many citizens of (a) Albania, (b) Hungary, (c) Macedonia, (d) Romania and (e) Slovenia have sought political asylum in the United Kingdom in the last three months; how many applications have been accepted; and what were the equivalent figures for each of the last three years. [64240]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information is given in the table.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with police forces about domestic violence; and what plans he has to ensure better police protection for women threatened by domestic violence. [63906]

Mr. Boateng: Home Office officials maintain regular contact with the lead representatives of the Association of Chief Police Officers on domestic violence.

Before too long, I expect to be able to publish two Home Office-sponsored research reports on domestic violence policing. Their recommendations and other guidance will be disseminated next year to police forces throughout England and Wales.

E-mail Service Providers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the limits on the information which the police can demand from service providers in respect of e-mail without the need to secure approval from him. [63792]

Mr. Straw: Under the Interception of Communications Act 1985, e-mail in the course of its transmission over the public telecommunications network may be intercepted only under a warrant issued by the Secretary of State or for one of the limited purposes in section 1(2) or 1(3) of the Act. E-mail held by an Internet Service Provider is subject to data protection legislation and any conditions in the service provider's licence. It is open to the police to apply for a court order in order to obtain any e-mail retained by an Internet Service Provider.

Signals Interception

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the legislative framework relating to the interception of signals connecting (a) mobile phones, (b) pagers and (c) interactive cable TV services. [63559]

Mr. Straw: The Interception of Communications Act 1985 provides that communications may lawfully be intercepted in the course of their transmission by means of a public telecommunications system only in obedience to a warrant issued by the Secretary of State or in certain other circumstances specified in section 1(2) and (3) of the Act. This applies equally to mobile and fixed public telecommunications systems and to interactive cable TV services.

The question whether a communication is, at the point of interception, on the public or the private side of a telecommunications system is a point of fact which has received some measure of clarification by the Courts. I have announced the intention to legislate to bring so-called "private side interception" within the law on interception.

Pagers operate by wireless telegraphy and, as such, are covered by section 5 of the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949. This provides that it is an offence to use Wireless Telegraphy intending to obtain information about the contents of a message, its sender or the recipient, except under the authority of the Secretary of State or in the course of a person's duty as a servant of the Crown. As police officers are not, in law, servants of the Crown in England and Wales, police applications to intercept pagers in the course of criminal investigations are warranted by the my Department under my authority.

Scotland Act 1998 (Schedule 5)

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the offices or agencies under his control which will be subject to L.2 of Head L in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998; how many people are currently employed in these offices; and what equal opportunities practices are adopted in these offices. [63794]

Mr. Straw: Schedule 5 refers to reserved matters. Work is in train to agree secondary legislation on the specification of cross-border public authorities. Until that work is completed, it is not possible to say how many people are employed in these offices or what specific equal opportunities practices are adopted. My Department is committed to a policy of equal opportunities for all staff, regardless of ethnic origin, religious belief, sex, sexual orientation, disability or any other irrelevant factor.

WALES

Coalfield Regeneration

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money is currently planned to be spent on the regeneration of coalfield communities in Wales. [62619]

Mr. Hain: The needs of deprived areas, which include communities within former coalfields, of the South Wales Valleys and North East Wales, are taken into account in the various spending programmes of the Welsh Office. Specific programmes, directed to these areas to tackle social, economic and environmental regeneration, include nearly £30 million in 1998–99 under Welsh Challenge and the Strategic Development Scheme; £337,000 in 1998–2000 on the 4 of the 8 approved "People in Communities" pilots in these areas aimed at tackling; and nearly £20 million by the WDA on reclaiming 370 hectares of land, the majority of which is in former coal mining areas. An estimated £10 million of New Deal funding for Wales is expected to be spent in the Employment Service Districts covering Welsh coalfields areas in 1998–99.

The share for Wales of the recently announced endowment in lieu of the £10 million surplus from the miners' pension fund will be used to fund further projects in former coalmining areas. The South Wales Valleys are part of the area of Wales which is set to gain Objective 1 status, bringing access to a substantial package of European aid.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Meat Imports

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ensure that imported (a) pork and (b) chicken has not been reared and fed on bonemeal or other animal by-products. [63835]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 14 December 1998]: No. The ban on meat and bonemeal in pig and chicken feed in the United Kingdom is to prevent cross contamination of ruminant feed with meat and bonemeal incorporated into feed for other farm animals. There is, therefore, no basis on which it would be reasonable to restrict imports of pig meat or chicken. However, my hon. Friend may be aware that the Government have received undertakings from the major retailers that all own label fresh pork, bacon, ham and sausages sold in their supermarkets will come from meat and bonemeal (and stall and tether) free production systems.

Eggs

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many visits by MAFF personnel have been undertaken to intensive egg production units since 1 May 1997; and what percentage of these have been unannounced. [63643]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 December 1998]: Visits by Ministry personnel to intensive egg production units, as distinct from packing stations, are basically those undertaken by members of the State Veterinary Service in relation to animal welfare. 272 welfare visits have been undertaken since 1 May 1997. Of these, 44 per cent. were undertaken in response to complaints or other indications that welfare may be poor, and in many cases were unannounced.

Battery Hens

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many prosecutions have taken place under the Welfare of Battery Hens Regulations 1987 since 1 May 1997. [63380]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 December 1998]: The provisions originally set out in these regulations are now included in Schedule 1 of the Welfare of Livestock Regulations 1994 (SI 2126). This Department has concluded two prosecutions under that Schedule since 1 May 1997. Records of prosecutions taken by other bodies such as local authorities and the RSPCA are not kept centrally.

New Forest Fox Hounds

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Forestry Commission has found that the New Forest Fox Hounds were in breach of their licence as a result of events on 3 November. [62247]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 3 December 1998]: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by Forest Enterprise and I have asked its Chief Executive to reply to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from Bob McIntosh to Mr. Desmond Swayne, dated 16 December 1998:

I am writing in reply to your Parliamentary Question (No 62247) addressed to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, regarding the hunting incident in the New Forest on 3 November 1998.

The Forestry Commission considers that the New Forest Fox Hounds were in breach of their licence conditions on 3 November. We have agreed with the Masters of Foxhounds Association a clarification of the particular condition that the Hunt breached to ensure that there can be no ambiguity in the event of any future occurrence.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the effect of the introduction of an age addition of £3 in the basic state pension for those aged between 75 and 79 years and £5 in the basic state pension for those aged over 80, and corresponding increases in the rates of premiums for means-tested benefits on (a) gross benefits expenditure, (b) net benefits expenditure and (c) income tax revenues. [62870]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 8 December 1998]: The information is in the table.

Full year expenditure and revenue effects of age additions in 1999–2000

£ million

	£5 age addition for 80 and over and £3 age addition for 75–79
Expenditure on Retirement Pension	910
Expenditure on means tested benefit	210
Net benefit cost	700
Income tax offsets	−60

Notes:

1. Estimates for Retirement Pension have been provided by the Government Actuary's Department.
2. Estimates for income tax revenues have been provided by Inland Revenue.
3. Means-tested benefit expenditure has been estimated using the 1995–96 Family Resources Survey uprated to 1999–2000 prices and benefits levels.
4. Estimates are in 1999–2000 prices and benefit rates, and are rounded to the nearest £10 million.
5. + cost, − savings.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the effect of the introduction of an age addition to the basic state pension of £5 per week for those aged between 75 and 79 years and £10 per week for those aged over 80, on (a) gross benefits expenditure, (b) net benefits expenditure and (c) income tax revenues. [62871]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 8 December 1998]: The information requested is in the table.

Full year expenditure and revenue effects of age additions in 1999/2000

£ million

	£10 age addition for 80 and over and £5 age addition for 75–79
Expenditure on Retirement Pension	1,760
Means-tested benefit offsets	−580
Net benefit cost	1,180
Income tax offsets	−120

Notes:

1. Estimates for Retirement Pension have been provided by the Government Actuary's Department.
2. Estimates for income tax revenues have been provided by Inland Revenue
3. Means-tested benefit offsets have been estimated using the 1995–96 Family Resources Survey uprated to 1999–2000 prices and benefits levels.
4. Estimates are in 1999–2000 prices and benefit rates, and are rounded to the nearest £10 million.
5. + costs, − savings.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his estimates based on Family Resources Survey 1996–97 of (a) median pensioner incomes, excluding means-tested benefits, by age, sex and marital status, consistent with his answer of 12 November 1998, Official Report, columns 295–98, and corresponding estimates of the size of each group, (b) non take-up of income support by pensioners in each age, sex and marital status group, consistent with his answer of 19 October 1998, Official Report, columns 597–98 (c) receipt of means-tested benefits and liability for income tax among pensioners, consistent with his answer of 5 November 1997, Official Report, columns 249–50 and (d) patterns of pensioner savings, consistent with his answer of 30 October 1997, Official Report, columns 850–52. [63943]

Mr. Denham: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many official visits (a) he and (b) the Ministers in his Department, have made to Buckinghamshire since 2 May 1997; and if he will list them. [64129]

Mr. Denham: None.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow) of 10 November 1998, Official Report, column 167, if people affected by motor neurone disease will be selected for reassessment under the Benefit Integrity Project, or its replacement, regardless of the rate of disability living allowance received. [64191]

Mr. Timms: The Benefit Integrity Project (BIP) has been subject to continuous review and we have made changes based on an analysis of cases showing the rate of change in entitlement. On 23 September I announced further exemptions to the BIP, including people with Motor Neurone Disease (MND) who are receiving the higher rate of the mobility component together with the highest rate of the care component of Disability Living Allowance (DLA).

We plan to replace the BIP with a new system which is part of the routine administration of the benefit and which is both sensitive and fair. We are discussing our proposals with the Disability Benefits Forum. Contact with those with MND receiving a lower rate of DLA would allow the rate to be increased if appropriate.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much the Benefits Integrity Project has cost to administer for (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998 to date. [64009]

Mr. Timms: The administration of the Benefit Integrity Project is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, Peter Mathison. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Mark Oaten, dated 15 December 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how much the Benefit Integrity Project has cost to administer for (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998 to date.

In 1997–98 the Benefit Integrity Project cost £8.27m to administer. In 1998–99, up to 31 October 1998, the project has cost £7m.

Statistical information about the Benefit Integrity Project is published on a monthly basis and is placed in the House of Commons Library.

I hope you find this reply useful.

Family Credit

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate (a) the numbers of families in receipt of family credit, (b) their average net pay and (c) the earnings of their partners comprising (i) a male as the main earner and (ii) a female as the main earner with (1) one child, (2) two children, (3) three children and (4) four or more children under eight years of age. [64228]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the tables.

Number of families receiving Family Credit, May 1998

With 3 children under 8	41.17	37.18	58.94
With 4 or more children under 8	53.87	51.83	57.94

Notes:

1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand and may not sum due to totals.
2. Families may have other children who are not counted in this breakdown (aged 8 and over)
3. Families with 1 to 4 or more children under 8 do not sum to the total number of families shown as families where all of the children in the family are over 8 are not included in the table

Severe Disablement Allowance

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of current claimants of severe disablement allowance are women. [64223]

Mr. Timms: The total number of Severe Disablement Allowance (SDA) claimants in Great Britain as at 31 May 1998 is 370,720. Of these 218,740, or 59 per cent. are female.

Source:

These figures are taken from a 5 per cent. sample of SDA claimants, taken from the PSCS(INCP) system and excludes a small number of clerical cases.

Child Support

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were the arrears of child support payments owed by self-employed non-resident parents to children living in Wolverhampton on 30 September. [63435]

Angela Eagle: We expect the Child Support Agency to provide a consistent, fair and efficient service to all its clients. We have set out proposals for radical reform in our Green Paper "Children First: a new approach to child support" (Cm3992).

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Ms Jenny Jones, dated 15 December 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about child support payments owed by self employed non-resident parents to children in Wolverhampton.

I cannot provide precisely all the information that you have requested, but have provided as much as possible from information available.

The Agency has six front-line Business Units; each of these consists of a Child Support Agency Centre and associated field offices. Cases where the parent with care lives in Wolverhampton are dealt with by the Midlands Business Unit for which information has been provided.

At 30 September 1998 the amount of child support full maintenance assessment debt for the Midlands Business Unit was £91,546,756. This can be broken down further to £53,371,759(58.3%) collectable debt, £35,611,688(38.9%) possibly uncollectable debt and £2,563,309(2.8%) deferred debt. Deferred debt is where the Agency has deferred the debt indefinitely, provided non-resident parents meet certain conditions on payment of regular maintenance and any remaining debt. Where appropriate the parent with care will be compensated for the loss of this money.

To further increase the flow of maintenance and to help non-resident parents pay the arrears that they owe, wherever possible the Agency makes every effort to re-schedule debts; re-scheduled debts are those where the Agency has negotiated a closely monitored agreement with the non-resident parent to pay arrears by instalments. The amount of debt re-scheduled included in the £91,546,756 at 30 September 1998 was £69,513,784.

It is not possible to say how much of this debt is owed by self employed non-resident parents, however I can tell you that 3.5% of the Midlands Business Unit's live and assessed caseload relate to cases where the non-resident parent is self employed.

The Agency acknowledges that cases where the non-resident parent is self employed can be more difficult to progress, especially where the non-resident parent does not wish to comply. The key to securing early compliance is by personal contact with our clients. By approaching clients at the initial stages of their assessment we aim to build a better relationship with them, address their concerns promptly and provide an improved level of service.

We have increased resources for our Client Helplines and the National Enquiry Line, extended our hours of opening to cover 8.00am to 8.00pm Monday to Friday and 9.00am to 5.00pm on Saturdays and carried out trials to greatly improve and increase clients' opportunities to secure a face to face service.

Additionally we have recently completed a pilot study in the South Western Business Unit, looking at how best to process self employed cases. Trials using dedicated staff dealing exclusively with the self employed have shown a marked reduction in processing time and an increase in the collection of maintenance. We intend to have specific sections, supported by accountants where necessary, in each Business Unit by March 1999 to deal exclusively with self employed customers.

Also, to assist us to trace the whereabouts of self employed non-resident parents, we are exploring the possibility of sharing information with other Agencies and Government Departments. We have also revised staff training and raised staff awareness of the Agency's self employed powers, working practices and related issues.

If all voluntary methods to secure maintenance from a self employed non-resident parent fail, a liability order is applied for. It is hoped that the threat of such action will be enough to ensure compliance. The majority do agree to make an arrangement and only in a very small minority of cases is legal action actually taken.

We will use any and all enforcement methods legally available but we experience the same difficulties as other litigants in enforcing a civil debt. During 1997/98 we have been successful in registering debt by County Court Judgement in 522 cases. Where all other action has failed, the Agency has pursued cases for prosecution; between October 1997 and March 1998 a total of 15 suspended custodial sentences were imposed. A self employed non-resident parent was committed to prison as a result of non payment of maintenance.

I hope this reply is helpful.

HEALTH

Care History (Children)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria are used for holding care history information centrally on children in care homes. [64213]

Mr. Hutton: The Department collects anonymised statistical profiles of a one-third sample of all children who are looked after by local authorities in England, including those placed in children's homes. This information includes details of each child's placements, legal status, and reason for being looked after. A copy of the form on which these data are reported was published as an appendix to "Children Looked After by Local Authorities, Year Ending 31 March 1997, England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many official visits (a) he and (b) the Ministers in his Department have made to Buckinghamshire since 2 May 1997; and if he will list them. [64139]

Ms Jowell: Information on visits to Buckinghamshire is shown in the table.

Investing in Dentistry

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he plans to disburse the balance of funds available under Investing in Dentistry by the end of the current financial year; and if he will make a statement. [64249]

Mr. Milburn: Dispersal of the balance of funds depends on receiving bids from local health authorities and dentist that meet the criteria for grants under the investing in dentistry initiative.

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 9 December 1998, Official Report, columns 201–02, on Investing in Dentistry, if he will list for each health authority area (a) the number of applications received, and (b) the gross funding awarded; and if he will make a statement. [64262]

Mr. Milburn: The table gives details of the number of Investing in Dentistry funding requests health authorities have submitted to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health, and the gross funding awarded to health authorities whose requests have been approved.

GP Lists

Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been removed from general practitioners' lists in each health authority in each of the last five years. [64247]

Mr. Milburn: Information on the number of people removed from their general practitioner's list is collected annually and is published in the General Medical Practitioner Census Additional Data Collection. The latest published information relates to the year 1996–97.

Information on the number of such removals in each of the last five years will be placed in the Library.

NHS Complaints Procedures

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the outcome of the independent evaluation of NHS complaints procedures; and in what ways he is promoting good practice in this respect. [64484]

Mr. Milburn: A team consisting of the London Health Economics Consortium, the King's Fund and Public Attitude Surveys Ltd. was appointed to undertake the evaluation following a tender exercise earlier this year. The project will begin early in 1999 and the identification of good practice will remain a key objective.

Electrical Wheelchairs

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what budget was allocated for the provision of self-propelled indoor/outdoor, non-attendant, electrical wheelchairs in the financial year 1997–98; what was the actual expenditure on electric wheelchairs in that year; and how many self-propelled indoor/outdoor, non-attendant, electric wheelchairs were issued in that year. [64477]

Mr. Hutton: In 1997/98 the sum of £7 million was allocated to enable the National Health Service to provide electrically-powered indoor/outdoor wheelchairs. 4,500 chairs were issued in 1997/98. Total expenditure on the service, including costs such as additional assessment and training in the safe use of the chair as well as the cost of the chair, was £6,683,523.

Correspondence

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Christchurch on behalf of his constituent, Mrs. King, dated 31 October, about exemption certificates for transport for medical treatment. [64442]

Mr. Milburn: I replied to the hon. Member on 11 December 1998.

Mr. Barry Horne

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what costs were incurred by York District Hospital NHS Trust as a result of the stay of Mr. Barry Horne from 24 November to 10 December and subsequently. [64449]

Mr. Milburn: The costs for caring for a specific individual are not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to discuss the matter with the Chairman of the York Health Services National Health Service Trust.

Healthy Living Centres

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the criteria for approving healthy living centres; and when the first healthy living centres will be approved. [64543]

Ms Jowell: The criteria for approving bids for lottery funding for healthy living centres are currently being developed by the New Opportunities Fund. The fund's draft application criteria, which specifies some of the areas it plans to include in its assessment criteria, is currently out for consultation. The fund plans to begin inviting bids early in 1999 and will make its first awards as soon as possible thereafter.

Dental Services

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the Government propose to alter the process of (a) approving new NHS dentists and (b) allocating the relevant funds to health authorities. [64541]

Mr. Milburn: Dentists are registered by the General Dental Council, and are then free to work for the National Health Service if they wish, anywhere in the country. Funds are not allocated to health authorities for the general dental services where the vast majority of dentists work, instead dentists claim fees from a nationally set fee scale. Health authorities do commission community dental services and it is up to each health authority to decide how much funding to put towards these. There are some categories of dental service—personal dental services and salaried dentists—where health authorities must apply to the Department.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on population screening of men for prostate cancer. [64339]

Ms Jowell: In response to advice from the National Screening Committee (NSC), we advised the National Health Service in Executive Letter (97)12 that screening for prostate cancer should not be offered routinely, based on the existing evidence available. This remains the current policy. The NSC is actively keeping this question under review in the light of emerging evidence.

Cancer Treatments

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will estimate the annual cost to the National Health Service of screening all men above the age of 30 years for prostate cancer; [64341]

(2) if he will list the cost to the National Health Service of (a) a PSA blood test, (b) screening for cervical cancer and (c) screening for breast cancer; [64337]

(3) what is the annual cost to the National Health Service of screening women for (a) cervical cancer and (b) breast cancer. [64342]

Mr. Hutton: There is currently no reliable information available to make an estimate of costs for a prostate cancer screening programme.

It is estimated that the annual cost of the National Health Service breast screening programme is approximately £38 million. In 1996–97, 1.1 million women were screened, giving an approximate cost of £34.50 per woman screened.

The National Audit Office has estimated the total annual cost of the NHS cervical screening programme to be £132 million. This includes payments to general practitioners for achieving target coverage levels. In 1996–97, 3.8 million women were screened giving an approximate cost of £34 per woman screened.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the use of national guidelines to protect patients' pocket money from unscrupulous nursing home owners. [64301]

Mr. Hutton: Guidance issued by the National Association of Health Authorities (now the Health Service Confederation) in 1988 advises health authorities responsible for regulating nursing homes that residents in nursing homes should, wherever possible, manage their own financial affairs.

"Home Life: a code of practice for residential care" further advises that, should residents be incapable of looking after their own finances, arrangements should be made for a friend or relative to act as an agent or appointee for the resident. A homeowner or manager of a home should not undertake this responsibility unless there is no alternative.

Any suspicion that a homeowner is misappropriating a resident's money or valuables should be referred to the police.

Antibiotics Report

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish his response to the seventh report of the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology of Session 1997–98, "Resistance to Antibiotics and their Antimicrobial Agents (HL81)". [64407]

Ms Jowell: The Government's response to the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology report on Resistance to Antibiotics has been laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Library.

Farming Stress and Suicide

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cause of the delay in publishing the Department's report on farming stress and suicide, prepared by the University of London Department of Psychiatry; and if he will make a statement. [64304]

Mr. Hutton: The report commissioned by the Department on "Suicide and Stress in Farmers" was a study undertaken by Professor Keith Hawton and his team at the University of Oxford. Publication has not been delayed. The final version was received on 4 December 1998 and was published on 7 December 1998.

Medway NHS Trust

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current waiting time for fitting hearing aids at Medway NHS Trust; and if he will make a statement. [64511]

Mr. Milburn: The current waiting time for fitting hearing aids at Medway National Health Service Trust is 1 month for clinically urgent cases and 6 months for routine cases.

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the two vacant posts for audiology technicians at Medway NHS Trust are expected to be filled; and if he will make a statement. [64512]

Mr. Milburn: Medway National Health Service Trust recently advertised for two audiology technicians but did not receive any applications. They are re-appraising the posts in terms of grade and job content and will be re-advertising in the new year.

Social Services (Wandsworth)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had on the provision of social services in the London Borough of Wandsworth; and if he will make a statement. [64520]

Mr. Hutton: The Department, through the Social Services Inspectorate (SSI), monitors the performance of all local social services authorities. The report of a joint SSI/Audit Commission review of social services in the London Borough of Wandsworth was published in June 1997, and the report of an SSI inspection of the safety of children looked after was published in June 1998. Copies of both reports are available in the Library. The SSI is closely monitoring progress against the action plans drawn up following both these reports.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

"A New Deal for Transport"

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the amount of extra taxation which will be received from motorists in the next three years as a result of the increases in fuel duties and the new taxes proposed in the White Paper, "A New Deal for Transport". [63473]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Chancellor announced in the July 1997 Budget a commitment to annual increases in road fuel duties averaging at least 6 per cent. in real terms. HM Customs and Excise estimates that this will raise an additional £4.4 billion over the three financial years 1998–99 to 2000–01 compared with increasing fuel duties only in line with inflation. The White Paper announced our intention to legislate to enable local authorities to introduce road user charges and workplace parking levies in their areas, and to enable the Secretary of State to introduce charges on trunk roads and motorways. The revenue raised once the legislation is in place will depend on decisions by the authorities concerned as to whether or not to introduce the new charges, and if they do, at what level to do so.

Landing Fees (Airports)

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the level of duty required on landing fees at (a) Heathrow and (b) Gatwick to balance the supply and demand for slots. [63459]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The UK is subject to a number of international obligations and conventions in respect of airport charges which embody the principle that charges are based on the cost of providing facilities and services, even if there is excess demand to use these. Landing fees account for only a small proportion of airline costs. Given the extent to which demand for slots exceeds supply at Heathrow and (to a lesser degree) Gatwick, it is logical to expect that a several fold increase would be necessary to reach the market clearing level. But the Government have not undertaken precise calculations.

Aircraft (Near Misses)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many near misses were reported in each quarter of 1997–98 and 1998–99 to date in (a) United Kingdom air space, (b) Greater London and (c) the home counties; what type of aircraft were involved in each case; and from which airport they were flying. [63362]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: Information on airproxes ("near misses") is not available in the form requested. The table provides a quarterly breakdown of airproxes in UK airspace for the period requested. Details of airproxes reported by pilots are published by the Joint Airprox Working Group and controller-reported airproxes are published by the Joint Airprox Assessment Panel. When it is able to do so, the newly constituted UK Airprox Board will combine these publications into a single series covering both pilot and controller-reported incidents.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many official visits (a) he and (b) the Ministers in his Department, have made to Buckinghamshire since 2 May 1997; and if he will list them. [64128]

Mr. Meale: Ministers in my Department have made two official visits to Buckinghamshire since 2 May 1997.

My noble Friend, the Minister for Roads and Road Safety opened the new Traffic Control Centre at Traffic Master's HQ in Milton Keynes on 15 October 1998 and my hon. Friend the Minister for Transport in London, visited High Wycombe to discuss integrated transport issues and visit a number of transport sites on 24 November 1998.

747 Aeroplanes

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will take steps to prohibit the landing of Type 747 aeroplanes at Heathrow Airport before 7 am on (a) Christmas and (b) New Year's day mornings. [64084]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government have no plans to do so. The Boeing 747 is widely used for trans-continental scheduled air services, including for arrivals before 7 am. Most such services operate on the basis of a minimum daily frequency. It is the Government's policy to encourage the use of quieter aircraft at night and proposals to this end are contained in the second stage consultation paper on "Night Restrictions at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted" which was published on 17 November 1998, Official Report, columns 492–93.

Social Housing

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list in real terms (a) the amount of support given for social housing in the period 1992 to 1997 and (b) the proposed levels of support for social housing in the period 1997 to 2000. [63422]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The available information on allocations or outturns for expenditure on social housing stock made by central Government since 1992–93 is set out. Allocations for 2000–2001 have not yet been finalised but, as announced in the summer following the Comprehensive Spending Review, the housing capital allocations to local authorities will increase by around £600 million in 2000–2001. Some of the resources allocated through the Single Regeneration Budget, New Deal for Communities, and City Challenge that will be used for investment in social housing are not separately identified in the allocations made.

Buenos Aires Conference

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what timetables were agreed at the Buenos Aires Climate Change Conference to implement (a) the clean development mechanism, (b) national compliance with greenhouse gas reduction targets and (c) technical advances on climate monitoring. [63776]

Mr. Meacher: At the fourth Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC), Buenos Aires 2–13 November 1998 (COP 4), a number of decisions were taken which contained timetables for future work:

(a) on the mechanisms of the Kyoto Protocol, COP 4 agreed a work-programme with the deadline for completion of work as the sixth Conference of the Parties (COP 6), likely to take place at the end of 2000. Parties agreed to give priority within this programme to the clean development mechanism, with a view to establishing its modalities and procedures by the COP 6 deadline.

(b) on compliance, COP 4 established a working group tasked with developing a comprehensive compliance system for all obligations under the Kyoto Protocol, including national greenhouse gas targets, with a view to adopting a decision at COP 6.

(c) on climate monitoring, COP 4 invited the relevant UN and international agencies to initiate an Intergovernmental process for addressing priorities for action to improve global observing systems for climate in relation to the needs of the Convention.

Munitions (Sea Disposal)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions took place at the heads of delegation meeting for the OSPAR convention held on 12 and 13 November in London, in respect of the disposal to sea of chemical and conventional explosive munitions; and if he will place in the Library copies of the United Kingdom submissions made on this matter to OSPAR. [63902]

Mr. Meacher: As agreed at the Ministerial Meeting of the OSPAR Commission in July, the meeting of Heads of Delegation considered past dumping of chemical weapons and munitions (further dumping of this kind is, of course, prohibited by the OSPAR Convention). The meeting invited the Contracting Parties and observers to submit to the Government of the Republic of Ireland the available information on chemical weapons, munitions and related material dumped in the past, and on retrieval events, dumped material which has turned up in unexpected places and dumpings by states other than OSPAR Contracting Parties. That information will be presented by the Republic of Ireland to the Sea-Based Activities Working Group at its meeting on 15 February 1999, and the meeting of the Heads of Delegation in May will then consider what should be done. No formal papers have yet been submitted to the OSPAR Commission or the Heads of Delegation meeting on this issue.

Housing Act 1985

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to amend Part XI of the Housing Act 1985 to remove hotels, guest houses and self catering accommodation previously converted from a house which was once occupied by a single household from being categorised as houses in multiple occupation following the recent decision by the Court of Appeal on the Living Waters Conference Centre, Conwy; and if he will make a statement. [64299]

Mr. Raynsford: We plan to issue a consultation document on proposals for a licensing scheme for houses in multiple occupation (HMOs) early in the New Year. In that paper, we will also seek views on changes to Part XI of the Housing Act 1985, including the HMO definition. However, we would be reluctant to remove from the definition any premises which provide accommodation for people who have no other home. We would also need to consider the effect on the existing powers for local authorities to make HMO registration schemes containing special control provisions.

Private Rented Accommodation

Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the percentage of private rented accommodation which is let by landlords or agents who are not members of landlords' or agents' associations. [64248]

Mr. Raynsford: We do not know what percentage of private rented accommodation is let by landlords or agents who are not member of landlords' or agents' associations but we know that:

over 70 per cent. of privately rented accommodation is owned by landlords letting as a sideline, rather than by business or institutional landlords; around 40 per cent. of lettings are managed partly or wholly by an agent of which some 2,500 are members of a professional association for agents;

a small but growing number of sideline landlords are members of local landlords' associations, private landlords' forums and local authority landlord accreditation schemes.

Eurostar

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the importance of Eurostar regional services to the economy of the North West; and if he will make a statement. [64280]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government announced on 8 December 1998, Official Report, column 135, that they will be appointing consultants to examine the "Review of Regional Eurostar Services", produced by Inter Capital and Regional Rail Ltd. The Government intend their consultant to consider the economic and social benefits of regional Eurostar services.

Countryside Access

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he proposes to respond to the consultation process on access to the open countryside in England and Wales. [64298]

Mr. Meale: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment to the hon. Member for West Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) on 18 November 1998, Official Report, column 672.

M6 (Roadworks)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions at how many locations on the M6 there were roadworks between 10 and 11 December. [64297]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Kerman to Mr. Nigel Evans, dated 17 December 1998:

M6 road closures—10 and 11 December

As you know the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked Lawrie Haynes, the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question. You asked "at how many locations on the M6 there were roadworks between 10 and 11 December". I am replying on Lawrie Haynes' behalf in his absence from the office.

The table below sets out the information you require:

Area	10 December 1998	11 December 1998
Cheshire	4	5
Lancashire	4	3
Cumbria	2	2
Warwickshire	1	1
Total	11	11

The length of the M6 from the M1 to the A74 is 229 miles.

The figures provided are for the main running lanes only and exclude roadworks on link roads where advanced signs are erected on main carriageways and also works on the hard shoulder only, where Temporary Vertical Concrete Barriers are in place. The figures also include roadworks that took place overnight.

I trust the above information meets your requirement.

Overhead Power Lines

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on planning guidelines in respect of applications to build houses close to overhead power lines. [64288]

Mr. Raynsford: Draft guidance on determining planning applications for development proposed in vicinity to sources of electro-magnetic fields, such as overhead power lines, is contained in the draft circular, "Land-Use Planning and Electro-Magnetic Fields (EMFs)". This has been drawn up jointly by this Department and the Department of Health, and was issued for public consultation on 8 December.

Pensions

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what information his Department collects on (a) the numbers of those directly employed through the single regeneration budget programme and (b) the proportion of those directly employed who are in occupational pension schemes or receive personal pension contributions; [64393]

(2) if he will make a statement on pensions for staff directly employed by the Single Regeneration Budget programme; [64394]

(3) what restrictions are placed on bodies receiving SRB funding who employ people directly from offering occupational pension schemes or contributions to personal pensions from the SRB programme. [64392]

Mr. Meale: The SRB provides support for between one to seven years for regeneration schemes by locally based partnerships. The SRB contribution towards management and administration costs has a ceiling of 5 per cent. of total SRB grant for the scheme. It is for the partnerships themselves to determine the terms and conditions of any staff they employ directly and there are no restrictions imposed by the SRB. My Department does not collect information on the number of staff directly employed through the SRB programme. It is the Government's view, as recently reaffirmed by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security, that everyone who can save for their retirement has a responsibility to do so.

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library a copy of the report commissioned by Ministers to assess the potential effects of cultivating genetically modified food in Britain; and if he will make a statement. [64329]

Mr. Meacher: As outlined in the response to the hon. Gentleman's earlier question of 9 February 1998, Official Report, column 11, we undertook to have further discussions with English Nature and others on how concerns regarding the possible wider implications of genetically modified crops may best be addressed. As a result of these discussions, DETR officials have been preparing a draft paper considering the possible wider impact of genetically modified crops on farmland wildlife. The potential impact is considered in the context of existing agricultural practices and the Government's commitments to reverse wildlife declines in farmland. The potential advantages or disadvantages of genetically modified crops will be discussed.

This paper is being prepared in consultation with the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment (ACRE) and English Nature. As explained in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Simpson) on 5 November 1998, Official Report, column 638, regarding ACRE's remit, the Secretary of State has asked the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment to advise on the possible changes in agronomic practice and subsequent effects on biodiversity that may result from the release of genetically modified organisms.

When the paper is completed it will be made publicly available.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in how many trials of genetically modified crops inspected in 1998 the regulations governing their planting have been found to have been broken; and if he will provide details in each instance. [64468]

Mr. Meacher: There were five instances in 1998 where, in the opinion of the Health and Safety Executive Inspector, the release of genetically modified organisms was not being carried out as specified in the consent document regarding the measures taken to restrict pollination of adjacent plants. In each case the consent was varied to include additional precautions to minimise any possible risk to the environment. In all cases the risks arising from pollination of adjacent plants by the genetically modified oilseed rape were assessed to be low.

Consent holder	Consent reference	Trial site location	Additional precautions imposed
Monsanto	96/R22/6	Rothwell, Lincolnshire	Destroy all oilseed rape seed harvested from plants within 50m of the GM trial plot, and extend post trial monitoring to include land within 50m of the GM trial.
Monsanto	96/R22/6	Stanton, Hereford and Worcester	Destroy all genetically modified glyphosate tolerant oilseed rape at this site prior to flowering.
Perryfields Holdings Ltd.	96/R27/1	Rothwell, Lincolnshire	Destroy all oilseed rape seed harvested from plants within 50m of the GM trial plot, and extend post trial monitoring to include land within 50m of the GM trial.
Pioneer Genetique	97/R24/2	Inkberrow, Worcestershire	Destroy all oilseed rape seed harvested from plants within 50m of the GM trial plot, and extend post trial monitoring to include land within 50m of the GM trial.
Plant Genetic Systems	97/R15/23	Inkberrow, Worcestershire	Destroy all oilseed rape seed harvested from plants within 50m of the GM trial plot, and extend post trial monitoring to include land within 50m of the GM trial.

British Rail Publications

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the publications issued by British Rail since 1 May 1997, indicating the total cost to British Rail of such publications. [64469]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I understand from the British Railways Board that, apart form the issue of site particulars by Rail Property Ltd., the only publication issued by the Board since 1 May 1997 is its Annual Report and Accounts 1996–97 published in January 1998. The cost of publication is a matter for the Board.

Packaging Waste

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will make an announcement on the outcome of the review of the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997. [64443]

Mr. Meacher: I will be making an announcement shortly.

Driving Licences

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions with which countries his Department has arrangements in place for the exchange of driving licences for a British equivalent. [64439]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The countries are: Australia, Barbados, British Virgin Islands, Gibraltar, Hong Kong, Japan, Kenya, Malta, New Zealand, Republic of Cyprus, Singapore, Switzerland, Zimbabwe. It is also possible to exchange licences from countries in the European Economic Area (EU Member States plus Norway, Iceland and Liechtenstein), but such licences are subject to mutual recognition and need not be exchanged.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the holders of full Canadian driving licences will be able to exchange them for British equivalents; and if he will make a statement. [64440]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Recognition of Canadian licences is made complicated by the fact that the 12 Canadian Provinces are separate licensing authorities and the licences generally do not strictly conform to the UK requirements. Nevertheless legislation to allow holders of Canadian car driving licences to exchange them for the British equivalent is in hand. The aim is to have the necessary arrangement in place early in 1999.

Health and Safety Laboratory

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Health and Safety Laboratory intends to publish its Annual report and Accounts for 1997–98. [64492]

Mr. Meale: The Health and Safety Laboratory has today published the 1997–98 Annual Report and Accounts, and copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Short-haired Bumblebee

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when his Department was informed of the likelihood that the short-haired bumblebee is extinct; which other creatures in the United Kingdom his Department has assessed to be at serious risk of extinction; and what action he proposes to take. [64333]

Mr. Meale: Surveys throughout the 1970s and 1980s suggested that whilst undergoing declines, the short-haired bumblebee was still present albeit localised. It was not until August 1998, when examples of the short haired bumblebee were not found for the second year in succession at its previous Dungeness stronghold, that fears were raised about its possible extinction.

There are a number of United Kingdom species which are endangered (fauna) or critically endangered (flora) and the Government are taking forward a range of measures, including the establishment of biodiversity species action plans, to address their plight. A plan for the short-haired bumblebee is in preparation.

A1

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the 24 hour traffic volumes at each interchange on the A1 route round Tyneside from the Metro Centre to North Gosforth including the New Tyne crossing (a) at the most recent available period and (b) three years earlier. [64437]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Lawrie Haynes, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Kerman to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 17 December 1998:

As you know the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked Lawrie Haynes, the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question. You asked for traffic figures on the A1 route round Tyneside from the Metro Centre to North Gosforth, including the Tyne Crossing. I am replying on Lawrie Haynes' behalf in his absence from the office.

The attached table sets out the information available to us along the route you specify where we have counters, but these are not necessarily at the interchanges.

I trust the information meets your requirement.

Northern Development Area

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he intends to approve the revised master plan for the Northern Development Area, Newcastle, and its links to the strategic highway network before the outcome of the Tyneside multimodel transport study is made available. [64438]

Mr. Raynsford: The Master Plan for the Northern Development Area has been referred to the Secretary of State in support of an application for outline planning permission and they will be considered together to determine the extent to which there might be conflict with national planning policy. Since the Tyneside multimodel transport study is not expected to be available for another 12 to 18 months, it would not seem reasonable to delay consideration of the application and Master Plan.

Town Planning Laws

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to appoint a commission to examine town planning laws. [64434]

Mr. Raynsford: We have no plans to establish such a commission. Our policy statement, "Modernising Planning", published in January, set out a series of proposals for improving the responsiveness and efficiency of the planning system. During this year, we have announced new proposals for a stronger regional planning framework, improved arrangements for delivering development plans and better procedures for handling appeals. As part of this initiative, we will be putting forward further detailed suggestions for improving the planning system during 1999.

Steel and Aluminium

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the proportion of steel and aluminium which is recycled (a) in the UK and (b) in the rest of the EU. [64432]

Mr. Meale: According to the Recycling Advisory Unit, the percentage of scrap recycled as a percentage of production in the UK in 1997 was 55 per cent. for steel and 44 per cent. for aluminium. International comparisons are misleading because of the wide range of formulae used for calculating recovery and recycling rates.

Carbon Dioxide

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress the UK has made towards meeting its carbon dioxide reduction target agreed in Rio. [64433]

Mr. Meale: The UK is on track to exceed its commitment agreed in Rio, to return greenhouse gas emissions to 1990 levels by 2000.

Total emissions of greenhouse gases from the UK have fallen from 215 million tonnes carbon equivalent in 1990 to 204 million tonnes carbon equivalent in 1996, the latest year for which all figures are available. Emissions of carbon dioxide are available for 1997 and show a 7.8 per cent. reduction from 1990 levels.

Homelessness (Emergency Shelters)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many places have been made available by his Department as emergency shelters for the homeless over the Christmas period in each of the last five years for which figures are available showing the locations of those places. [64309]

Mr. Raynsford: Through the Winter Shelter Programme additional bedspaces are provided for rough sleepers each year to ensure that no one needs to sleep rough on the streets during the winter months. The majority of the additional bedspaces are provided in London where rough sleeping is most acute. Information on the number of bedspaces is available for the following years:

1998–99: 547 bedspaces and 78 severe weather beds in London, Bristol, Brighton and Cambridge.

1997–98: 552 bedspaces and 59 severe weather beds in London, Bristol and Cambridge.

1996–97: 495 bedspaces and 100 severe weather beds in London and Bristol.

1995–96: 315 bedspaces in London.

1994–95: 330 bedspaces and 200 severe weather beds in London.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many places have been planned by his Department as emergency shelters for the homeless over the forthcoming Christmas period and in what locations. [64310]

Mr. Raynsford: Through the Winter Shelter Programme the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions will be funding 547 additional bedspaces in London, Bristol, Brighton and Cambridge and a further 78 severe weather beds. The winter shelters will be open from 1 December to 31 March. The Winter Shelter Programme will also fund Crisis to keep up to 40 beds open for 2 weeks following the closure of their London Open Christmas provision on 30 December and help to fund a day centre in Portsmouth which will operate over the winter months. Information about the shelters is below:

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the total expenditure for the provision of emergency Christmas shelters for the homeless over the past five years; and what estimate he has made of the resources to be made available for the purpose during Christmas. [64311]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government have made available £4 million this year for the Winter Shelter Programme. This will provide 547 additional bedspaces for rough sleepers and 78 severe weather beds in London, Bristol, Brighton and Cambridge. I will write with the additional information requested.

Personal Social Services (Worcestershire)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the total cash value of the standard spending assessment for personal social services in Worcestershire including any special transitional grant funding in (i) 1998–99 and (ii) the proposed settlement for 1999–2000. [64406]

Ms Armstrong: In 1998/99, the standard spending assessment for personal social services in Worcestershire was £66.9 million. An additional amount of £3.2 million was also provided, amongst other special and specific grants, as a special transitional grant for community care clients. In 1999–2000, the standard spending assessment for personal social services is £70.7 million. An additional programme of specific and special grant funding will also be provided in 1999–2000.

Concessionary Fares Scheme

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his plans for a national minimum concessionary fares scheme. [64482]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Our White Paper "A New Deal for Transport" outlined our proposed national minimum concessionary fares scheme, under which pensioners would be entitled to half fares on buses on the purchase of a £5 annual pass. Implementation will depend on the availability of parliamentary time for the passage of the necessary primary legislation.

Train Operating Companies (Punctuality)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 14 December 1998, Official Report, columns 315–16, on rail punctuality, if he will list the punctuality statistics based on the Passenger Charter and the same statistics calculated without disregarding void days for the 12 months up to 14 November. [64436]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Performance statistics appear in the Franchising Director's quarterly bulletins which are in the Library of the House. These reflect Passenger's Charter data which exclude voided days. Statistics which include the punctuality of services operated on voided days have not been collected on a systematic basis. However, as I said in my answer of 14 December 1998, Official Report, column 315, numbers of void days will be included in the Franchising Director's next and subsequent quarterly bulletins.

SSSIs

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the protection of (a) sites and (b) areas of special scientific interest. [64300]

Mr. Meacher: We have issued a consultation paper in England and Wales called "SSSIs—Better Protection and Management". The consultation ends on 21 December.

Colleagues in Northern Ireland are preparing a consultation paper on Areas of Special Scientific Interest which will be issued in 1999.

Wind Farms

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the impact of wind farms on the local environment. [64343]

Mr. Raynsford: We have issued national guidance on wind energy development in PPG22, and further guidance appears in PPG7, and also in the Report we issued recently "Planning for Sustainable Development—Towards Better Practice". The impact on the local environment is one of the relevant factors taken into account when considering planning applications for wind farms. Where wind farms are likely to have a significant effect on the environment, a formal Environmental Impact Assessment is required.

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for fast-tracking planning permission for wind farms under the general permitted development orders. [64340]

Mr. Raynsford: I am satisfied that the existing arrangements are appropriate.

Regional Development and Rural Policy

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he proposes to consult on the administrative guidance promised to regional development agencies on sustainable development and rural policy. [64741]

Mr. Caborn: We have recently consulted on draft statutory guidance for Regional Development Agencies on the development of their regional strategies. In that guidance we have stressed that RDAs should take an integrated and sustainable approach to tackling economic issues across their regions, taking account of the particular features of their rural areas.

The guidance notes on sustainable development and rural policy that are being issued in draft today are intended to assist the RDAs on these matters. Copies are being sent to those national and regional organisations which have expressed an interest in these areas, and are also available on request from the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions. I am placing copies in the House Library.

The drafts build on informal soundings taken both within and outside Government and will form part of a package of guidance to be available to the RDAs early in the new year.

Local Government Finance

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will issue the Housing Revenue Account Subsidy Determination for 1999–2000. [64782]

Ms Armstrong: I have decided to confirm the proposals for the Determination on which we consulted authorities on 29 October 1998. My Department will be sending copies of the Housing Revenue Account Subsidy Determination 1999–2000, the Item 8 Credit and Item 8 Debit (General) Determination 1999–2000 and the General Determination of Administration of Housing Revenue Account Subsidy 1998 to all local housing authorities in England. Copies of the Determinations will be placed in the Library of the House next week.

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what resources he will make available to authorities that have been reorganised on 1 April 1997 and 1998 for reorganisation costs incurred by them in 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [64787]

Ms Armstrong: On 9 October I invited authorities which were eligible to participate in the Local Government Reorganisation Cost Scheme for 1999–2000 which reorganised before 1 April 1998, to submit estimates of the amount of expenditure they expect to incur on transitional costs of reorganisation in 1999–2000. On the basis, inter alia, of the information provided by the authorities, I have decided the maximum amounts that it would be appropriate to allocate towards such costs.

The amounts are as follows:

Maximum amounts: £000 rounded

Authority	1999–2000
1997 Reorganisations
Luton Borough Council	200
Derby City Council	920
Bournemouth Borough Council	1,075
Darlington Borough Council	1,102
Portsmouth City Council	1,307
Southampton City Council	2,541
Rutland Council	1,400
Stoke-on-Trent City Council	1,300
Swindon Borough Council	349
Total	10,194
1998 Reorganisations
West Berkshire Council	500

Rent Increases

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if, following the consultation paper Limiting Fair Rent Increases, published in the summer, he intends to introduce measures to help tenants facing exceptionally high fair rent increases. [64788]

Ms Armstrong: Tenants have been facing exceptionally high fair rent increases, following recent court cases. We received more than 500 responses to the consultation paper we issued in the summer which proposed limiting fair rent increases by applying a formula linked to the Retail Prices Index (RPI). There was overwhelming support for this from individual tenants and tenants' organisations. They considered our proposed limits were too high, however, and we have responded to this.

We propose, therefore, to go ahead and introduce new limits by making an Order under Section 31 of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985.

Rent officers and rent assessment committees will continue to determine fair rents as they do now. Where applications for re-registration are made to the rent officer after the Order comes into effect, however, fair rent increases will be limited to RPI + 7.5 per cent. for the first re-registration (rather than RPI + 10 per cent. as originally proposed) and RPI + 5 per cent. for subsequent re-registrations. This will ease the anxiety faced now by thousands of tenants, many of whom are elderly or on fixed incomes. It will give them certainty that their rents cannot be increased by more than these limits.

If there is no existing fair rent registration for the property, these limits will not apply. Nor will they apply if the rent officer or rent assessment committee considers that repairs or improvements carried out by the landlord have changed the condition of the property or common parts so much that the new rent should be at least 15 per cent. more than the existing registered rent. I believe that, in these limited circumstances only, it is fair for landlords to charge the full fair rent increase.

The new limits will apply to private tenants and secure tenants of registered social landlords who have a fair rent registered under the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 or the Rent Act 1977. They will not apply to rent increases for assured or assured shorthold tenancies under the Housing Act 1988. We have no plans to change the legislative framework for these tenancies.

The Order will be laid immediately after the Parliamentary Recess and will come into force shortly afterwards. My Department will make a further announcement when the Order is laid. We will issue a leaflet for landlords and tenants explaining in detail when the limits apply and how rent officers and rent assessment committees will calculate them, and details will appear on our internet site.

Best Value

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to allow the Audit Commission to fulfil its proposed role in relation to best value; and if he will make a statement. [64789]

Ms Armstrong: The Audit Commission has a key role to play in our agenda for modernising local government particularly in implementing our proposals for best value.

We are to give new audit and inspection powers to the Commission as part of our proposals for best value. The Local Government Bill, currently before Parliament, provides for this. The Commission will arrange for the annual audit of Local Performance Plans, and for the inspection of local authorities' activities in areas other than those which are the responsibility of the existing specialist Inspectorates such as OFSTED, SSI and HMIC. The Commission will, however, work closely with these Inspectorates, as they do now, to ensure that all the necessary skills are brought to bear in securing best value.

The Commission will also be given powers to recommend action by the Secretary of State where an authority fails to achieve best value.

To ensure that these new functions are fully co-ordinated with the work of the other Inspectorates, I confirm both our commitment to establish an Inspectorate Forum to discuss common inspection interests, and our intention to take a power in the Local Government Bill to enable arrangements to be made where necessary to ensure the smooth and efficient operation of the inspection process.

Our work on ensuring proper co-ordination between the Commission and other Inspectorates in relation to best value and local government will fulfil the principal recommendation of the Prior Options Study of the Financial Management and Policy Review (FMPR) of the Audit Commission, which I am publishing today. Copies of the Report have been placed in the House Library.

This study, concluding that the functions of the Commission are necessary and best carried out by that body, proposed a study linked with best value to put in place a framework of working arrangements to provide a means of resolving differences between the various audit and inspection bodies involved. Our proposals for the Forum and new power will ensure such arrangements are in place.

We will now also be proceeding with the second stage of the FMPR. This looks at the detailed organisation and procedures which will be best suited to the Commission as it continues its traditional audit functions and embraces its new roles within best value. To lead the Audit Commission through this period of significant change, my right hon. Friends the Deputy Prime Minister and the Secretaries of State for Health and for Wales, have today appointed Helena Shovelton as its new Chairman. It will be for her and her fellow Commissioners to ensure that the highest standards of professionalism and objectivity—for which the Commission has been known—are continued, not only in its traditional audit roles, but also in its new tasks in the best value framework.

MV Derbyshire

Mrs. Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he has made his decision on the form and coverage of the reopened formal investigation into the loss of the MV 'Derbyshire'; and if he will make a statement. [64906]

Mr. Prescott: Having considered the comments submitted following my announcement of 12 March 1998, Official Report, columns 270–71, that the Formal Investigation into the loss of the Derbyshire was to be reopened I have today ordered, under section 269 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995, that the whole of the case shall be reheard by Her Majesty's High Court of Justice. The preparation and presentation of the case, the identification of parties to the Investigation and the statement of questions are now matters for my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney General. The conduct of the reopened Investigation will be a matter for the Judge appointed to undertake it.

I have also decided that my Department will support an application made to the Judge at his preliminary hearing that the reasonable costs of a single legal term to represent the interests of the relatives of those lost with the ship at the reopened Formal Investigation should be met from public funds.

I have further decided that my Department should make a contribution towards the legal costs of one team that may be incurred by the relatives in preparing for the preliminary hearing.

Disabled People (Parking Badges)

Mr. White: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for the European Commission's recommendation for a standard European parking badge for disabled people to be implemented in the UK; what is the proposed timing; and if conditions of use of the UK's existing Orange Badge will be affected. [64967]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We have decided that the EC's recommendation for a standard design of blue parking badge for disabled people will be implemented in the UK. In reaching our decision we consulted with our statutory advisers, the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee (DPTAC).

The aim of this Recommendation is, of course, to have a standard design of blue parking badge to replace the parking cards or badges which are currently on issue in Member States, and to ensure that there is reciprocity across Member States in recognising the new badge. The EC's intention is to have these arrangements introduced by 1 January 2000.

The Recommendation does not affect the eligibility criteria applied by Member States, nor the parking privileges which the parking card affords disabled people in each Member State. These remain matters for national governments to determine. Parking badges will, therefore, retain their national status, but will be designed on the basis of the EC's model.

In this country, we plan to phase in the new blue badges as existing Orange Badges come up for renewal, or new applications are processed, over the 3 years from 1 January 2000 to 31 December 2002.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Lidington: To ask the President of the Council if she will list the official visits to Buckinghamshire which (a) she and (b) her predecessor have made since 2 May 1997. [64134]

Mrs. Beckett: None.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Recycling

Mr. Brake: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee (1) which company is responsible for the recycling of waste paper from the Parliamentary Estate; [64554]

(2) how much money was raised from the sale of waste paper from the Parliamentary Estate in the last financial year; [64555]

(3) what tonnage of waste paper from the Parliamentary Estate was recycled in the last financial year. [64553]

Mrs. Roe: These are matters for the Serjeant at Arms; I have asked him to write to the hon. Member.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Good Town Planning

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action her Department has taken to promote good town planning in the cities of the third world. [64400]

Clare Short: We view good town planning practice as an essential component in the better management of cities. This is in line with the internationally agreed development goals contained in the Habitat Agenda which resulted from the Habitat II conference at Istanbul in 1996. The Department provides funding support to help the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements, Habitat, take forward this Agenda.

Direct support is also given to the global United Nations Urban Management Programme and Urban Indicators Programme. The Department works closely with countries which implement these approaches to improved urban environments and has supported programmes which include good town planning practice in India and China.

Trading Markets

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department is taking to increase the access of third world countries to the principal trading markets of the world; and if she will make a statement. [64524]

Clare Short: I will write to my hon. Friend.

TACIS Projects

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will increase UK Government activity in generating TACIS projects. [63110]

Mr. Foulkes: We do not wish to see an expansion of Tacis activity until its effectiveness is improved. Tacis has been widely criticised for its slow procedures and cumbersome bureaucracy. We are in dialogue with the European Commission to address these problems, including the new Tacis Regulation which will be agreed during 1999.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list (a) the (i) task forces, (ii) review panels and (iii) advisory groups his Department has, (b) the remit of each and (c) the members of each together with their principal employment and their level of remuneration. [62811]

Mr. Kilfoyle: For the purpose of this question this answer includes the Prime Minister's Office and the Cabinet Office. Details of all Cabinet Office task forces, review bodies and advisory groups have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Civil Servants (Sickness)

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what is the overall level of sickness absence in the Civil Service. [64908]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The average level of sickness absence in 1997 was unchanged from 1996 at 8.5 days per person (10.4 days per staff year). This is broadly in line with the level in the economy as a whole.

I have placed in the Libraries of the House copies of the report on Sickness Absence in the Civil Service during 1997, which contains a comprehensive analysis of the figures about the Civil Service. This report was prepared for my Department by BMI Health Services.

My Department is discussing with Departments and Agencies how they can achieve the targets of reducing sickness absence in the Civil Service by 20 per cent. by 2001 and 30 per cent. by 2003 which were set following the July 1998 report "Managing Attendance in the Public Sector". I shall receive regular reports on progress.

Civil Servants (Industrial Tribunal)

Mr. Prior: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many civil servants took cases to an industrial tribunal last year. [64303]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Figures on the number of civil servants who take cases to Employment Tribunal are not held centrally, and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Official Cars

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will estimate for each month in the past five years the total miles covered by Ministers' official cars. [63656]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated under the terms of the Framework Document to the Government Car and Despatch Agency. I have asked its Chief Executive, Mr. Nick Matheson, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Nick Matheson to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 17 December 1998:

The Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office has asked me in my capacity as the Chief Executive of the Agency responsible for the Government Car Service (GCS) to reply to your Parliamentary Question dated 10 December 1998 asking for a list by month of the estimated total mileage of ministerial car travelling on official business in the last five years.

The Government Car and Despatch Agency, of which GCS is a part, was formed on 1 April 1997 and information on mileage before then is not readily available and can only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However, I estimate the total mileage of ministerial cars provided by this Agency and travelling on official business since 1 April 1997 to be as follows:

1997 month	Estimated mileage	1998 month	Estimated mileage
April	27,810	January	71,910
May	143,820	February	129,440
June	139,030	March	143,820
July	143,820	April	104,270
August	71,910	May	143,280
September	69,510	June	139,030
October	115,060	July	143,820
November	139,030	August	71,910
December	107,860	September	69,510
		October	115,060
		November	139,030

The above estimates are based on total official use of GCS cars. In addition to their use by ministers, cars are used for other official purposes such as the movement of documents and for use by officials as directed by the ministerial private office.

Biotechnology

Mr. Hope: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement on biotechnology and genetic modification, following the establishment of the ministerial group. [64629]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The Government are initiating a thorough review of the framework for overseeing developments in biotechnology, focusing particularly on the range of committees that have been established to provide the Government with expert advice and to regulate in this area. The Government are already engaged in a public consultation on developments in the biosciences which is due to report in Spring 1999. The review of the framework for overseeing developments in biotechnology, to be carried out by officials, will take place on the same timescale.

The Government believe that the protection of human health must be the first priority in regulating biotechnology. The impact on the environment and on biodiversity must also be thoroughly assessed, and the ethical issues raised by biotechnology fully taken into account. At the same time, the Government believe that this technology has the potential to offer enormous opportunities for improving the competitiveness of the economy and the quality of life in terms of health, agriculture, food and environmental protection, and that regulation should facilitate technological development by not imposing unjustified burdens on the biotechnology industry.

The Government seek to have in place a system that provides sound advice and proportionate regulation and is at the same time as simple and transparent as possible; that has the flexibility to respond to the fast moving developments in the technology and to public concerns; and that commands the respect of users and the public.

The review will assess the current system in the light of these criteria. It will seek to address the following questions:

what gaps exist in coverage of biotechnology by the existing committees and how might these be remedied?

what overlaps exist and are they justified? If not, how might they be remedied?

could the current system be structured in a more simple way?

how could the system for providing advice to Government be made more transparent?

are ethical and other wider issues addressed fully and properly within the current system?

are stakeholders given the appropriate opportunities to make their views known? For example, would an environmental stakeholder forum be a valuable addition to the current framework?

is the framework flexible enough to cope with the rapid development of this technology which is likely in the future?

does the public have confidence in the system currently in place?

The views will be sought of the existing regulatory and advisory bodies themselves, and of outside bodies with an interest in this area. The Government would also welcome views from the public.

The Cabinet Office and the Office of Science and Technology will jointly co-ordinate the review. The Government will make an announcement on its outcome.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Prosecutions (Assent)

31. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Attorney-General how often in each of the last five years the holder of his office gave his assent to prosecutions which needed it; and if he will list each of these occasions. [63017]

The Attorney-General: The records in my Department are maintained for case-tracking rather than statistical purposes. The information sought by the hon. Member could be obtained only by a manual trawl of all relevant files. That would involve disproportionate cost.

Fraud

36. Mr. Woodward: To ask the Attorney-General what are the current case loads of the Serious Fraud Office and of the Crown Prosecution Service in relation to serious or complex fraud. [63024]

The Attorney-General: The Serious Fraud Office currently has a caseload of 68 serious or complex fraud cases. In the year 1997–98, of 39 defendants whose cases were brought to trial, 37 were convicted and 2 acquitted. In the current year so far, 22 defendants have been brought to trial with 18 convictions and 4 acquittals. The Crown Prosecution Service does not keep records which show serious and complex fraud cases as a separate category. It is therefore not possible to provide comparable figures.

Crown Prosecution Service (East Sussex)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Attorney-General what is the current strength of the Crown Prosecution Service in East Sussex. [63020]

The Attorney-General: On 30 November 1998, the East Sussex branch of the Crown Prosecution Service had the full time equivalent of 23 Crown Prosecutors and 35.6 caseworkers and administrators engaged in its work.

PRIME MINISTER

Council of Europe

Ann Keen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will announce the composition of the United Kingdom delegation for the January 1999 ordinary session of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe. [64792]

The Prime Minister: The January 1999 ordinary session of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe will be opened in Strasbourg on 25 January. The delegation from the United Kingdom for the session will consist of 23 members of the Labour Party, nine from the Conservative Party and four members from the minority parties. The delegation will serve in place of the current delegation from the opening January 1999 ordinary session.

The appointments of representatives and substitutes have been made on the basis of nomination by the parties concerned.

The same delegation will be representing the United Kingdom Parliament at the Assembly of the Western European Union.

Representatives from the Government Benches will be:

The hon. Member for Birmingham, Hodge Hill (Mr. Davis), who will act as leader; the hon. Members for Tooting (Mr. Cox); for Leigh (Mr. Cunliffe); for Sunderland, North (Mr. Etherington); for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn); for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mrs. Fyfe); for Hull, North (Mr. McNamara); for Leicester, South (Mr. Marshall); for Knowsley, South (Mr. O'Hara); for Glasgow, Bailleston (Mr. Wray); Lord Kirkhill and Lord Ponsonby of Shulbrede.

Representatives from the Conservative Party will be:

The hon. Members for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson); for Chipping Barnet (Sir S. Chapman); for East Yorkshire (Mr. Townend) and the right hon. Member for Eddisbury (Sir A. Goodlad).

Representatives from the minority parties will be:

The hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) and Lord Russell-Johnston.

The following substitutes have been appointed to act as necessary on behalf of the delegates.

From the Government Benches: the hon. Members for Keighley (Mrs. Cryer); for Wolverhampton, South-West (Ms Jones); for Bristol, North-West (Dr. Naysmith); for Dover (Mr. Prosser); for Stourbridge (Ms Shipley); for Calder Valley (Ms McCafferty); for Morecambe and Lunesdale (Miss Smith); for North-West Leicestershire (Mr. Taylor); for Finchley and Golders Green (Dr. Vis); Lord Grenfell and Lord Judd.

From the Conservative Party: the hon. Member for Romsey (Mr. Colvin); for Ludlow (Mr. Gill); for Spelthorne (Mr. Wilshire); Lord Lucas of Crudwell and Lord Northesk.

From the minority parties: the hon. Member for Isle of Wight (Dr. Brand) and the right hon. Member for Stratford (Mr. Taylor).

G7 Presidency

Ann Keen: To ask the Prime Minister what has been achieved by the G7/8 during the United Kingdom presidency this year. [64793]

The Prime Minister: During the United Kingdom's Presidency of the G7/8 this year, we have made progress on international action in a wide range of areas.

The successful G8 Summit in Birmingham in May marked a departure from tradition. Leaders were able to have a more businesslike and focused discussion in an informal atmosphere, and agreed a shorter, more action-oriented communiqué. The new format worked well and will be followed next year under the German Presidency.

One of the most challenging responsibilities was the turbulent world economy and the need to modernise international financial architecture. The Birmingham Summit endorsed G7 Finance Ministers' proposals on strengthening the global financial system. This was followed up by wider-ranging recommendations in statements issued by G7 leaders and by G7 Finance Ministers and Central Bank Governors on 30 October. This includes enhanced financing arrangements for dealing with financial market contagion: codes of good practice for greater transparency and openness in economic policy-making and in private sector financial institutions; better processes for monitoring and regulating global financial stability; and reforms to improve the effectiveness of the international financial institutions. We hope to see good progress in these areas by the IMF/World Bank meetings in April 1999.

The G8 has renewed, at Birmingham and since, its commitment to resisting protectionism and continuing trade liberalisation in the framework of the WTO.

At Birmingham, G8 leaders discussed national action plans which set out practical measures to promote employability. These were based on the seven principles agreed at the G8 conference on employability, growth and inclusion in February to generate new employment opportunities and tackle unemployment and exclusion.

Development was a key theme of our Presidency. At Birmingham, G8 members committed themselves to the internationally agreed targets for economic and social development. They recognised the importance of substantial levels of development assistance and undertook to work towards untying it wherever possible. They supported the WHO's roll-back malaria initiative, to which the UK has pledged £60 million, and which is now being actively implemented by Mrs. Brundtland, the new Director General.

The UK was keen to use our Presidency to press ahead with debt relief for the heavily indebted poor countries (HIPC) initiative. The Birmingham Summit agreed that all eligible countries should be in the debt relief process by the year 2000, and should receive interim relief where necessary. The IMF/World Bank annual meetings in October took this forward by agreeing to extend the HIPC initiative to the end of 2000; to allow IMF post-conflict assistance programmes to count towards a country's track record under the HIPC initiative; to carry out a comprehensive review of the initiative as early as 1999; and to undertake further work on what the international financial institutions can do to help post-conflict countries. Following UK proposals, the World Bank has set up a trust fund to help meet the multilateral debt service obligations of Nicaragua and Honduras, and the Paris Club of official bilateral creditors has agreed a three-year moratorium for these countries.

Leaders set in train further G8 action against trans-national organised crime. They endorsed a 10-point plan to combat high-tech crime and agreed the need for further action against money laundering and financial crime, official corruption, trafficking in human beings and the illegal firearms trade. Since Birmingham, officials have taken this work forward and G8 Interior Ministers reviewed progress in a video conference on 15 December.

With the end of the century fast approaching, leaders recognised the challenge posed by the millennium bug. G8 officials have, since the Summit, co-ordinated G8 preparations and contingency planning, worked actively to raise global awareness, and started to identify vulnerable areas in which international organisations have a key role to play. The United Kingdom is contributing £10 million to the World Bank trust fund to help developing countries.

After agreement at Birmingham for urgent work to take forward the Kyoto Protocol on climate change, G8 members all negotiated constructively at the conference of the parties in Buenos Aires in November and secured agreement on a workplan to bring into effect the international mechanisms such as emissions trading. G8 Foreign Ministers in May endorsed an action programme to protect the world's forests. In April, G8 Environment Ministers agreed a package of measures to fight against environmental crime.

In May, G8 Foreign Ministers agreed to focus G8 efforts against terrorism on terrorist financing, improving co-ordination on hostage-taking, and export controls on explosives and other terrorist-related items. A conference of senior officials on 7–8 December agreed shared principles and points for further action to tackle terrorist support mechanisms.

G8 leaders and Foreign Ministers discussed international action in various regions, for example the Middle East and Kosovo. After Birmingham condemned India's nuclear tests, G8 Foreign Ministers met in June and established a senior officials task force of G8 and other countries to take forward the international response to the tests in India and Pakistan.

We are working closely with the German government on the hand over to their G7/8 Presidency on 1 January 1999 and are preparing for the next G8 Summit in Holn on 18–20 June 1999.

European Commission

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Prime Minister how many and what percentage of people working for the European Commission are British. [64401]

The Prime Minister: There are 1,172 Britons working as permanent officials of the European Commission. This equals 7 per cent. of the total work force.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Prime Minister what percentage of people in the higher European Commission Civil Service positions are British. [64402]

The Prime Minister: The percentage of permanent officials in the higher grades of the European Commission who are British is 9 per cent. This can be further broken down into the following grades: 'A' Grade (graduate administrators)—11 per cent., 'LA' Grade (linguistic)—10 per cent.; and 'B' Grade (executive officers)—6 per cent.

Fox Hunting

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister what plans the Government have to (a) introduce legislation relating to fox hunting and (b) provide opportunities for legislation relating to fox hunting. [64483]

The Prime Minister: We have kept fully to our Manifesto commitment on this issue, which was to allow a free vote. Members made their views clear with a huge majority in favour of banning hunting. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has met with my hon. Friend the Member for Worcester (Mr. Foster) and others to look at ways of dealing with this issue.

The Government's priority is to ensure the successful passage of the full legislative programme which was set out in the Queen's Speech.

Correspondence

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library his response to the letter of 25 November to him from Michael Stone, former head of the United Nations Multidisciplinary Observer Unit, Iraq. [62796]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 7 December 1998]: A copy of the reply to Mr. Stone's letter will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Sure Start

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to introduce the Sure Start programme in Northern Ireland. [64143]

Mr. McFall: Present expenditure plans do not include provision for the introduction of the Sure Start programme in Northern Ireland. However, the Government are already doing a great deal in Northern Ireland to develop improved support systems for families with young children and a consultation exercise early next year on the Northern Ireland Childcare Strategy will seek views from a wide range of interests about how programmes for families with young children might best be further developed here. It will then be for the Northern Ireland Assembly to decide on the way forward.

Partnership Areas

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list for district partnership areas in the last financial year (a) the spending on community businesses and (b) the percentage of the productive investment budget this represents. [64210]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The information requested is as follows:

Partnership	£
1. Antrim Borough Partnership	0
2. The Ards Partnership	77,810
3. Armagh City and District Partnership	0
4. Ballymena Partnership	26,028
5. Ballymoney District Partnership	25,725
6. Banbridge District Partnership	9,750
7. Belfast European Partnership Board	0
8. Carrickfergus Together	0
9. Castlereagh Partnership	0
10. Coleraine Borough Partnership	0
11. Cookstown District Partnership	0
12. Craigavon District Partnership	30,900
13. Derry District Partnership	0
14. Down District Partnership	92,226
15. Fermanagh Partnership	233,195
16. Larne Partnership	39,000
17. Limavady Partnership	0
18. Lisburn Partnership	0
19. Magherafelt Partnership	0
20. Moyle Partnership	27,249
21. Newry and Mourne	31,000
22. Newtownabbey Partnership	0
23. North Down Partnership	0
24. Omagh District Partnership	113,600
25. South Tyrone Partnership	0
26. Strabane District Partnership	285,000

In the first tranche of funding, the Productive Investment allocation was an indicative percentage of the total (£41 million). At 18 per cent., it represents approximately £7,380,000 over 3 years (this figure is approximate, taking into account Exchange Rate Fluctuations).The figures shown for District Partnerships in one year (£991,483) represents only 13.43 per cent. of the budget, but the budget is indicative only, and the figures only relate to one year.

Military Strategy

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what dates since April Ministers attended meetings at which the review of military strategy in Northern Ireland was an agenda item, indicating which of these meetings were attended by (a) the Chief Constable of the RUC and (b) the General Officer Commanding. [64211]

Mr. Ingram: Military strategy is considered at many of the frequent formal and ad hoc meetings and contacts the Secretary of State has with the Chief Constable and GOC. Naturally these in no way prejudice the operational independence of the Chief Constable, supported by the GOC.

Hospitals (Capital Expenditure)

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much capital expenditure on what dates and for what purposes has been made at (a) the South Tyrone Hospital and (b) the Craigavon Area Hospital since April 1991. [64265]

Mr. McFall: Prior to April 1993 in the case of Craigavon Hospital, and April 1996 in the case of South Tyrone Hospital, the Southern Health and Social Services Board was responsible for capital expenditure in minor works and equipment in its area where the cost was below £1 million. From these dates, the responsibility has been delegated to the Trusts for determining priorities for local investment, up to £0.5 million, out of their general capital provision. Details of individual items below the delegated limits are not available centrally.

In April 1993 an allocation of £1.25 million was made to the Southern Health and Social Services Board for replacement of the main theatres in the South Tyrone Hospital.

Craigavon Hospital currently has a major capital project which involves recladding of the exterior of the building. This project started in mid-1994 and is due to finish in 2002. The current estimate of the total cost of the project is £14.5 million.

Capital expenditure on the project in each financial year by the Craigavon Area Hospital Group Trust is as follows:

£ million

Financial year	Amount
1994–95	0.250
1995–96	0.877
1996–97	2.669
1997–98	2.970
1998–99	4.680
Total	11.446

DEFENCE

Nerve Gas Attacks (Japan)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the clinical data on the long-term health effects on the victims of the nerve gas attacks on the Tokyo subway and Matsumato in 1994 and 1995; if his Department has reached any conclusions; and if he will make a statement. [63841]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 17 December 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the clinical assessment of the long-term health effects on the victims of the nerve gas attacks on the Tokyo subway and Matsumato in 1994 and 1995. Although the Ministry of Defence and the Chemical and Biological Defence Sector (CBD) of DERA at Porton Down are aware of both the incidents and the acute toxic effects of sarin experienced in the immediate aftermath of the attacks, we have not undertaken a clinical assessment of the potential long-term effects of these attacks.

However, staff at CBD understand that Japan has instigated a long term follow-up programme to monitor the individuals who were involved in these incidents and it is anticipated that results from this programme will be published in due course.

I hope that this is helpful.

Porton Down

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many papers in the Technical Memoranda series of technical papers produced by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down, are currently unclassified; when the series of papers (a) started and (b) finished; and how many papers have so far been produced in the series. [63933]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 17 December 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the Technical Memorandum series of technical papers produced by the Chemical and Biological Defence Sector of the Defence evaluation and Research Agency at Porton Down. This series of internal technical reports started in September 1980 and finished in June 1994. It contains over 100 reports, of which 17 are unclassified.

I hope that this is helpful.

Iraq

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flights have been made by the RAF in the air exclusion zones in North and South Iraq since this military operation commenced. [64295]

Mr. George Robertson: Since patrolling of the northern and southern Iraqi No-Fly-Zones began (in 1991 and 1992 respectively), the RAF have flown a total of some 15,500 sorties in the zones.

Defence Evaluation and Research Agency

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place a list of the 49 unclassified papers in the DERA reports series in the Library, specifying the title of each paper and the date on which it was produced. [63932]

Mr. Spellar: I have arranged for a list of the titles and dates to be placed in the Library of the House. The Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency regrets that unfortunately there was an error in his reply to my hon. Friend's previous question about these reports on 18 November 1998, Official Report, column 636. There are, in fact, 44 not 49 unclassified reports in the series.

Information Technology

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the abandonment of the IT system being prepared by Data Sciences for the Defence Intelligence Staff, indicating the reasons for the abandonment; what is the breakdown of the costs incurred; for what reasons an off-the-shelf system was not ordered at the time of the original decision; and what estimates were made at that time of the costs of an off-the-shelf system. [63717]

Mr. Spellar: The IT system referred to was selected in July 1988 following a detailed requirements survey. No off-the-shelf system was available which could meet the requirement and the rigorous security standards which were necessary. The system was abandoned in November 1996 because delays in implementing the contract and rapid changes in IT technology meant that it no longer met either the developing business needs of the Department or current health and safety standards.

Many valuable lessons have been learned about the acquisition and development of such a demanding system and these align closely with the principles of the Smart Procurement Initiative.

As a result of these lessons, a follow-on-system has now been put into service at a fraction of the cost using up to date commercial-off-the-shelf technology and is successfully operating on a widespread basis.

A precise breakdown of the costs incurred is not easy to establish but was around £14 million for hardware with the remainder for software development. Some £2 million were recovered from the company concerned in liquidated damages.

Nuclear-powered Submarines

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the United Kingdom and France have reciprocal rights for their nuclear-powered submarines to use docking facilities in (a) either country and (b) their overseas dependent territories. [63901]

Mr. Spellar: The UK and France do not have any reciprocal rights for their nuclear-powered submarines to use docking facilities in (a) either country and (b) their overseas dependent territories. We do, however, have berthing arrangements for nuclear-powered submarines with a number of countries, including France.

Chile

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of occasions upon which the Commander in Chief of the Chilean Army has visited the United Kingdom since 1990, the duration of each visit, and the officers of the British armed forces and officials of his Department's Defence Sales Organisation whom he met on each occasion. [64023]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 15 December 1998]: As far as we are able to ascertain from available records, no official visit to the United Kingdom has been made by the Commander-in-Chief of the Chilean Army during the years in question. We are, however, aware that the then Commander-in-Chief of the Chilean Army, General Pinochet, made six private visits to the United Kingdom between 1990 and 1997. We can find no record of his meeting any Officers or officials of the Defence Export Services Organisations on these occasions.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the names of each Royal Navy vessel which has visited Chile in the last five years and the dates and duration of the visits; and what future visits to Chile by Royal Navy vessels are planned. [63409]

Mr. George Robertson [pursuant to his reply, 14 December 1998, c. 331]: I regret that one visit by HMS Northumberland was inadvertently omitted from the list provided and the dates for the visit of HMS Brazen in 1994 were wrong.

The correct information is as follows:

Year	Vessel	Date
1994	HMS Brazen	28 September to 20 November 1994
1996	HMS Northumberland	27 June to 29 June 1996

General Pinochet

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the contacts which took place between his Department and the Embassy of Chile about the security of General Pinochet during his visit to Britain in the autumn. [64331]

Mr. George Robertson: My Department is not aware of any contacts with the Embassy of Chile concerning General Pinochet's security.

Scottish Infantry Battalions

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the (i) establishment and (ii) current strength of each of the regular Scottish infantry battalions; and if he will list each element of company strength or above currently serving in them. [62542]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 8 December 1998]: The establishment and current strength of each of the six regular Scottish Infantry Battalions, as at 1 November, is as listed. The strength figures for individual companies within these Battalions is dependent, at any one time, on the operational or training needs of the Battalion. The individual company figures are, therefore, a snapshot of strength on 10 December 1998. The Battalion strength figures include personnel who bear the Battation's cap badge but are posted away from it.

Gulf War Veterans

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons Ministry of Defence Police forcibly entered the homes of Gulf War veterans at the beginning of December. [63911]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Constable of the Ministry of Defence Police Agency. I have asked the Chief Constable to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from W. E. E. Boreham to Mr. Llew Smith, dated 17 December 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about Ministry of Defence Police entering the homes of Gulf War veterans, as this falls into my area of responsibility as Chief Constable/Chief Executive of the Ministry of Defence Police Agency.

Ministry of Defence Police did not forcibly enter the homes of Gulf War veterans. On Tuesday 1 December 1998 the Ministry of Defence Police executed search warrants at two private residences in connection with an investigation to determine the whereabouts of MOD documents, believed stolen from the MOD's Gulf Veteran's Medical Assessment Programme at St. Thomas' Hospital, London.

Landmines

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what ways British forces are currently involved in initiatives around the world to reduce the risk of injury from landmines. [64460]

Mr. Spellar: UK Armed Forces personnel currently provide technical expertise and management skills to support mine action programmes world-wide. The Mine Information and Technology Centre at Minley, established in November 1997, has become the focal point for non-governmental organisations and other Government Departments for information on demining operations and provides Mines Awareness training to both military and civilian personnel in the UK. UK military personnel are currently attached to The Mine Action Centre in Mostar, the Mine Information Centre in Kosovo, and the UN Mine Action Service in New York. British forces are involved in mine action activities in Bosnia and provide an Explosives Ordnance Disposal Response Team on the Falkland Islands. We are also planning to second a Colonel to The Geneva International Centre for Humanitarian Demining next year and are examining the possibility of providing personnel to support a further five UN sponsored mine programmes world-wide. My Department continues to explore areas, in conjunction with the FCO and DFID, where the UK Armed Forces' expertise can make a meaningful contribution to humanitarian demining activity.

Armed Forces Recruitment (Scotland)

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to assist the regular and part-time forces and cadets in Scotland to recruit up to their full complement. [61082]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 1 December 1998]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Polo Ponies

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the total cost to the British Army of polo ponies stabled at bases (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) overseas; and how many polo ponies are stabled at its bases in total; [63991]

(2) what proportion of the cost of the maintenance of polo ponies in British military bases (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) overseas is paid by individual polo players. [63992]

Mr. Spellar: My Department does not own any polo ponies, although ponies may be owned by individual service personnel and stabled at private saddle clubs within British Army bases in the United Kingdom and overseas. The cost of stabling these ponies is met by non-public funds and therefore at no cost to my Department. My Department does not hold details of the number of polo ponies stabled within British Army bases, and this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

REME (Chorley)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the projected operating costs for 101 Battalion REME operating out of Queensferry in the first three financial years of operation. [63622]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: This information is not yet available. However, operating costs of the TA Centre at Queensferry are currently forecast to be, over a 25-year period, some 25% lower than the operating costs of the TA Centre at Chorley, where HQ 101 Battalion REME is currently the sole TA occupant. The transfer of HQ 101 Bn to Queensferry, to join other TA units there, will realise further cost savings since it will allow the closure of TAC

Chorley. The precise details have yet to be established, but this work will be undertaken in the New Year as part of my Department's usual financial planning process.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of proposed redundancies of civil servants arising from the transfer of 101 Battalion REME from Chorley Barracks to Queensferry. [63621]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: It is too early to say how many redundancies, if any, will be necessary as a result of the transfer of 101 Battalion REME from Chorley to Queensferry, and what the cost of these redundancies may be.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals for the future of 101 Battalion REME at the Devonshire Road Barracks, Chorley were included in earlier drafts of his review of the Territorial Army. [63619]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: Initial outline proposals, issued as a basis for the consultative process, proposed that the Headquarters 101 Battalion would remain in Chorley.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many official visits (a) he and (b) the ministers in his Department have made to Buckinghamshire since 2 May 1997; and if he will list them. [64138]

Mr. Spellar: Ministers in this Department have made the following visits to Buckinghamshire since 2 May 1997.

Secretary of State for Defence

14 October 1997: RAF Strike Command, High Wycombe

16 June 1998: RAF Strike Command, High Wycombe

Minister of State for the Armed Forces

5 June 1997: RAF Strike Command, High Wycombe

26 September 1997: Services Sound and Vision Corporation, Gerrards Cross.

CR Gas

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times the armed forces have used CR tear gas since 1968; on what dates CR gas was used; for what reasons; and in what circumstances the armed forces have been authorised to use CR tear gas since 1968. [63842]

Mr. Spellar: We have no records of CR having been used operationally by the Armed Forces. I understand that a small amount, however, has been used for training purposes in the past, but details of when this took place are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

CR was authorised to be held in readiness for use in Northern Ireland in October 1973. Its possible use has also been authorised on a small number of occasions where the armed forces have responded to a request for assistance for law enforcement purposes from the civil power. CR is only authorised as a non-lethal self-defence option where the risk to the safety of military personnel is considered particularly high.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Antibiotic Growth Promoters

13. Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the use of antibiotic growth promoters in food. [62997]

Mr. Rooker: The Government are responding today to the House of Lords Science and Technology Select Committee's report on resistance to antibiotics and other antimicrobial agents. We support a phased withdrawal of antimicrobial growth promoters which may impair the efficacy of prescribed therapeutic antibiotics used in human medicine through the development of resistant strains of organisms.

Flood Defences

16. Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to improve flood defences and warnings. [63000]

Mr. Nick Brown: Local operating authorities, including the Environment Agency, are responsible for flood defence. The Agency is responsible for flood warning systems and has published an Action Plan for implementing the recommendations of the independent review of last Easter's flooding.

28. Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what additional money he will make available for the protection of farm land against flood in North Devon. [63013]

Mr. Morley: It is the responsibility of local operating authorities (primarily the Environment Agency (EA) and local authorities) to identify the need for flood defence measures and to decide which projects should be promoted. Therefore the Government cannot direct authorities to protect farm land. However the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions has notified local authorities that the flood defence element of their Standard Spending Assessments for 1999–2000 will be 6.3 per cent. higher than actual expenditure (on EA levies, Internal Drainage Board special levies and own revenue expenditure) in 1998–99. This Department will shortly announce funding for the Environment Agency's core capital programme for 1999–2000 in the South West; in addition the South West will benefit from further funding for flood warning improvements being provided to the Agency on a national basis.

Pig Industry

17. Mr. Thompson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is pursuing with other European Agriculture Ministers to help the pig industry. [63001]

Mr. Nick Brown: I have held a number of constructive discussions with my counterparts in the EU; both in Agriculture Council and in bilateral meetings. Following those discussions, we have encouraged the EU Commission to use all the mechanisms it has available to help alleviate the particularly difficult market conditions faced by the EU pig industry.

19. Mr. David Heath: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with pig producers in the south west about the current state of pig farming. [63003]

Mr. Nick Brown: Ministers have had a number of constructive discussions in recent weeks with pig farmers in the South West and elsewhere in Britain. These have helped us understand the crisis situation facing pig farmers at the present time.

Milk (Derbyshire)

18. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reports he has received concerning levels of dioxin in milk in Derbyshire; and if he will make a statement. [63002]

Mr. Rooker: Since 1991, samples of cows' milk have been taken from dairy farms in the Bolsover and Staveley areas for analysis for dioxins. The results are routinely published and show that the levels of dioxins in cows' milk from both areas are now similar to those found in other parts of the UK. For this reason, the Ministry has no plans to carry out further sampling.

Battery Hens

20. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he has taken to improve the welfare of battery hens. [63004]

Mr. Rooker: We initiated discussions on proposals for new and improved EU welfare standards for all laying hens during our Presidency. We will continue to work with our European partners to being these negotiations to a satisfactory conclusion.

Food Standards Agency

21. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the timetable is for consultation on financing the proposed Food Standards Agency. [63005]

Mr. Nick Brown: The Government remain committed to setting up the Food Standards Agency following the proposals outlined in the White Paper, The Food Standards Agency: A Force for Change (CM 3830). Should additional Parliamentary time become available, we hope to make progress on the necessary legislation in the present Session. In the meantime, following discussion with colleagues today, I can announce that we shall publish the Food Standards Bill in draft for public consultation in January 1999. The draft Bill will be available for pre-legislative scrutiny by this House. At the same time, we intend to publish a document for consultation on the Government's proposals for financing the Agency.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) when he expects to publish the draft Bill to establish a food standards agency; and what period will be provided for pre-legislative scrutiny of it; [63548]

(2) what form the pre-legislative scrutiny of the draft Bill to establish a food standards agency will take. [63547]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The Government remain committed to setting up the Food Standards Agency following the proposals outlined in the White Paper, The Food Standards Agency: A Force for Change (CM 3830). Should additional Parliamentary time become available, we hope to make progress on the necessary legislation in the present Session. In the meantime, following discussion with colleagues today, I can announce that we shall publish the Food Standards Bill in draft for public consultation in January 1999. The draft Bill will be available for pre-legislative scrutiny by this House. At the same time, we intend to publish a document for consultation on the Government's proposals for financing the Agency.

Farmers (Competitiveness)

22. Mr. Loughton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he will take to ensure British farmers can compete on even terms with farmers in countries that have lower food and animal welfare standards. [63006]

Mr. Rooker: I am working hard to create a level playing field for standards across the European Union. As a result of initiatives we took in our Presidency, the European Commission has been charged with producing a report by June 1999 considering the relationship between EU and third country farm animal welfare standards and making any necessary proposals.

Farm Incomes

23. Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of the recent decline in farm incomes on the UK farming industry. [63007]

Mr. Rooker: My Department announced on 1 December that Total Income from Farming is forecast to be 33 per cent. lower in 1998 compared to 1997. The main reason for the fall in prices in 1998 has been the oversupply of commodity markets, although the strength of the "green pound" has also been a factor.

The Government are aware of the difficult times that some sectors of the farming industry are undergoing, and have responded by announcing an aid package worth £120 million, targeted to the sectors most affected.

For the future, Government and all those associated with food production in the UK need to work together towards a sustainable, competitive and profitable industry and an attractive and viable countryside. This means in particular securing reform of the Common Agricultural Policy.

Farming (Profitability)

24. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the prospects for future profitability of farming in the United Kingdom over the next 10 years. [63008]

Mr. Rooker: It is difficult to predict the trend in farm incomes because of the many factors involved. I am kept informed by my officials on how specific market developments could impact on farm incomes.

Beef on the Bone

25. Mr. Blunt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many prosecutions have taken place with regard to the sale of beef on the bone to the final consumer. [63009]

Mr. Rooker: Local authorities are generally responsible for enforcing the Beef Bones Regulations 1997 and I am not aware that any prosecutions have been completed though at least three are in progress. I would expect prosecutions to be taken if other enforcement action fails. I understand that such action has included reminding traders that the retail sale of bone-in beef is not permitted, the issuing of warnings and the formal cautioning of traders who admit to retailing bone-in beef. Details of prosecutions brought to my Department's attention are included in the BSE Enforcement Bulletin which is published monthly by my Department. Copies of the Bulletin are available in the Libraries of the House.

Bovine Tuberculosis

26. Mrs. Organ: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures have been taken to combat TB in cattle. [63010]

Mr. Rooker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend for Stroud (Mr. Drew) on 12 November 1998, Official Report, column 311.

Meat and Bonemeal

27. Mr. Dawson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has to change the regulation of the disposal of meat and bonemeal. [63011]

Mr. Rooker: The Government have no plans to change the regulations which currently govern the disposal of meat and bonemeal.

Common Agricultural Policy

29. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will meet the Commission of the European Union to discuss the fraudulent misapplication of funds under the common agricultural policy. [63014]

Mr. Rooker: I have no plans to do so. The Government have made it clear that they strongly support and encourage measures to reduce fraud against the CAP budget and to improve the budget's financial management.

Turkeys

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the competitiveness of the United Kingdom turkey industry. [62999]

Mr. Rooker: In common with other agricultural sectors, the turkey industry is experiencing difficulties and having to compete with cheap imports from other EU member states, particularly on the catering market.

The standard turkey as a Christmas loss leader in UK supermarkets will mean that lower priced imports will be competing with UK production during the busy Christmas period. However, at least one major supermarket is sourcing from the UK only and traditional farm fresh turkeys will all be British.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Quinn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 14 and 15 December. [64558]

Mr. Nick Brown: I represented the United Kingdom at a meeting of the European Union Agriculture Council in Brussels on 14 and 15 December.

The Council agreed by qualified majority (Belgium, Spain and Portugal abstaining) a Commission proposal to ban the use of four antibiotics in animal feed as from 30 June 1999. I welcomed the proposal as an appropriate response to advice, including from our own specialist scientific committees, that the use of antimicrobial growth promoters which may impair the efficacy of antibiotics used in human medicines should be phased out. I also welcomed the Council's statement stressing the need for an overall science-based approach to the issue of antibiotic resistance and calling for the Commission to submit a further report on the question of third country compliance with equivalent rules.

The Council also agreed by qualified majority (Italy and the Netherlands opposing, Portugal abstaining) two regulations establishing new agrimonetary arrangements to apply following introduction of the Single Currency on 1 January 1999. I supported these measures which will greatly simplify the agrimonetary system whilst reducing its costs and making it easier to operate. I was particularly pleased to secure provision that the impact of the ending of the freeze on green rates on 1 January, which benefited our farmers more than any other member state's, will be subject to a gradual transition over 3 years.

The Council reached unanimous political agreement on a proposal to send food aid to Russia, targeted towards regions most in need. I particularly welcomed this important gesture of EU solidarity with the Russian people.

A discussion of the Commission's proposal for reform of the wine regime concluded with agreement that final decisions should be taken in the context of the Agenda 2000 CAP reforms in the early part of next year. The Commission debated a proposal to establish EU-wide rules governing organic livestock standards, agreeing guidelines for further negotiations.

A package of proposals concerning the marketing of seeds was adopted by qualified majority (Denmark voting against). Council resolution on an EU forestry strategy was agreed unanimously, as was a decision approving a national aid to certain Greek co-operatives. The Commission also adopted unanimously a further postponement of the implementation of the 1997 Decision on Specified Risk Materials and a short deferral of implementation of new intra-Community health rules on trade in cattle and pigs.

Over-30-months Scheme

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made on destroying over-30-months Scheme tallow stocks since his answer of 13 July 1998, Official Report, column 88. [64670]

Mr. Rooker: At the end of November 1998, stocks of OTMS tallow stood at 185,000 tonnes. Over 53,000 tonnes of tallow have been sold to renderers to burn as a fuel to power the rendering process. The Intervention Board have commissioned a leading firm of environmental engineers to report early in the new year on the opportunities for the large scale destruction of OTMS tallow in accordance with the requirements of Commission Regulation 716/96. The Board's aim is to conclude early supply contracts which take full account of the need to protect human and environmental health and yield the best return for the taxpayer.

WTO Agriculture Agreement

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are his principal objectives with regard to the forthcoming negotiations on the World Trade Organisation's Agreement on Agriculture; and if he will make a statement. [63492]

Mr. Rooker: World Trade Organisation negotiations on agriculture are due to start in January 2000. We expect them to cover the same broad framework as the last negotiations (in the Uruguay Round), focusing on further improvements in import access for agricultural products; further cuts in subsidised exports; and reductions in domestic support to agriculture. We want these negotiations to be part of a comprehensive, time-limited round of trade liberalisation negotiations.

The European Commission will participate in the negotiations on behalf of the EU. We will therefore work to ensure that UK interests are properly taken into account. The negotiations will be an important opportunity for further liberalisation of agricultural trade in line with the UK's objectives on reform of the CAP. These are to phase out productions support over a period in order to reduce substantially the costs of the CAP to consumers and taxpayers, to encourage the development of a viable and sustainable farming industry which is capable of competing without ongoing production support, and to conserve and enhance the rural environment and promote the rural economy through targeted measures.

Beef Ban

Mr. Green: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to make an announcement on the lifting of the export ban on beef derivatives with particular reference to tallow and gelatine. [63344]

Mr. Rooker: Exports of tallow derived from bovine animals slaughtered in the UK for use in human food, animal feed, cosmetics and medical and pharmaceutical products may recommence when the European Commission has inspected the implementation in the UK of the controls laid down in Council Decision 98/256/EC and set a date for this, after consulting the Standing Veterinary Committee. We have invited the Commission to carry out the required inspection and hope they will do so soon.

There is at present no proposal from the European Commission to lift the prohibition on exports of gelatin derived from bovine animals slaughtered in the UK for use in human food, animal feed, cosmetics and medical and pharmaceutical products. But all UK producers are approved to export gelatin made from imported bovine raw materials for such uses.

Gelatin, tallow and other byproducts derived from bovine animals slaughtered in the UK can already be exported for uses other than in human food, animal feed, cosmetics and medical and pharmaceutical products.

Fisheries

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what assessment his Department has made of future stock levels of each species of quota fish for the next four years; [64161]

(2) what estimate his Department has made of indicative total allowable catches for (a) 2000, (b) 2001 and (c) 2002; and if he will make those estimates available to the industry. [64160]

Mr. Morley: Fisheries scientists from the Ministry's Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science (CEFAS) annually join with other international experts to undertake assessments of commercial fish stocks under the auspices of the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea (ICES).

Neither CEFAS nor ICES provides a forecast of stock size or catches over the next few years. This is because the future stock size and catches are significantly affected by the large natural variation in the number of young fish born each year and the level of total allowance catches agreed each year by Fisheries Ministers.

ICES does however provide an assessment of the current size and state of the stocks, and of the effects on the stocks of different sizes of catches taken in 1999. It also provides an indication of the status of the stocks, in the medium term, if fishing rates are set at particular levels relative to current fishing. For the longer term, ICES estimates the average long term catches and stock sizes that can be expected with different fishing rates applied to the stocks.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to ensure that the six and twelve mile fishing limits will be retained after the renegotiation of the Common Fisheries Policy in 2002. [64155]

Mr. Morley: The Government are committed to ensuring the retention of restrictions on access by foreign vessels within six and twelve mile fisheries limits. They will secure this by working with other Member States and European Commission.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what discussion (a) he and (b) his Department's officials have had with producer organisation representatives on industry proposals for coastal state management-based reform of the Common Fisheries Policy; [64158]

(2) what assessment he has made of the Scottish Fishermen's Federation and the National Federation of Fishing Organisation's joint proposal to operate a system of coastal state management of the fishing industry. [64159]

Mr. Morley: The Government have welcomed the industry's joint position paper as a good basis for discussion. I and Ministry officials have discussed the paper with the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations and Scottish Fishermen's Federation, including producer organisation representatives. The two Federations have also been discussing their ideas with their counterparts in other Member States and I shall be interested to see the outcome of these contacts.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for the future (a) operation and (b) funding of the Sea Fisheries Committees. [64156]

Mr. Morley: Sea Fisheries Committees will continue to play an important role in regulating inshore fisheries in England and Wales out to 6 miles from baselines. Funding is the responsibility of their constituent local authorities.

Supermarkets

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps the Government are taking to encourage supermarkets to maintain diversity of supply. [63382]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 15 December 1998]: Decisions on the sourcing of produce at retail level are matters for the commercial judgment of the various retail companies, and it is not the Government's role to interfere in such decisions. We do however work closely with interests throughout the food chain, including the supermarkets, to encourage transparency in the interests of producers and consumers alike.

Poultry

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy in respect of routine visits to poultry farms to ensure minimum inspection requirements are met. [63376]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 December 1998]: I attach a high priority to the registration and inspection of farms wishing to use special marketing terms under EC egg marketing legislation. MAFF's Egg Marketing Inspectorate set annual targets reflecting the number, size and importance of the premises to ensure compliance with the set criteria. The figures are published annually in the Inspectorate's annual Report. Next year they will do the same for poultry meat marketing terms.

The State Veterinary Service visits farms to check compliance with statutory requirements and to encourage high animal welfare standards. Some visits are undertaken on a random basis, but priority is always given to responding to indications of possible welfare problems (e.g. complaints, problems detected at slaughterhouses).

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Students

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many graduate students of (i) nuclear and (ii) elementary particle physics there were at UK universities in (a) 1980, (b) 1985, (c) 1990, (d) 1995 and (e) 1998. [63083]

Mr. Mudie: The data requested are not available centrally. The available data show the numbers of postgraduate physics students in total but do not separately identify nuclear or elementary particle physics. The figures for physics are as follows:

Postgraduate students in Physics—former Universities Funding Council (UFC) Universities in Great Britain

Academic year	Full-time	Part-time
1980–81	1,794	755
1985–86	1,850	538
1990–91	2,216	555
1995–96	2,545	1,351
1997–98	2,319	1,330

New Deal (Women)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what assessment he has made of the arrangements for encouraging women to take up subsidised work under the New Deal; [63716]

(2) what assessment he has made of the factors which make women more likely to be transferred to other benefits while on the New Deal than men; [63715]

(3) what steps he has taken to encourage more women to join the New Deal. [63714]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 16 December 1998]: All young people who have been unemployed and claiming Jobseekers Allowance for six months or more, are eligible for New Deal whether they are men or women. During the Gateway all participants are equally encouraged to look for unsubsidised work or take up one of the New Deal options, including subsidised work or take up one of the New Deal options, including subsidised employment. The reasons for transfer to other benefits, including differences in transfer rates between men and women, are being examined as part of the New Deal evaluation.

The latest Government Statistical Service data for end of September show that of the 167,400 young people who start new Deal 43,700 (26 per cent.) were female.

Prisoners (University for Industry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to promote the take up of the University for Industry courses amongst prisoner inmates. [64426]

Mr. Mudie: There are no definite plans yet to promote the University for Industry among prison inmates. However, distance learning opens up new opportunities to deliver education and training in prisons and the University for Industry may therefore be of potential benefit to prison inmates. Ministers have already met colleagues at the Home Office to consider the possibilities. Further discussions are planned between the University for Industry and the Prison Service.

Education Development Plans

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the progress of the education development plans. [64170]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 15 December 1998]: Draft education development plans were due to be sent to the Department by 14 December for preliminary consideration. Final plans are to be submitted for approval by 28 February.

Class Sizes

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the means by which the additional funding for the reduction of class sizes will be met by local education authorities and diocesan authorities. [63773]

Ms Estelle Morris: We are making sufficient resources available for the class size pledge to be delivered fully by local education authorities and schools. £560 million is available over the next three years and this will be paid in the form of 100 per cent. grant for capital and revenue funding for all the types of schools covered by local authority implementation plans.

New Deal (Shrewsbury and Atcham)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have started on the New Deal scheme in Shrewsbury and Atcham broken down by (a) employer, (b) full-time education/training, (c) voluntary sector, (d) environmental task force and (e) other. [64076]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The latest Government Statistical Service figures for clients in the Shropshire Unit of Delivery, which covers the Shrewsbury and Atcham area, shows that to the end of September 1998, 695 young people had started on New Deal. 196 have left the Gateway of which (a) 24 have gained subsidised jobs through the Employment option (b) 43 have entered Full-Time Education and Training (c) 5 on the Voluntary Sector option (d) 12 on the Environment Task Force and (e) 112 have gone to other destinations including 75 who have gained unsubsidised employment.

Further Education

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if students registered with the University for Industry on courses up to and including Level 3 will count as further education enrolments. [62550]

Mr. Mudie: The University for Industry will offer access to comprehensive information and to flexible skills-based programmes at all levels. Some learners using UfI materials may be enrolled at further education colleges or other institutions; others could be registered with other providers, or be learning individually in UfI learning centres, or at home. This will depend on the needs of the individual learner.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of the additional further education students planned for the year 2002 will be University for Industry enrolments. [62546]

Mr. Mudie: No such decision has yet been taken. That will reflect student choices.

Lone Parents

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money is being made available in the 12 months from 1 December for lone parents with children of school age receiving income support in Oxfordshire. [63648]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 14 December 1998]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Shaun Woodward, dated 1998:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how much money is being made available in the 12 months from 1 December for lone parents with children of school age receiving income support in the Oxfordshire area. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

The New Deal for Lone Parents programme is aimed at those lone parents on Income Support whose children are of school age although it is also available to lone parents with younger children. A total of £2.34m for the programme has been allocated to the Employment Service London and South East Region, which includes Oxfordshire, for the period from December 1998 to March 1999. This figure includes all programme and running costs but does not include funding for in-work and lone parent benefits.

Unfortunately, separate figures for individual areas are not available. Funding allocations for 1999–2000 have not yet been agreed.

I am sorry that I cannot be more helpful.

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if the training undertaken by the advisers for the New Deal for Lone Parents is accredited towards a national vocational qualification; [63994]

(2) what proportion of the advisers for the New Deal for Lone Parents have been recruited from (a) the Benefits Agency, (b) the Employment Service, (c) the Child Support Agency and (d) other backgrounds. [63995]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. John Healey, dated 1998:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions regarding whether the training undertaken by the advisers for the New Deal for Lone Parents is accredited towards a national vocational qualification and what proportion of the advisers for New Deal for Lone Parents have been recruited from (a) the Benefits Agency, (b) the Employment Service, (c) the Child Support Agency and (d) other backgrounds. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Highly skilled personal advisers are a crucial element in the success of New Deal for Lone Parents. Personal advisers were recruited on the basis that they would receive extensive training to cover all aspects of their job and would work towards an NVQ level 3 in Guidance. A number of the training modules New Deal Lone Parent advisers complete will contribute to their work towards the NVQ level 3 in Guidance.

As of 30 October approximately 88% of Lone Parent advisers have been recruited from the Employment Service, 5% from the Benefits Agency and 7% from the Child Support Agency.

I hope this is helpful.

Child Care

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what plans his Department has to raise the standards of care and safety for over-eight year olds in child care provision; [64115]

(2) what plans he has to extend the regulations of child care to those providing care for the over-eights; [64116]

(3) what estimate his Department has made of the cost of registering those caring for children over eight years of age. [64118]

Ms Hodge: The consultation paper on the regulation of early education and day care, issued earlier this year by the Department of Health and the Department for Education and Employment, asked whether there should be regulation of day care for children over 8-years-old and, if so, in what form. The Government are considering the responses and will announce their intentions in due course, mindful of the need to ensure children in day care are suitably protected from harm. The cost of any extension to current arrangements will be considered along with all other factors.

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what research his Department has commissioned on parents' views about (a) the quality of child care provision and (b) the system of registration of child carers. [64117]

Ms Hodge: We have commissioned a baseline survey of parents of children aged up to and including 14 years to establish nationally the demand for child care. This survey will ask parents about the overall quality of child care in the local area. Parents' opinions of the registration of child carers have not been surveyed, although a number of individuals responded to the Government's recent consultation paper on the regulation of early education and day care.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment by what means the National Child Care Strategy will be targeted, with particular reference to the City of Coventry. [63503]

Ms Hodge [holding answer 14 December 1998]: To date, a total of £470 million has been committed to the National Child Care Strategy in England over five years. Planning and implementation of the Strategy in England is being taken forward at local level by the new Early Years Development and Child Care Partnerships which have been set up in each local authority area.

Key elements of funding are as follows:

In 1998–99, £12 million has been allocated to Partnerships to carry out local child care audits, consult on demand and draw up plans for the delivery of increased provision next year. This has been allocated on the basis of the number of 0–14 year olds in each Partnership area. The City of Coventry allocation for this work is £81,000. Over the same period, some £22.1 million has been made available to fund the Out of School Child Care Initiative (OSCI), of which £378,000 has been allocated to Coventry and Warwickshire through the local Training and Enterprise Council. In addition, Coventry Local Education Authority has received £87,000 this year through Nursery Education Grant.

For 1999–2000, my Department has allocated £44 million to the Partnerships for child care activities, which includes £6.7 million to safeguard existing good quality services in disadvantaged areas, which are at risk of closure. These funds have again been allocated on the basis of the number of 0–14 year olds in each area, adjusted to take account of the levels of deprivation in each area as reflected by the proportion of children receiving free school meals. For 1999–2000, the City of Coventry Partnership has been allocated a total of £309,700. Nursery Education Grant will again be available to support additional places for 4 year olds, and we shall be announcing support for 3 year olds shortly. Next year's Revenue Support Grant allocation also includes substantial funds to support additional registration and inspection of child care services and the requirement to set up a local Children's Information Service in each Partnership area. A further £7 million is also being made available to TECs next year for training for child care workers: £776,500 of this has been allocated to the West Midlands, but a breakdown at local level is not yet available.

Coventry's education Standard Spending Assessment (SSA) represents an increase of £6.1 million, or 4.1 per cent. over the comparable figure for 1998–99. Part of this may be used to support the National Child Care Strategy.

In addition there is a range of other potential sources of funding which Early Years Development and Child Care Partnerships, local authorities, individuals and other groups can bid for to support National Child Care Strategy objectives. This includes the New Opportunities Fund, which will allocate some £220 million across the UK by 2003 to create new out of school child care places, the Single Regeneration Budget and the European Social Fund.

Teachers' Remuneration

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what consultation he undertook and representations he received prior to the publication of his Green Paper on the future remuneration of teachers. [64119]

Ms Estelle Morris: No formal consultation was undertaken prior to the publication of the Green Paper although a wide range of representations were received from interested bodies during the course of normal business.

A full consultation on the Green Paper has now commenced and will continue until 31 March 1999. A copy of the Green Paper and summaries have been provided to each school to assist with this process.

Teachers (Performance-related Pay)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to review the payment of annual salary increments to teachers in the context of his performance-related pay proposals; and if he will make a statement. [63612]

Ms Estelle Morris: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made to the House on 3 December 1998, Official Report, columns 1041–44, about the Government's consultation on the reform of the teaching profession. In that statement I indicated that we proposed two pay ranges for classroom teachers, separated by a new performance threshold. Up to the threshold, we would expect teachers normally to progress through annual salary increments, as now. To cross the threshold, we would expect teachers to demonstrate high and sustained levels of achievement and commitment. Further steps on the higher pay scale would be based on appraisal of performance.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many grant-maintained schools have had their annual maintenance grant for (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1994–95 and (d) 1995–96 redetermined by reason of retrospective adjustments to their rateable assessments; [63461]

(2) which grant-maintained schools have been required to repay in full overpayment of annual maintenance grant identified following retrospective adjustments to their rateable assessments; and in which of these cases recovery of the money has been phased; [63462]

(3) which grant-maintained schools have not been required to repay the full overpayment of annual maintenance grant identified following retrospective adjustments to their rateable assessments; and what percentage of the overpayment has been required in each case; [63463]

(4) what was the total annual maintenance grant overpaid to grant-maintained schools in respect of each of the years 1992–93 to 1995–96. [63464]

Ms Estelle Morris: These matters are the responsibility of the Funding Agency for Schools. I have asked the Chairman of the Funding Agency to arrange for a reply to be sent to the hon. Member.

New Deal (Unsubsidised Jobs)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate how many of those leaving the New Deal for unsubsidised jobs remain in those jobs for more than (a) one month, (b) two months and (c) three months. [61078]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 30 November 1998]: The New Deal statistics are revised each month to remove from the cumulative unsubsidised jobs count any participant who has remained in a job less than 13 weeks.

The length of time those moving into unsubsidised jobs have remained (a) in those jobs and (b) in employment, will be assessed as part of the evaluation of the New Deal.

New Deal Gateway

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many claimants who have been eligible for the New Deal entered the gateway and then ceased drawing benefit when leaving the gateway after being offered a choice of options and did not go onto draw other benefits or go into education. [62301]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 3 December 1998]: Disaggregation according to whether they have been offered New Deal options is not presently available. This will be examined in the New Deal evaluation.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the monthly expenditure on (a) Gateway provision and (b) other provision for the New Deal for young people by region from January to the end of September. [63276]

Mr. Andrew Smith [pursuant to his reply, 15 December 1998, c. 478]: I am providing a revised response as the figures in my earlier reply had been corrupted during data transmission and were therefore incorrect.

The correct position is that expenditure brought to account by the Employment service since national roll-out of New Deal is £4.36 million for Gateway and £42.79 million for other provision. Separate regional figures are not available for the Pathfinder districts between January and March 1998 as all expenditure was accounted for centrally during that period. The figures for April to September 1998 are shown in the following table.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much of the additional expenditure for education announced in the July Comprehensive Spending Review for England has already been allocated to (a) local authority expenditure, (b) class size reduction, (c) school buildings and repairs, (d) standards fund grants, (e) early years education, (f) further education, (g) higher education and (h) other spending by his Department; and how much has been allocated to no specific purposes as yet. [63326]

Mr. Blunkett: (a) The additional provision for local authority Education Standard Spending over the three years 1999–2000 to 2001–02 is £6,831 million.

(b) The additional provision for class size reduction over the three years is £320 million. This is in addition to £300 million previously committed to the programme.

(c) The additional resources for school buildings and repairs form the Comprehensive Spending Review is some £1.5 billion over the three years[1]. This is in addition to the extra £1.1 billion of capital investment we are making available through the New Deal for Schools. Taken with existing provision this means that there will be a £5.4 billion investment programme in school buildings over the period.

(d) The Standards Fund programme will be over £900 million in 1999–2000. This includes the DfEE grant and the local education authority contribution.

(e) There will be £390 million extra over the three years for early education places for 3 year olds, together with an element of the £452 million for the Sure Start programme.

(f) There will be additional funding for further education of £725 million over the two years 1999–2000 to 2000–01[2].

(g) There will be additional funding for higher education of £776 million over the two years 1999–2000 to 2000–01[3].

Further details on Departmental spending programmes will be published in the Departmental Report in the Spring.

Secondary School Pupils

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 7 December 1998, Official Report, column 85, on secondary school pupils, if he will list the six maintained schools in England with more than 2,000 pupils in January. [64192]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information requested, taken from The 1998 Secondary School Performance Tables is as follows:

Maintained secondary schools with more than 2,000 pupils as at January 1998

Crown Woods School, Greenwich
Great Barr GM School, Birmingham
Outwood Grange School, Wakefield
Wolfreton School, Hull
Exmouth Community College, Devon
Collingwood College, Surrey.

Education Expenditure

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of GNP was spent on (a) education and (b) secondary schools in (i) Germany, (ii) France, (iii) the Netherlands, (iv) Sweden, (v) Switzerland, (vi) the US and (vii) the UK in each year since 1968. [62085]

Mr. Mudie: Information on expenditure on all levels of education as a percentage of GDP has, for the countries mentioned, been collected by the OECD for the period 1970 to 1995 (the latest year for which such collated data are available). Information about secondary school expenditure has not been collected by the OECD separately from other forms of educational expenditure.

This information on all educational expenditure is given in the table. Any comparisons should be cautious, since the expenditure definitions used are not always fully comparable, (particularly in their treatment of research and development expenditure) and definitions, as indicated in the table, have sometimes changed over time. In addition, the special OECD definitions mean that the OECD figures for the UK may differ from those published in "Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses".

Public expenditure on education as a proportion of GDP fell between 1994–95 and 1997–98. However, as a result of the investment in education announced in the Comprehensive Spending Review, expenditure on education as a proportion of GDP will rise from 4.6 per cent. in 1998–99 to 5.0 per cent. in 2001–02.

Public expenditure on education as a percentage of GDP, 1970–1995

Numeracy Hour

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects the numeracy hour to be introduced in schools; and if he will ensure that teaching materials arrive in sufficient time for staff to be trained and organise resources. [62348]

Ms Estelle Morris: Dedicated daily mathematics lessons of up to an hour are expected to be introduced in primary schools from September 1999. Suitable materials will be provided in the early part of next year.

Key Stage 2 National Curriculum Tests

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what percentage of schools have had an above average percentage of pupils scoring below the national average at Key Stage 2, level 4 in (a) reading, (b) writing and (c) numeracy; and how many of these schools are in education action zones; [63312]

(2) what percentage of schools had an above average percentage of pupils scoring below the national average at Key Stage 2, level 4 in (a) reading, (b) writing and (c) numeracy; and how many of these schools are in education action zones. [63980]

Ms Estelle Morris: The table shows the number and percentage of maintained mainstream schools where the proportion of pupils achieving level 4 in the Key Stage 2 National Curriculum tests is below the overall national proportion reaching that level. Data are shown for the English and mathematics tests, together with the reading and writing components of the English test. The proportion of these schools in the first tranche of education action zones is also shown.

The National Curriculum standards have been designed so that most pupils will move up one level every two years. Level 4 is the level expected for most 11 year olds.

Competitive Bidding

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many bids were (a) received and (b) successful in each local education authority area for each competitive bidding process launched by his Department since May 1997. [63979]

Ms Estelle Morris: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 18 November 1998, Official Report, columns 644-45.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the total value in each local education authority of the bids which were (a) received and (b) successful for each competitive bidding process launched by his Department since May 1997. [64184]

Ms Estelle Morris: This question could only be answered at disproportionate cost.

GCSEs

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of schools had a smaller percentage of pupils gaining (a) five GCSEs at grades A* to C and (b) five GCSEs at grades A to G, in 1998 than in 1994; and how many of those schools are in education action zones. [63982]

Ms Estelle Morris: The GCSE information requested is shown in the table:

GCSE information
Total Schools	3,840
Number of schools with a smaller percentage of pupils achieving 5+A*-C GCSE grades in 1998 than in 1994	976
Percentage	25.4
Number of those schools in Education Action Zones	16
Total Schools	3,840
Number of schools with a smaller percentage of pupils achieving 5+A*-G GCSE grades in 1998 than in 1994	946
Percentage	24.6
Number of those schools in Education Action Zones	9

Free Milk

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the Government will re-introduce free milk at school for children in deprived communities. [64430]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The law requires those Local Education Authorities and grant-maintained schools that provide milk to make this available, without charge, to pupils whose parents receive income support or income based job-seekers allowance. The Government have no plans to extend this eligibility or to make the serving of free milk compulsory.

Physical Education

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the provision of physical education in (a) state and (b) private schools. [64427]

Ms Estelle Morris: OFSTED inspections report on individual schools' provision of National Curriculum subjects including physical education. At a national level, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools reports annually to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on compliance with the National Curriculum requirements, including physical education, in state schools. The provision of physical education in private schools is the responsibility of individual headteachers and governing bodies of such schools.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what estimate he has made of the number of hours spent by children doing PE (a) in inner city schools and (b) in suburban schools; [64428]

(2) how many hours per week (a) primary and (b) secondary school children (i) spend currently and (ii) spent in each of the last 10 years doing PE. [64429]

Ms Estelle Morris: There is no prescribed statutory minimum or maximum time which schools should devote to PE. The National Curriculum for PE consists of six areas of activity and schools have a degree of freedom in deciding which physical activities to teach and how much time should be allocated to them and to other National Curriculum subjects. PE must be taught to all children throughout their compulsory schooling.

Evidence from OFSTED inspections of the number of hours per week primary and secondary schools currently spend teaching PE is given in the table.

Key Stage	Average hours of PE per week (approx.)
1 (ages 5–7)	1 hour 20 minutes
2 (ages 7–11)	1 hour 35 minutes
3 (ages 11–14)	2 hours
4 (ages 14–16)	1 hour 15 minutes

These figures do not account for travelling and changing time incurred in the provision of swimming tuition. In addition, the amount of time devoted to PE at Key Stage 4 is reduced when pupils study for public examinations.

My Department also carried out a survey of PE and sport in English schools in January 1996. It found that primary schools had on average 1.5 to 2 hours per week of National Curriculum PE. The amount of time devoted to PE in secondary schools varied between 1.5 and just over 2 hours per week according to year group. No information is held prior to that time or divided by the location of schools.

Unemployment

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to develop the Employment Service's job search provision for unemployed people following the evaluation report on programme centres published last month. [64905]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I am pleased with the progress in developing programme centres so far. To provide further support for job search, where this is delivered through Jobclubs, I have asked the Employment Service to encourage providers to operate a more flexible model of delivery to enable jobseekers to receive help tailored to their individual needs.

In addition I have asked the Employment Service to introduce changes to Jobclub eligibility conditions. This means that, in line with programme centres, job search support will be available for people experiencing difficulty in returning to work after 13 weeks of unemployment. This will be at the discretion of Employment Service advisers who will identify those clients who most need this kind of help.

The changes will take effect from April 1999.

Post-16 Provision

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will publish a report on the comparative public funding costs of post-16 provision. [64904]

Mr. Mudie: The Report on the Public Funding costs for Education and Training for 16–19 year olds in England 1996–97 will be published today. I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library.

International Labour Conference

Mrs. McKenna: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has for publishing the White Paper on the instruments adopted at the 85 session of the International Labour Conference. [64969]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I have today published a White Paper entitled "International Labour Conference", copies of which have been placed in the Library.

New Deal

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have entered the New Deal gateway in the (a) Fareham, (b) Gosport and (c) Test Valley Borough Council areas since its inception; and how many took up each New Deal option. [64221]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The information on New Deal is only held by Unit of Delivery and is not broken down below this level. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 7 December 1998, Official Report, column 82.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the energy efficiency schemes being delivered under the New Deal for Young People. [64226]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Details of energy efficiency schemes are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the (a) average, (b) longest and (c) shortest time taken by each LEA in England and Wales to produce statements of special educational need in 1997–98. [64246]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not collected centrally.

New Deal (Public Sector)

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of New Deal jobs have been provided to date by the public sector. [61483]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Between 5 and 6 per cent. of young people who have started New Deal jobs are employed in the public administration and education sector as defined in the Standard Industrial Classifications. In addition, there are an increasing number of New Deal job starts in Health and other community, social and personal services, which will include public sector job starts.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what forecast he has made of the amounts to be raised from the introduction of tuition fees over the planning period; and how much of that amount will be used for university funding. [64431]

Mr. Mudie: The higher education funding plans assume that institutions in England will receive private income from home and EU students starting full-time undergraduate courses from 1998–99 as follows: £130 million in 1998–99; an extra £105 million in 1999–2000; and compared with 1998–99 an extra £203 million in 2000–01. Over this period the higher education sector will retain all the income from student contributions to fees and receive extra public funding on top. Figures for 2001–02 will be announced later.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

School Sport

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received concerning the teaching of sport in schools. [63441]

Mr. Banks: Since 1 May 1997, I have received about 80 letters about sport in schools and the physical education National Curriculum. These have come from professional organisations such as the CCPR and BAALPE, University lecturers, head teachers and members of the public. Almost all of these have been about the importance of the teaching of physical education and sport in schools and support my view that physical education and sport is an essential part of youth development. While fully supporting the current emphasis on numeracy and literacy, I know how important sport and PE are; not only as subjects in their own right, but as having a positive impact on cognitive development and on classroom and academic performance. That is why I am delighted that sport and PE still have to be taught in primary schools, while allowing flexibility by relaxing the detailed programmes of study. We are working closely with the Department for Education and Employment to ensure that PE and sport remain an important part of the curriculum.

There are of course a number of initiatives underway to promote sport in schools, many of which are co-ordinated by the English Sports Council (ESC) under its National Junior Sports Programme (NJSP). This is a major programme which provides a framework within which schools, local authorities, governing bodies of sport, sports clubs and youth organisations can work together to provide quality sporting opportunities for 4 to 18-year-olds in a planned and co-ordinated way. It is intended to reinforce and build on good practice, to support teachers and to provide an important profile for the work they are doing. ESC initiatives include the Sportsmark award scheme, the Sporting Ambassadors scheme, the development of an Activity award for primary schools and proposals for Community Sports Co-ordinators.

Publications

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how he plans to take forward policy on the legal deposit of publications following the report of the working group chaired by Sir Anthony Kenny. [64743]

Mr. Chris Smith: I am arranging for the working group's report to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament and published on both my Department's web site and that of the British Library.

The report recommends that there should be a single national published archive of non-print material. It proposes that a code of practice for voluntary deposit of electronic publications should be drawn up, but suggests that, in the longer term, only statutory deposit can secure a comprehensive national published archive.

The report proposes that the following should be deposited with the national published archive:

CD-roms to be deposited in a single copy only after 12 UK sales. The group has put forward alternative options for access:

accessibility on a stand alone basis at a single site (the preference of the publishers); or dissemination among the legal deposit libraries using a secure ring fenced network (the preference of the libraries).

Microforms to be deposited in a single copy only after six UK sales.

For British films, a mint print to be deposited, plus a negative or equivalent after three years; for other films released in the UK, a best copy; for British videos, a mint condition duplicate; for other videos, a new condition reference copy.

For sound recordings, two copies to be deposited.

It concludes that it would not be feasible to include on-line publications and databases, although it suggests that provision be made to bring them into a statutory system in the future, subject to full consideration and consultation in each case.

For print publications, the report recommends that while the six existing legal deposit libraries be retained, in the light of the increasing move towards devolution and regional Government, more work should be done to reduce the number of copies claimed by the libraries, especially in the area of local magazines and periodicals. I regard this as important.

On the issue of improved access to deposited material in Northern Ireland, the report suggests that if an acceptable way can be found to allow secure networking of deposited electronic material, an access point in Northern Ireland could be included in a secure network.

Because the Government believe it is important to plug the growing gap in the national published archive, I have asked Sir Anthony Kenny to draw up, through a group of technical experts from the legal deposit libraries and publishers, detailed guidelines for a voluntary code of practice. I have asked Sir Anthony to examine the scope for this to include a basis for the secure ring-fenced networking of CD-roms between the deposit libraries in a way that will satisfy the publishers that there would be no undue risk for licence holders.

However, I agree with the report's conclusion that a voluntary code will not be viable in the longer term and I believe the report makes a convincing case for moving towards legislation for the legal deposit of non-print publications on the basis of minimum burden on publishers and minimum loss of sales. It will be necessary to do further work on definitions and the impact on business and I have asked Sir Anthony Kenny to take this forward through the medium of the technical group of library and publishing experts. Once that is done, we shall move towards legislation.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many official visits (a) he and (b) the Ministers in his Department, have made to Buckinghamshire since 2 May 1997; and if he will list them. [64130]

Mr. Chris Smith: I have made no official visits to Buckinghamshire within that period. My hon. Friend the Minister for Sport visited Milton Keynes on 29 May 1998.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people in his Department are currently on secondment from private companies; and if he will list them, their companies and their current responsibilities within Government. [62820]

Mr. Chris Smith: There are currently no staff on secondment from private companies within my Department. However, Bob Cotton will join DCMS on secondment from Gardner Merchant in January as my adviser on the Tourism industry.

English Sports Council

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he expects to announce the appointment of the English Sports Council. [63265]

Mr. Banks: We advertised the posts of Chair and new Members of the English Sports Council in the summer. We received a large number of applications and we will anncunce the names of those who are to be appointed as soon as we have finished the selection process.

St. Kilda

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on what date he intends to reply to the letters sent to him by Greenpeace on 15 July, 1 September and 30 October asking him to take action to protect St. Kilda World Heritage Site from the threat of offshore oil development. [64290]

Mr. Battle: I have been asked to reply.

I have replied to the Greenpeace letters.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Groups

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) the (i) task forces, (ii) review panels and (iii) advisory groups his Department has, (b) the remit of each and (c) the members of each together with their principal employment and their level of remuneration. [62808]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 14 December 1998]: A list of task forces, review panels and advisory groups follows. My Department does not hold centrally the information requested for these bodies and it could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Rehabilitation Beds (Availability)

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many step-down beds were available in each health board area in Scotland in each year since 1990–91. [63683]

Mr. Galbraith: There is no national classification of a step-down bed. Information on numbers of rehabilitation medicine beds in the seven years to 31 March 1997 is shown in Table 1. A more detailed bed classification system was introduced in 1997–98, and information on numbers of rehabilitation, convalescent and geriatric orthopaedic rehabilitation beds for the year ending 31 March 1998 is shown in Table 2.

Local Government Finance

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to make an announcement about the Local government Finance Settlement for Scotland for 1999–2000. [64781]

Mr. Dewar: I expect to make my announcement shortly. Following the usual consultation with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities over the proposals for the distribution of Aggregate External Finance (AEF), I intend to lay the necessary Local Government Finance (Scotland) Order in early February 1999 for approval by this House. I will ensure that the details of my proposals, which will be issued as a Circular to all Scottish local authorities, will be made available in the House Library at the same time as my announcement.

Tay River Protection Order

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what conclusions he has reached on the Tay River Protection Order; and if he will make a statement. [64791]

Mr. Macdonald: On 5 June the Government announced in the Edinburgh Gazette its intention to revoke the Tay Protection Order made under the Freshwater and Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act 1976 and invited comments. This followed concerns that access for public angling had been withdrawn in a number of areas.

Seven hundred and seventy-four responses were received. 766 supported retention of the Order. Eight advocated revocation. A full report on the operation of the Order has since been submitted on behalf of the new Protection Order Liaison Committee. A copy of that report, which has been endorsed by 18 groups associated with angling and riparian ownership in the area, will be placed in the Library.

My noble Friend Lord Sewel, the Minister with responsibility for Fisheries in Scotland, has considered the comments received and the contents of the report very carefully. He has noted with satisfaction that as a result of the efforts of the Committee the access lost has been reinstated and furthermore that 86 per cent. of the river and loch are now open to public access compared with the 81 per cent. promised at the time the Order was originally approved. My noble Friend also welcomes the steps announced to ensure the effectiveness of the future operation and monitoring of the Order.

In the light of the remedial action taken to improve and guarantee public access to angling and the generally enhanced arrangements for its operation, my noble Friend has decided that the Order should be retained. However, close monitoring will continue.

BBC News

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the BBC's Six o'clock News in Scotland; what response he has made; and if he will make a statement. [64455]

Mr. Galbraith: To date my right hon. Friend has received two letters about the BBC's decision on the Six O'Clock News. The replies will make clear that the decision taken about the news programmes was one for the Governors of the BBC to make. They will also say that we welcome the promise of additional financial resources and new jobs in Scotland, which will lead to an increase in programmes produced in Scotland.

Heroin

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he plans to take to limit increases in the abuse of heroin. [64315]

Mr. Galbraith: The Government have already taken a number of measures to enhance our response to drug misuse, including heroin.

In October my hon. Friend the Minister for Home Affairs and Devolution and I announced an additional £5 million package of measures between now and March 2000. This included £2 million backing for new initiatives to cut drug crime, such as drug treatment and testing orders and more intensive probation; a £2 million boost to NHS drug treatment funding; a multi-agency blitz to reclaim communities in the grip of drug dealers; and the establishment of a new national drug prevention team to work with Drug Action Teams. Specifically on heroin, we have made £300,000 available to the Health Education Board for Scotland for new work to combat the threat to young people from cheap heroin.

In addition, we expect to issue an enhanced drug strategy framework for Scotland in the first part of 1999 and this will take account of the current concerns about increased heroin misuse.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide additional resources to fund a public awareness campaign on the dangers of heroin abuse. [64316]

Mr. Galbraith: Additional resources of £300,000 have already been made available to the Health Education Board for Scotland for new work to combat the threat to young people from heroin. That work is now at an advanced stage and a decision will be taken shortly on how and when it can be taken forward.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to reduce the incidence of heroin abuse in the Lothian and Borders Police Board Area. [64312]

Mr. McLeish: The Government's strategy for tackling drug misuse in Scotland focuses on the key areas of education, treatment and enforcement. Police operations like Operation Foil carried out recently by Lothian and Borders Police against heroin use are a vital contribution to the Government's overall drugs strategy.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the level of resources available to the police in the Lothian and Borders Police Board area to combat heroin abuse. [64317]

Mr. McLeish: The level of resources deployed by the Lothian and Borders Police on drugs issues is an operational matter for the Chief Constable within the funding level set by the Police Board. During the period 1996–97 to 1998–99 Lothian and Borders Police GAE funding has increased by 9.2 per cent. This has enabled the Force to sustain high profile operations such as the recent highly successful Operation Foil directed against heroin use.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance has been made available to the courts on a consistent sentencing strategy for heroin users and dealers. [64313]

Mr. McLeish: It is not a function of my right hon. Friend to give guidance to the courts on sentencing. The Appeal Court gives guidance to other courts through its appeal decisions, and in disposing of appeals it has the power under Section 118 of the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act 1995 to pronounce an opinion on the sentence which is appropriate in any similar case. The courts can and do make use of a wide range of penalties provided for drugs offenders, depending on the varying circumstances of each case. Heroin is a Class A drug in terms of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 and as such its possession and supply are subject to tough maximum penalties, including life imprisonment in the case of supply. In the case of drug traffickers there is a mandatory minimum sentence of seven years on conviction of a third offence.

Homeless People (Emergency Shelters)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many places have been made available by his Department as emergency shelters for the homeless over the Christmas period in each of the last five years for which figures are available, showing the locations of those places; [64306]

(2) how many places have been planned by his Department as emergency shelters for the homeless over the forthcoming Christmas period and in what locations; [64307]

(3) what was the total expenditure for the provision of emergency Christmas shelters for the homeless over the past five years in Scotland; and what estimate he has made of the resources to be made available for the purpose during Christmas. [64308]

Mr. Macdonald: The statutory responsibility for dealing with homelessness in any area and for deciding whether any emergency shelters are required over the Christmas period or at other times of year rests with the relevant local authorities. The Scottish Office provides them with financial support that can be used for such purposes.

The Rough Sleepers Initiative was established by The Scottish Office to provide financial assistance to local authorities to help them develop accommodation and services for rough sleepers. This can include assistance, where appropriate, for emergency shelters and other direct access accommodation. £16m was allocated for this Initiative over the 3 years from 1997–98 to 1999–2000 and I recently announced additional funding of £14m to allow the Initiative to be extended to 2002. Heriot Watt and Stirling universities have been commissioned by the Department to undertake a preliminary evaluation of the Rough Sleepers Initiative and are due to report by September 1999.

Information on the number of places made available in emergency shelters over the forthcoming Christmas period and anticipated and past expenditure on emergency shelters is not held centrally.

A83

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to compensate owners of vehicles which are forced to use the Tarbert-Portavadie ferry service when the A83 is closed for repair during weekends in February and March 1999. [64263]

Mr. Macdonald: The legal position that compensation is not payable in such cases is well established but, in view of the difficulties that the closures will cause in this particular instance, the option of providing a temporarily enhanced ferry service is being considered.

Domestic Abuse Advertising Campaign

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much the advertisement, which was produced by the Women's Unit and aimed at preventing women within a family from being assaulted by a male member of that family, cost to produce; and under which departmental budget head the cost will fall. [64302]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scottish Domestic Abuse Advertising Campaign, to which I think the hon. Gentleman refers, has been both initiated and funded by The Scottish Office. It is aimed at increasing public awareness of the problem of violence against women which occurs across all ages and social groups. The cost of producing the advertisement was £105,000.

WALES

S4C Board

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the role of the Welsh Office in respect of the appointment of members of the Board of S4C—Sianel Pedwar Cymru; and what is his policy in respect of such appointments. [63158]

Mr. Michael: Appointments to the Board of S4C are made by the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport. I am consulted on these appointments at the short-listing stage and before appointments are finally made.

My Department supports the Department for Culture, Media and Sport in the administrative work involved in making these appointments. Two vacancies for members of S4C were advertised in July, and my Department has handled inquiries and the receipt of applications. One of my officials will chair the interview panel, which will also include the Chair of S4C and an independent member.

My policy is to offer my right hon. Friend every assistance in selecting for these appointments the persons best qualified and suited to hold them, bearing in mind the range of skills and knowledge required for the Board.

National Assembly

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much the Government plans to spend on public information about the National Assembly. [63405]

Mr. Michael: Information will be made available to the public in a number of different ways—through publication of leaflets and documents; via information on the Assembly's web site on the internet; and through the arrangements we are putting in place for broadcasting the Assembly's plenary and committee sessions.

Provision for the first year of the Assembly has not yet been finalised. The £580,000 annual cost of the broadcasting contract, which I announced recently, will be shared between the Assembly and the resident broadcasters—BBC Wales Cymru; HTV Wales Cymru and S4C.

Additionally, my department is running an information campaign prior to the first elections for the Assembly. Some £550,000 will be spent on the first phase of this activity.

Ministerial School Visits (Monmouth)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many ministerial visits to schools in the Monmouth constituency have taken place since 3 September 1998. [63406]

Mr. Michael: One. I visited Croesyceiliog Comprehensive School on 11 December.

Barnett Formula

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultation he has initiated relating to future funding of United Kingdom programmes located in Wales which are currently outside the provisions of the Barnett formula; and if he will make a statement. [63477]

Mr. Michael: The Government of Wales Act 1998 provided for the Transfer of Functions Order to be made to transfer Ministerial functions to the National Assembly for Wales. This Order was published in draft for public consultation on 12 November. Until the content of the Order has been finalised it is not possible to state with certainty what functions will transfer. Work is continuing within Government to finalise the text of the Order and to establish whether any programme's expenditure relates to those functions which will transfer. Funds will be transferred as necessary on this basis.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the total expenditure and the breakdown of expenditure in his Department since May 1997 on (a) public opinion research, (b) television, radio and newspaper advertising and (c) direct mail. [63913]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is as follows:

(a) £98,228

(b) £1,640,021

(c) £55,128

Total expenditure £1,793,377.

All expenditure figures are to end of November 1998.

Education Expenditure (Flintshire)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the standard spending assessment for education is per pupil in Flintshire local education authority; and if he will make a statement. [63939]

Mr. Hain: Standard spending assessments in Wales are not earmarked for any particular service, with the exception of the police. My right hon. Friend announced on 9 December 1998, Official Report, column 229, that he proposes to provide an additional £70 million for education in the local government revenue settlement for 1999–2000 and the allocation for Flintshire will be announced next year.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he is taking to reduce delays in the statementing of children; and if he will make a statement. [63940]

Mr. Hain: The Education (Special Educational Needs) Regulations 1994 set time limits for making assessments and statements of SEN. Latest Audit Commission figures, for 1996–97, show that less than half of the draft statements were prepared within the deadline. The Government are committed to improving performance on statementing. The approaches we intend to adopt will be set out in the Welsh Office Action Programme on SEN which is being prepared in the light of the consultation on "The BEST for Special Education" green paper. We will publish the programme early in the New Year.

State Aid

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much state and agency aid, including Regional Selective Assistance has been given to projects in the counties of (a) Clwyd and (b) Flintshire since 1990; and if he will make a statement. [63936]

Mr. Hain: A range of assistance, including grant aid, has been provided by the Welsh Office, the Department of Trade and Industry, the Welsh Development Agency, the Development Board for Rural Wales, the Wales Tourist Board, the Training and Enterprise Councils, local authorities and other business development organisations. Information on all of these is not held centrally.

Grants offered since 1990 under Regional Selective Assistance (the main form of regional aid in Wales), Regional Investment Grant, and Regional Innovation Grant were as follows:

£ million

	Clwyd	Flintshire
Regional Selective Assistance	118.0	61.2
Regional Investment Grant	1.9	0.9
Regional Innovation Grant	3.5	1.5

In total, these grants supported some 636 different projects with a projected total investment value of around £1 billion, and which should create or safeguard over 18,000 jobs.

Assisted Areas

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of Wales currently has assisted area status; and if he will make a statement. [63935]

Mr. Hain: The map of the Assisted Areas established in 1993 covers approximately 74 per cent. of Wales's population.

Busway (Shotton Steelworks to Chester)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he estimates that the former railway from Shotton Steelworks to Chester will be converted into a dedicated bus route; at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [63941]

Mr. Hain: I understand that Flintshire County Council are developing proposals to convert into a guided busway the disused railway line which runs from Chester into the Deeside Development Zone. The authority has bid for Transport Grant support for preliminary design work on the project, which has an estimated total cost of £7.5 million. I will shortly be announcing my decisions on Transport Grant support for 1999–2000, and I will be writing to my hon. Friend at that time.

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to include Irish as a category in his Department's ethnic monitoring of staff recruitment. [63877]

Mr. Michael: The overriding principle of Civil Service recruitments is that they should be fair, and selection should be on merit at each stage.

Monitoring in this area is based on ethnic origin, and not nationality. The nine ethnic minority origin categories monitored by my Department are based on those used in the 1991 census which did not include an Irish category. They will be reviewed in the light of any suggested changes for the 2001 Population Census.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what provision was made in the Local government settlement for Wales to enable local authorities to meet their obligations in terms of the implementation of the single status agreement for their employees. [64390]

Mr. Michael: The local government settlement for Wales is generous and allows local authorities a degree of flexibility to deal with issues that affect them. The single status deal was agreed directly between the unions and local authorities. The Government did not require it and I am therefore not providing specific funding for it through the local government revenue settlement.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Fairness at Work

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress he is making on the consultation on the Fairness at Work White Paper. [64242]

Mr. Mandelson: The White Paper on Fairness at Work was published in May and the consultation period ended in July. Since then, the Government have been developing the policies in the White Paper to form legislative proposals.

We remain fully committed to the principles in the White Paper, but have also listened closely to the concerns expressed in the consultation to develop sensible, balanced legislation that will represent a settlement for the whole Parliament and endure beyond.

As the Competitiveness White Paper highlighted, a key feature of our top performing companies is a culture which promotes fairness and trust and creates the right conditions for business success. This Bill will promote in all UK companies the standards of the best modern employment relationships.

I intend to bring forward a Bill in the New Year. The Government are committed to action or have taken action on all 29 of the proposals in the White Paper.

I am depositing in the Library of the House copies of letters which I have written to the TUC and CBI which contain a detailed summary of our intentions for the Bill.

The following are the key points:

Trade union recognition will essentially follow the procedure within the White Paper. However, we intend to build in measures to ensure that the recognition procedure functions effectively and credibly. A revitalised Central Arbitration Committee (CAC) will have discretion in cases involving automatic recognition and the Secretary of State will also be able to issue guidance to the CAC. We also intend that employees campaigning for recognition should have protection from dismissal or action short of dismissal.

We intend to offer a real incentive to employers to put in place proper voluntary systems to avoid unfair dismissals. We will therefore be raising the limit for compensation for unfair dismissal from £12,000 to £50,000 and index linking that sum in the future.

The Bill will safeguard the fundamental right of employers and employees to reach individual contracts which differ from the terms of any collective agreement. However, we will protect employees from being forced into signing individual contracts where a collective agreement exists.

We will also provide protection for those engaged in lawfully organised official industrial action. It will be automatically unfair to dismiss employees for the first eight weeks of the action. Thereafter dismissal will be fair provided that the employer has taken all reasonable procedural steps to resolve the dispute.

As outlined in the White Paper we will be bringing forward a package of Family Friendly measures to ensure that as many people who want to work should have the chance to do so.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many written parliamentary questions on the Millennium Experience he has responded to since assuming responsibility for the New Millennium Experience Company; and in how many cases he has issued holding replies. [63321]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 10 December 1998]: From the records kept by my officials the best estimate is that I have answered 382 written parliamentary questions since assuming responsibility for the New Millennium Experience Company in July 1997. 68 of those answers received holding replies.

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what agreements exist between the New Millennium Experience Company and IMG in relation to IMG's work on attracting sponsors for the Millennium Exhibition. [62777]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 7 December 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Chope) on 14 December 1998, Official Report, column 363.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library a copy of the standard terms and conditions of sponsorship in respect of the New Millennium Experience Company. [62002]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 1 December 1998]: I have today placed copies of the New Millennium Experience Company's (NMEC) outline approach to official sponsors in the Library of the House. This paper sets out the NMEC's approach to the rights and benefits applicable to Official Sponsors of the Millennium Experience and provides the basis on which sponsorship discussions, leading to contractual arrangements are taken forward. Contractual documents between the NMEC and sponsors are commercially confidential.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the building materials used at the Millennium Site for National Celebration has been transported to the site by river. [62039]

Mr. Mandelson: In the initial stages of the Dome's construction and site preparation, aggregates were delivered to the site by river. The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) considers the use of the river for transportation of building materials at every opportunity, taking account of cost.

Parts of the new piers at the site are being manufactured in the Medway and will be brought up the Thames to be put in place.

Research Awards

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list for each of the last five years the percentage of (a) money awarded as research grants and (b) actual grants to former polytechnics and colleges of higher education by each of the national research councils in relation to the total moneys allocated as research awards to higher education institutions. [63174]

Mr. Battle: The available data are shown in the following table:

	Expenditure on research grants to former polytechnics/colleges of higher education as % of total expenditure at higher education institutions	Number of research grants to former polytechnics/colleges of higher education as % of total grants awarded to higher education institutions

Redundancy Claims

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures he is taking to improve the efficiency of the Redundancy Pay Services Department offices in processing redundancy claims. [64519]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Redundancy Payments Service has considerably simplified the process of handling claims with a new computer system. This has enabled claims to be sent direct to the Service rather than through insolvency practitioners, cutting out delays and also saving about £1 million a year in administrative expenditure, while allowing for a small increase in the number of staff handling claims. It has also enabled claims for different types of payment to be combined, which were previously made separately. Improvements to the new system are still being made in the light of subsequent operational experience. An officer has also been nominated in each office to ensure that complaints from customers are addressed quickly and any necessary lessons learned. Their direct telephone numbers will be published in the Service's Charter leaflet in the New Year and issued with every redundancy claim form.

Heat and Power Plants

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his policy on the sanctioning of combined heat and power plants, with particular reference to distributed heating schemes. [64108]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 15 December 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to paragraphs 10.42 to 10.51 of the Energy White Paper, "Conclusions of the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation and Government response to fourth and fifth Reports of the Trade and Industry Committee". Decisions since the White Paper have demonstrated our positive commitment to combined heat and power:

Grangemouth CHP announced 30 October.

Shotton and Castleford CHPs announced 3 December.

Export Missions

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria he adopts in (a) selecting and (b) carrying out or aborting export missions. [62401]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 7 December 1998]: Export missions are selected on the basis of furthering my Department's objectives.

They are aborted only as a result of unforeseen circumstances such as unexpected Parliamentary business.

Science Spending

Mrs. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the relationship between science spending and industrial productivity. [60971]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 3 December 1998]: Investment in scientific research is essential to increasing industrial productivity: that is why we have secured an extra £1.4 billion for the Science Base. We must also harness better the assets of our excellent knowledge base and secure them for competitive advantage. The Competitiveness White Paper highlights this need to enhance exploitation of technology and knowledge as a key feature of a modern industrial policy.

Initiatives taken this year to enhance the exploitation of science and technology and so to encourage industrial productivity include:

a doubling of funding for the Teaching Company Scheme to promote the movement of people and knowledge between industry and the science base an extension of the SMART scheme to stimulate business R&D in new products and processes three new LINK programme this year, in response to priorities identified by Foresight and representing Government funding of up to £15 million.

the University Challenge Fund scheme, a competition set up by Government, the Wellcome Trust and the Gatsby Charitable Foundation offering £40 million to help universities set up seed funds to turn good research into good business.

Science Enterprise Challenge, a £25 million scheme to support up to 8 Institutes for Enterprise in universities and to introduce courses in enterprise in science and engineering curricula.

the new Higher Education Reach Out fund (HERO) providing £50 million over 3 years to ensure students acquire the skills that business needs, and to improve business access to universities' resources and services.

Utilities (Competition)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the United Kingdom Government regard competition in United Kingdom utilities as fair when it involves competition between a British plc responsible to its shareholders and an overseas state owned company. [62193]

Dr. Howells: The European Commission has exclusive competence as regards illegal state aids, including financial advantages which might be thought to arise from state-ownership. If the British Government had concerns in a particular case, they would make them known to the European Commission.

Any merger involving a state owned enterprise would be considered impartially on its merits by the relevant competition authorities.

Airlines

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many responses were received by the deadline of 4 September to his invitation for comments on the Director General of Fair Trading's advice on the proposed alliance between British Airways and American Airlines. [64713]

Mr. Mandelson: The Office of Fair Trading received forty one written representations following my invitation on 6 August for comments to be sent to them on the Director-General of Fair Trading's advice.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reason he has delayed announcing a final decision on approval of the alliance between British Airways and American Airlines beyond the Autumn as announced in a Departmental press release of 8 July. [64714]

Mr. Mandelson: No announcement has been delayed. I have not yet reached a final decision.

The press notice of 8 July made clear that the next steps in the process were public consultation on both the Commission's proposals and the remedies proposed by my predecessor. It also made clear that the alliance would need approval from the US competition authorities, and that there would need to be a new UK/US bilateral air services agreement before the alliance could come into effect.

I sought comments on the DGFT's interim advice to me, which was published on 6 August. The DGFT's advice stated that the Commission had not reached a firm view on the appropriate remedy in some areas, and that a number of important matters remained uncertain.

Meanwhile, progress has been slower than expected in the negotiations with the US towards a new air services agreement.

I have told BA, in reply to a letter dated 2 December which said that a final decision on the alliance should be deferred (at least until the position on open skies was clearer), that there were a number of issues on which more progress had to be made before I could reach a final decision.

Arms Exports (South Africa)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the export to South Africa of British Aerospace Gripen fighters and Hawk aircraft and GKN Westland Maritime helicopters will be supported by export credit guarantees. [64498]

Mr. Mandelson: ECGD has been approached with a view to providing finance support in respect of these prospective transactions and if ECGD were to provide any such support it would be subject to ECGD's procedures and continuing cover availability.

Export Finance Scheme

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the Government proposes to replace the Fixed Rate Export Finance Scheme on its expiry on 31 December. [64786]

Mr. Mandelson: Following a conference chaired by Lord Clinton-Davis on 24 June, ECGD, along with banks, exporters, and their representative associations have been working to identify possible ways to enhance the competitiveness of UK exporters and to improve the cost-effectiveness of ECGD interest rate support. In order to allow the outcome of these discussions to be taken into account in negotiating a successor scheme, and to ensure continuity of service to exporters and banks in the meantime, the Government have decided to extend the validity of the current Scheme for a further three months until 31 March 1999.

Millennium Compliance

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps are being taken to ensure that all nuclear installations worldwide are fully millennium-compliant; and what contingency plans are in place in the event of multiple nuclear emergencies overseas. [64453]

Mr. Battle: Responsibility for ensuring safety at nuclear installations, and for dealing with any emergencies which might arise at those installations, rests with the state in which the installation is situated. At the international level, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) in Vienna and the Nuclear Energy Agency in Paris are acting as co-ordinators of millennium information for the nuclear sector worldwide, and have already held sessions on millennium preparedness, with further major workshops planned. Other nuclear organisations are contributing as appropriate.

In multilateral and bilateral contacts with overseas nuclear safety regulatory authorities, the United Kingdom's Health and Safety Executive—which for some years has been overseeing the preparations of the UK's nuclear installations for the millennium—has been encouraging other states to take appropriate action to address this issue. Mr. Laurence Williams, the UK's Chief Inspector of Nuclear Installations, presented a well received paper on millennium preparedness to the IAEA Senior Regulator's meeting in Vienna in September 1998. A copy of that paper will be placed in the Library of the House shortly.

Both the IAEA and European Union have established and tested international systems for the early notification of any overseas nuclear accident. The UK also has bilateral arrangements for the early notification of such accidents with a number of overseas governments. The Government's National Response Plan, co-ordinated by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, makes arrangements for the UK's response in dealing with any consequences of an overseas nuclear accident. The Plan draws on the RIMNET national radiation monitoring and nuclear emergency response system, which also provides the UK with a second independent line of defence, should for any reason the early notification systems fail. RIMNET also links into the Meteorological Office's predictions of the areas of the UK likely to be affected by any overseas accident.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to ensure that all UK nuclear installations are fully millennium-compliant; and what contingency plans are in place in the event of a millennium-related nuclear emergency. [64452]

Mr. Battle: All UK nuclear operators have initiated major programmes of work to identify and address potential problems associated with the century date change issue. Those aspects of these programmes that address potential safety concerns are being monitored closely by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE). The HSE is satisfied with the actions being taken. If the HSE were not satisfied it would take robust enforcement action if it were appropriate, but if the licencees continue to make good progress in tackling the issue, the HSE anticipate this will not be necessary.

Operators anticipate that all essential work will be completed by mid-1999. This includes a re-testing of systems to provide confirmation that remedial action taken to rectify any safety problems that are identified has been effective. Contingency plans and business continuity plans will also be in place for the critical dates as a precaution against unforeseen threats to safety. Contingency plans against the possibility of a nuclear emergency are maintained and available for activation at any time.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library a copy of those provisions in agreements with corporate sponsors of zones in the millennium dome concerning (a) the content of the zone being sponsored and (b) the management of the zone being sponsored. [64422]

Mr. Mandelson: The contractual agreements between the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) and individual sponsors are commercially confidential. However, in terms of content and management they provide for the NMEC to retain the right of control over design, content, access to and operation of the exhibit zones. This ensures that the integrity of the Millennium Experience as the focus for the nation's millennium celebrations can not be compromised.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will list the zones in the millennium dome for which armaments manufacturers would not be considered to be appropriate sponsors; [64395]

(2) if he will make provision for critics of corporate sponsors of zones in the millennium dome to have an opportunity to reply to claims made by the sponsors in cases where the sponsors are engaged in (a) the food industry, (b) the motor industry and (c) armaments manufacturing; [64396]

(3) what discussions he has had with representatives of the Church of England concerning the inclusion of armaments manufacturers amongst the corporate sponsors of the millennium dome; and what was the outcome of those discussions. [64397]

Mr. Mandelson: The Millennium Experience at Greenwich and its associated national programme of events and activities is the responsibility of the New Millennium Experience Company. This includes the development of the exhibit zones within the Dome and the procurement of sponsorship. I have had no discussions with the Church of England about sponsorship of the exhibit zones within the Dome. Anyone who wishes to criticise, or indeed support, sponsors' involvement in the Millennium Experience is free to do so through a range of channels, including by asking Parliamentary Questions.

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many visitors to the Dome are expected to come from each region of the United Kingdom and each European Union country in each week in 2000; [60882]

(2) how many visitors to the Dome are expected to come from each London borough in each month in 2000. [60883]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 27 November 1998]: This information is not available in the categories or format requested and it would not be practicable for the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) to make visitor estimates in this manner. For example, visitors from each of the London boroughs will not necessarily be residents of those boroughs. They could include school parties or friends and relations staying with residents, or indeed, tourists staying in the different boroughs.

Nuclear Physics (Postgraduate Courses)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what estimate he has made of the number and percentage of students who have gained postgraduate qualifications in nuclear physics who then took up employment abroad; and if he will make a statement; [63386]

(2) what steps he has taken to encourage students to take up postgraduate courses in nuclear physics. [63387]

Mr. Battle: I understand that data are not available at a sufficient level of subject detail to provide an answer for all postgraduates. However, the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council has provided the following information based on an evaluation, last year, of the research students supported by the Council and by the former Science and Engineering Research Council and whose funding expired in the period between October 1991 and 1996. 53 students are known to have obtained PhDs in nuclear physics; of those 9 per cent. took posts overseas in their first jobs. No data are currently available on the number who remain abroad, but a further recent career path study of former Research Council students across a wide range of subject areas found that only 4 per cent. worked overseas in their first job and in their latest job, some ten years on.

The EPSRC allocates studentships to university departments based on the level of EPSRC-funded research activity on a programme by programme basis. There is no specific allocation based on funding of nuclear physics. Heads of Department have discretion to distribute their quota of studentships in an appropriate manner provided the relevant projects fall within the research remit of the EPSRC.

The Physics programme of EPSRC allocated 171 research studentships and collaborative (CASE) awards, and 39 advanced course studentships in 1997. Two of the advanced courses are in the area of nuclear physics, and the programme provides these two courses with 13 studentships. (Data are not readily available on the pass rate and employment destinations of the students on these two courses, but the career path study indicated that 99 per cent. of Research Council advanced course students gained their qualification).

The EPSRC has recently provided funding for a new Integrated Graduate Development Course in nuclear physics at the University of Liverpool, entitled "Radiometrics applied to Decommissioning and Radioactive Waste".

Nuclear Liability and Taxation Agreement

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to promote an expanded bilateral Russian/UK agreement covering nuclear liability and taxation. [63107]

Mr. Battle: DTI officials intend to discuss the possibility with their Russian counterparts early next year. The Department is also considering with other Governments concerned what reasonable legal protection is needed for contractors engaged in clean-up work in Russia. More broadly it remains our objective to encourage Russia to ratify the Vienna Convention on Nuclear Liability.

Arms Exports

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many licences were granted to United Kingdom companies to export small arms between (a) 1 January and 30 June 1997, and (b) 1 July 1997 and 30 September 1998. [63439]

Mrs. Roche: The export of specified small arms is controlled under entries ML1 and PL5018 in the Export of Goods (Control) Order, which also cover specified accessories and specially designed components. The entry in the legislation under which the export of goods is controlled is known as their rating.

The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated and the following results were obtained. Between 1 January 1997 and 30 September 1998, the numbers of Standard Individual Export Licences (SIELs) and Open Individual Export Licences (OIELs) issued during each period and covering the export of goods with the relevant ratings were as follows:

Individual Licences issued between 1 January 1997 and 30 September 1998 covering the export of goods with the rating ML1

Period	Number of SIELs issued covering goods with this rating	Number of OIELs issued covering goods with this rating
1 January 1997–30 June 1997	962	70
1 July 1997–30 September 1998	1,696	60

Individual Licences issued between 1 January 1997 and 30 September 1998 covering the export of goods with the rating PL5018

Period	Number of SIELs issued covering goods with this rating	Number of OIELs issued covering goods with this rating
1 January 1997–30 June 1997	99	69
1 July 1997–30 September 1998	84	43

This information should be considered in light of my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) on 30 October 1997, Official Report, columns 256–58.

There is no internationally-agreed definition of "small arms". It is possible that some weapons controlled under other ratings could be called small arms; for instance, a 12-bore shotgun with a calibre greater than 12.7mm would be controlled under entry ML2.

Certain Open General Export Licences cover the return to specified countries of weapons controlled under entries ML1 and PL5018, subject to the conditions of the licence in each case: the Open General Export Licence (Export After Repair: Military Goods) and the Open General Export Licence (Export After Exhibition: Military Goods). In addition, the Open General Export Licence (Accompanied Personal Effects: Sporting Firearms) permits temporary exports for sporting or recreational purposes to Tanzania and Uganda. Copies of all Open General Export Licences valid at any time during the period are in the Library of the House.

British Nuclear Fuels Ltd

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he received the KPMG report on the future of BNFL; and when he expects to be in a position to make a statement on the report. [64569]

Mr. Battle: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 15 December 1998, Official Report, column 455.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Electronic Book Formats

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to introduce minimum standards for electronic book formats; and what representations he has received regarding the development of the XML and PDF formats. [62963]

Mr. Battle: The Department has no plans to introduce minimum standards for electronic book formats and has received no representations regarding the development of the XML and PDF formats.

Industrial Tribunal Claims

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many industrial tribunal claims initiated in 1994 still await a hearing. [64231]

Mr. Ian McCartney: In 1994–95, Employment Tribunals registered 88,061 applications which included 11,000 cases by people claiming part time worker pension rights. No statistical information is available to say how many cases initiated in 1994 remain in the tribunal system unheard. Currently 89 per cent. of cases receive a first hearing within 26 weeks of receipt. The majority of cases remaining in the system over a period of time are waiting the outcome of proceedings in other courts.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many official visits (a) he and (b) the Ministers in his Department have made to Buckinghamshire since 2 May 1997; and if he will list them. [64135]

Mr. Mandelson: Since 2 May 1997 it has not yet been possible to include an official visit to Buckinghamshire in a DTI ministerial regional programme. However, DTI Ministers have undertaken visits to a number of the surrounding counties.

Internet (Paedophiles)

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to stop the Internet in the United Kingdom being used by paedophiles. [64286]

Mrs. Roche: The law applies on-line as it does off-line with the result that each person is responsible for their own acts and omissions.

The Internet Watch Foundation (IWF) was established following discussions between the DTI, Home Office, the Police and Internet Service Providers (ISPs) to provide a voluntary industrial mechanism to supplement law enforcement. The IWF operates a hotline to which Internet users can report material which they believe may be illegal. This information is then passed on to the police and the ISP who is hosting the site. When the material originates in the UK, the ISP should then remove it from its server. The Police will take action to follow up any criminal offence. If UK service providers fail to act on IWF reports and the material is found to be illegal, they are liable for prosecution as accessories to the crime.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will ask Internet service providers to control kids' chat lines to prevent paedophile messages being placed on them. [64287]

Mrs. Roche: The Department works with Internet Service Providers (ISPs) and law enforcement agencies to combat paedophile action on the internet. One result of this was the Internet Watch Foundation (IWF) which was established following discussions between the DTI, Home Office, the Police and ISPs. One of the aims of the IWF is to hinder the use of the Internet to transmit illegal material, particularly child pornography. As part of their work to combat illegal material appearing on the Internet, they have processed complaints received about Chat lines.

Employee Savings Club

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he can take against company directors who operate a savings club for employees but do not open a separate savings account so that employees' savings are protected if that firm goes into liquidation. [64563]

Dr. Howells: In the event of a company being placed in liquidation, the conduct of its directors would be considered in the light of the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986. Failing to protect employees' contributions to a savings club would be taken into account in deciding whether or not to bring disqualification proceedings.

If the contributions were to a holiday club the Secretary of State might be able to make payments to employees under section 184 of the Employment Rights Act 1996.

Redundancy Payments

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will instruct Redundancy Pay Services Department offices (a) to process claims for employees made redundant by a business or the Official Receiver as soon as the office makes the individual calculation and (b) not to wait for a whole batch of calculations for that business to be completed before making any individual payments; [64566]

(2) if he will take measures to ensure that all Redundancy Pay Services Department offices process immediately the claims of employees made redundant by the Official Receiver when their firm becomes insolvent. [64567]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Redundancy Payments Service processes each claim as soon as possible after sufficient information to determine entitlement is available.

Wind Farms

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the use of wind farms as an alternative to conventional power plants. [64344]

Mr. Battle: The Government are committed to a new and strong drive to develop renewable energy sources, including wind power.

We need to move away from dependence on fossil fuels. But this needs to be managed gradually so as not to damage the economy.

I am currently reviewing new and renewable energy policy, including consideration of what would be necessary and practical to achieve 10 per cent. of the UK's electricity needs from renewables by the year 2010 and how renewable sources can make an effective contribution to meeting requirements for future greenhouse gas reductions.

As a first step towards that new and strong drive, on 24 September 1998 I announced the fifth and largest Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation Order for 1177 Megawatts of renewable energy electricity capacity, including 368 Megawatts from wind energy. As at 30 September 1998, some 1,076 Megawatts of wind energy capacity had been contracted under NFFO, and 57 projects, totalling 137 Megawatts, were operational. Electricity costs from wind power in NFFO have more than halved on average to around the same cost as the average wholesale price for electricity from conventional plants but not yet at prices competitive with new gas-fired generation. NFFO5 contracts for the large wind energy band were at an average of 2.88p/kWh compared with the average Pool Selling Price of 2.67p/kWh in 1997/98.

On 2 September 1998 I launched a consultative document on opening up NFFO in future to offshore wind energy. I am now considering the responses to that exercise.

Minister for Science

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Minister for Science has taken to divest himself of his investments in (a) Diatech Ltd. and (b) Innotech Investments Ltd. [64504]

Mr. Mandelson: As my answer to the right hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Mr. Forth) made clear on 19 October 1998, Official Report, column 1050 all the Minister for Science's shareholdings, including those in Diatech and Innotech, have been placed in a blind trust. The blind trust was created on 31 July, 3 days after his appointment, and the legal formalities for transferring the shares were completed shortly afterwards.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he has taken to ensure that no conflict of interests arises in the consideration of matters relating to biotechnology by the Minister for Science. [64409]

Mr. Mandelson: I refer the right hon. Member to my reply on 19 October 1998, Official Report, column 1050.

Post Office

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what estimate he has made of the impact of the proposed Post Office changes on public spending totals in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02; [64404]

(2) what estimate he has made of the loss to the Treasury from the revised Post Office external finance limit in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02. [64411]

Mr. Mandelson: As a self-financing public corporation the Post Office is outside my Departmental Expenditure Limit. Capital expenditure by the PO contributes to Annually Managed Expenditure. The impact on the Public Sector Net Cash Requirement is broadly equivalent to the Post Office's External Finance Requirement, which will depend on a number of factors including the level of profits in future years and any borrowing. As I announced on 7 December 1998, Official Report, columns 21–39, an External Financing Requirement (EFR) of minus £207 million has been set for 1999–2000 and in following years the EFR will be equivalent to 40 per cent. of post tax profits. As indicated in the reply given by the then Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for the City of York (Mr. Bayley) on 17 July 1998, Official Report, column 356 the EFRs of minus £335 million announced then were an interim measure pending the outcome of the review.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what restrictions will be placed on the Post Office's permitted scope for the acquisition of overseas companies under his proposals for its future. [64403]

Mr. Mandelson: Under the Post Office Act 1969 the Post Office can make acquisitions, including overseas acquisitions, that are "requisite, advantageous or convenient" for the purpose of its business. The increase in retained net profits I announced on 7 December 1998, Official Report, columns 21–24, will enable the Post Office to finance an increased level of investment. However the Government recognise that larger growth, including acquisitions and joint ventures, may require prudent borrowing. The Government will approve normal Post Office requests for borrowing for investment cases that are commercially robust. Separate fast track arrangements will be put in place for considering the largest investments. Further details will be provided in the White Paper to be published in the New Year.

Tanzania (Medical Supplies)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will issue an export licence before Christmas to enable the shipment of a LandRover loaded with medical equipment given by the people of Kingsbridge, South Devon, to Tanzania to be used by the Nzega District Hospital. [64435]

Mrs. Roche: Given the humanitarian nature of the export, I am able to inform the hon. Member that this export licence was issued on Tuesday 15 December.

Scotland Act 1998 (Schedule 5)

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list (a) total expenditure and (b) expenditure by programme over £50,000 by his Department in Scotland on areas covered by each of the exceptions under heads (i) C and (ii) D in Schedule 5 of the Scotland Act 1998. [63796]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 15 December 1998]: This information is not held centrally and accurate figures on the exceptions under heads C and D could only be obtained at disproportionate cost, if at all.

Green Technology

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to promote new green technologies and businesses. [62383]

Mr. Battle: The Government recognise the enormous potential of the UK environmental industry to develop new green technologies which both provide solutions to environmental problems and boost the UK economy. Support in promoting the activities of this sector is provided through a number of activities.

DTI plays an important role in supporting the science and engineering base and business to develop and exploit sustainable technologies and processes. Science and engineering research received a major boost of £1.1 billion as a result of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

The Foresight Steering Group has identified sustainable technologies as a top priority. Specific initiatives under the Foresight programme include the Vehicle Link programme (which has recently received a further £5 million) and sustainable technologies for a cleaner world. Foresight is currently being developed to make it more effective and will be underpinned by the theme of sustainable development. Earlier this month eighteen projects received Foresight LINK Awards, which bring together business and the science base to work in areas identified by the Foresight programme as important to the future prosperity and quality of life of the UK.

The Cleaner Vehicles Task Force was launched last year to provide a partnership between government, manufacturers, users and pressure groups to identify practical measures to reduce the environmental impact of vehicles.

The LINK scheme also plays an important part in developing and transferring knowledge on new sustainable technologies. Research ranges from the development of biotechnologies to remove pollutants from streams and soils, to using earth observation satellites for monitoring the natural environment.

The renewables industry received a boost last September with the announcement of the largest ever obligation on the Public Electricity Suppliers to secure 1177 MW of new electricity generating capacity from renewable sources of energy.

The Environment Technology Best Practice Programme (ETBPP) produces high quality technical advice in relation to specific industrial sectors including examples of businesses which have established good practice procedures and made use of new technologies.

The Joint DTI/DETR Environmental Markets Unit (JEMU) encourages development of British businesses in the environmental sector and promotes the UK as a supplier of environmental solutions. JEMU's Business Plan, which was launched on 18 March by Michael Meacher and myself, details planned activities designed to raise the profile of the industry both at home and overseas.

We are committed to working with business and others to identify and promote ways in which firms can move towards sustainability. The Government's consultation document "Sustainable Business" published in June, set out some ideas on how this can be best achieved. The responses from business—over 500 were received—were generally positive, and will be reflected in our new national Sustainable Development Strategy which is due to be published early in the New Year.

Millennium Dome (Sports)

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has for sporting activities to take place in the Dome. [62199]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 3 December 1998]: Responsibility for the content of the Millennium Dome lies with the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC). The NMEC has no plans for sporting events to take place in the Dome. However, the aims of the Serious Play Zone are to recognise and present traditional sports in an exciting and futuristic manner.

Receiverships

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many directors of quoted companies have asked his Department to investigate the events leading to receivership in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [64633]

Dr. Howells: Information is not maintained in the manner requested by my hon. Friend. Such requests are minimal.

Post-devolution Expenditure

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much expenditure is forecast to be incurred by his Department in Wales in 1998–99 as part of UK-and Britain-wide expenditure programmes; and what provision will be made in relation to this expenditure once the National Assembly for Wales has been established. [63479]

Mr. Mandelson: The Government of Wales Act 1998 provided for a Transfer of Functions Order to be made to transfer Ministerial functions to the National Assembly for Wales. This Order was published in draft for public consultation on 12 November. Work is continuing within Government to finalise the text of the Order and until the content of the Order has been finalised, it is not possible to state with certainty what functions will transfer. It is therefore too early to say to what extent programme expenditure which is currently administered by my Department may relate to functions which will transfer to the National Assembly for Wales. Work is taking place to establish the extent of any such expenditure and to assess the need for any consequential transfer of funds to the Assembly.

My Department does not make forecasts of how much of its expenditure will be incurred in each country of the United Kingdom, although such information is published on a retrospective basis in the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses (PESA).

Freephone

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will investigate plans by Oftel to alter freephone numbers. [63655]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The administration of the National Numbering Scheme is a matter for Oftel. Oftel consulted earlier this year on several options for changing the system of freephone numbers. Oftel is currently examining all the comments it has received before deciding on the way forward. Oftel is due to issue a Statement on the results of the consultation next year and the Department will examine it closely.

Internet

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to prevent companies trading fraudulently on the Internet by using as a domain name the registered name or trademark of another company. [63414]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The Trade Marks Act 1994 contains provisions to protect against the fraudulent use of a registered trade mark. The common law tort of passing-off protects against false representation, where a company attempts to take unfair advantage or their action is detrimental to reputation of another.

These provisions can be applied to fraudulent use of domain names. In a recent case (British Telecommunications Plc et al. v. One in a Million & others), both the High Court and the Court of Appeal said that the registration of trade marks as domain names was unfair and detrimental to the reputation of the trade mark owner and such registrations were also an infringement of the trade mark owner's rights.

Nuclear Fuels

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations were made to the Minister of State during his visit to Dounreay on 18 November; and if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's position regarding the review of the policy of reprocessing spent nuclear fuels. [62669]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 16 December 1998]: During my visit to Dounreay on 18 November, I met members of the UKAEA management, staff and unions. We discussed a number of issues relating to the work of Dounreay, and in particular UKAEA's plans to respond to the HSE/SEPA audit of safety at Dounreay.

The Government's position on reprocessing spent nuclear fuels was placed in the Libraries of the House as indicated in my answer to the House of 30 January 1998, Official Report, column 415.

Defence Exports

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many civil servants are employed in his Department to assist in supporting and promoting defence exports; and at what cost. [64462]

Mr. Battle: None of my officials are employed full-time in defence export promotion. However, a part of the workload of several DTI officials is on such activity, where they work alongside the Defence Exports Services Organisation of the MOD.

Medical and Pharmaceutical Equipment

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many civil servants are employed in his Department to assist in supporting and promoting exports of medical and pharmaceutical equipment; and at what cost. [64463]

Mr. Mandelson: Three civil servants in the Export Promotion Command of my Department work on promoting exports in this sector, in liaison with officials from the Department of Health and an Export Promoter, seconded from industry. The running costs of the civil servants themselves, excluding the programme budget for which they are responsible, is £114,399.

Radioactive Waste, Germany

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 7 December 1998, Official Report, column 69, concerning BNFL's reprocessing contract, if he will place in the Library copies of each of the inter-governmental exchanges of letters on nuclear waste to which the answer refers. [63898]

Mr. Battle: Further to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend of 7 December 1998, Official Report, column 69, I have arranged for copies of the relevant inter-governmental exchanges of letters underpinning BNFL's overseas reprocessing contracts since 1976 to be laid in the Library of the House.

Export Licences

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of the applications for export licences which were outstanding on 24 June (a) have been granted, (b) have been refused and (c) are still outstanding. [61928]

Mrs. Roche: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of that letter in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many export licence applications awaiting decisions between 24 June and 23 November had been waiting for (a) up to 20 days, (b) up to 40 days, (c) up to 60 days and (d) more than 60 days. [61927]

Mrs. Roche: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of that letter in the Library of the House.

Electronic Commerce

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the implications for the competitiveness of electronic commerce in the United Kingdom of the decisions made at the December meeting of the Wassenaar Arrangement. [63525]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The Government are committed to making the UK the best environment in the world for electronic commerce by the end of this Parliament. Our strategy for achieving this will be set out in the forthcoming White Paper on Competitiveness. The recent agreement in the Wassenaar Agreement, which has modernised and relaxed the export controls on encryption technology, will contribute towards this strategy.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Contributions Agency

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if it is the present policy of the Contributions Agency to require its staff to retire at age 60 years; [64415]

(2) if he will state the whole time equivalent employment at each Contributions Agency site in the Tyne and Wear area at (a) 1 April 1996, (b) 1 April 1997 and (c) the most recent available date; and how many employees were over 60 years of age at each date. [64419]

Mr. Timms: This is a matter for George Bertram, the Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from George Bertram to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 17 December 1998:

As Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency (CA) I have responsibility for answering questions about operational matters relating to the Agency. I have been asked to reply to your questions about the Agency's retirement policy and staffing levels in the Tyne and Wear area.

The CA's current retirement policy is based upon corporate Department of Social Security policy and requires all employees to retire at age 60. The policy was implemented on 31 July 1998. The previous policy required employees to retire at age 60 unless they were employed at Executive Officer level or below. For Executive Officers retirement was at age 62 and for employees below this level at age 65. Transitional arrangements enable employees at Executive Officer level or below who were over age 60 on or after 31 July 1998 to be retained until no later than 31 July 1999 in the following circumstances:

Their performance, attendance and conduct fully met the requirements of the job;

Their job is not included in an area of work where there were planned redundancies;

There are no local early retirement schemes planned for employees at the same level;

Their retirement would lead, either directly or indirectly, to the need for external recruitment;

The hardship that would be suffered would override any existing business need.

CA has no plans to extend the transitional arrangements beyond 31 July 1999. From 1 April 1999 CA will become part of Inland Revenue. Their retirement policy requires employees to retire at age 60. CA management is in negotiation with Trade Unions to determine the policy that will apply to CA employees on transfer. The outcome of these negotiations has not yet been concluded.

The number of CA employees employed at each site on the Newcastle estate on 1 April 1996, 1 April 1997 and 1 December 1998 are as follows:

Location	Number of CA staff
1 April 1996
Scottish Life House	94
Lancaster House	97
Hebburn	507
Bellway Stores	17
Alfred Wilson House	476
Kenton Bar	601
Broadway West	52
Longbenton Main Site	4,156
1 April 1997
Scottish Life House	94
Lancaster House	97
Hebburn	507
Bellway Stores	17
Alfred Wilson House	476
Kenton Bar	443
Broadway West	26
Longbenton Main Site	4,040
1 December 1998
Hebburn	507
Bellway Stores	17
Alfred Wilson House	476
Kenton Bar	540
Broadway West	26
Longbenton Main Site	4,134

The number of employee's aged 60 or over on the above dates are as follows:

Date	Number of employees aged 60 or over
1 April 1996	118
1 April 1997	90
1 December 1998	50

This data is the total number of employee's aged 60 or over in all buildings on the Newcastle estate. We do not keep figures for each individual building so I cannot provide you with this data from our records.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many case DLA case files were mislaid or lost prior to their referral to the Independent Tribunal Service in the last 12 months; and how many of these related to claimants who are mentally ill. [64216]

Mr. Timms: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, Peter Mathison. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Ian Stewart, dated 16 December 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many Disability Living Allowance cases were mislaid or lost prior to their referral to the Independent Tribunal Service (ITS) in the last 12 months; and how many of these related to claimants who are mentally ill.

The information you have requested is not routinely kept and would only be available at disproportionate cost.

I am aware of only one case in the last 12 months where the papers were mislaid prior to their referral to the ITS where the person concerned was suffering from a mental illness.

I am sorry I cannot be of more help.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals there have been against findings made under the Benefit Integrity Project in the last year for which figures are available. [64691]

Mr. Timms: The administration of the Benefits Integrity Project is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, Peter Mathison. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 16 December 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many appeals there have been against findings made under the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP) in the last year for which figures are available.

As at 31 October 1998 there have been 22,689 reviews and 5,925 appeals received following BIP action.

You may find it helpful to know that statistical information about the BIP, including details of reviews and appeals are published monthly and placed in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many civil servants will be redeployed following the cancellation of the Benefit Integrity Project. [64689]

Mr. Timms: The administration of the Benefit Integrity Project is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, Peter Mathison. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 17 December 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about how many civil servants will be redeployed after the cancellation of the Benefits Integrity Project.

The number of people engaged on the Benefit Integrity Project as at 30 November 1998 was the equivalent of 365.54 full-time staff.

The Benefits Integrity Project will be replaced by a new modern review system to carry out regular checks of existing awards to ensure entitlement remains correct. However there is no estimate of the final numbers of staff that will be required.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Benefit Integrity Project's cancellation will come into effect; and if he will make a statement. [64690]

Mr. Timms: The Benefit Integrity Project will be replaced by a new, even-handed system of review, sensitive to people's circumstances and fair because it will provide for awards to be increased as well as decreased in line with entitlement. We will introduce the new process as soon as possible and aim to have it in place by April 1999 but our primary concern is to get it right rather than to introduce it quickly. We are discussing the way forward with the Disability Benefits Forum.

National Insurance

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much is planned to be spent up to 1 April 1999 on the online national insurance contribution records system; and how much has been planned for the next three year period. [64417]

Mr. Timms: If the supplier were to process anticipated volumes, the NIRS2 budget for the financial year to 1 April 1999 would be £5.301 million. The base annual service charge for NIRS2 over the next three years is budgeted at £6.850 million per annum. This amount is subject to volumes of work processed and also any charges for agreed enhancements to the system.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the implementation milestones with their dates for the online national insurance contribution records system; and to what extent these have been achieved to date. [64420]

Mr. Timms: The original contract allowed for the delivery of the National Insurance Recording System over three releases between February 1997 and April 1999. A subsequent Deed of Amendment was agreed in July 1996, which allowed for a phased delivery of the first release. Although incorporating the original timeframe, the phasing of delivery between those dates was significantly altered.

Release 1a. The contractual delivery date of 10 February 1997 was achieved.

Release 1b. The original contractual date of 27 October 1997 was not achieved. Delivery took place on the 28 January 1998.

Release 1c. The original contractual date of 6 April 1998 was not achieved. Part of the service was delivered on the 13 July 1998, and final acceptance took place on the 28 August 1998.

Release 2/3. Contractual delivery date is the 6 April 1999, and this is currently on target.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of people currently working who have not paid sufficient national insurance contributions to qualify for incapacity benefit. [64222]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the form requested. The latest available information is that the number of people working and paying National Insurance contributions who had not paid sufficient contributions to qualify for Incapacity Benefit in 1997 was about 4.4 million. In addition, the Family Resources Survey estimates that there are about 2 million employees who earn below the lower earnings limit at any one time and therefore would not pay National Insurance contributions.

Notes:

1. Figures come from different data sources and should not be aggregated.

2. To qualify for Incapacity Benefit, a claimant must have paid Class 1 and/or Class 2 National Insurance contributions on earnings equivalent to 25 times the lower earnings limit in any tax year prior to the benefit claim year and have Class 1 and/or Class 2 NICs and/or NI Credits equivalent to 50 times the lower earnings limit (LEL) in each of the two previous tax years prior to the benefit claim year.

3. Latest information relates to the benefit year 1997 for which the latest relevant tax year is 1995/96.

Contributions Agency (Computer)

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what date the Contributions Agency computer system for the self-employed became inoperable. [64447]

Mr. Timms: The Contributions Agency National Insurance Recording System (NIRS2) is designed to hold over 65 million individual contribution records, calculate contributory benefits, provide data to many other Government Agencies. It also pays age-related contribution rebates to Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes in respect of individual scheme members and collects National Insurance Contributions from both the employed and the self-employed. To date, over £300 million has been collected from the self-employed through the monthly direct debit facility and the quarterly collection method.

Since its introduction on the 13 July 1998, the NIRS2 system has never become inoperable. Some facilities within the system have not yet been fully implemented.

Redundancy (Access to Benefits)

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will implement a clawback mechanism so that ex-employees from businesses which have gone into liquidation have access from the date of their redundancy to jobseeker's allowance and other benefits; [64518]

(2) if he will ensure that ex-employees of a firm going into receivership are able to receive jobseeker's allowance and other payments from the date of their redundancy while they await their claim for redundancy payment and compensatory payment in lieu of notice to be processed, with the introduction of a clawback mechanism, if appropriate. [64565]

Angela Eagle: We are aware that, under existing rules, if money is owed from an insolvent employer, full benefit cannot always be paid immediately to ex-employees claiming Jobseeker's Allowance or Income Support, although payments can be made to avoid hardship.

Since this problem came to our attention, we have been working to simplify the complex legislation in this area and we are currently considering proposals for changes to the relevant benefit rules.

Entitlement to the other income-related benefits (Family Credit, Disability Working Allowance, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit) is not affected by unpaid earnings when an employer goes into liquidation.

Contributions Agency (Computer)

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many amendments to the records of the self-employed have not been entered on the computer of the Contributions Agency; and what action is being taken to compensate those whose benefits have not been paid as a result. [64444]

Mr. Timms: There are currently 1,038,729 amendments as at the 6 December requiring input to the Contributions Agency National Insurance Recording System (NIRS2). Although an exact figure is not known, the number of cases affected by the delayed input of these amendments is a very small percentage of the overall total. This is because this figure is made up of varying types of amendments, many of which could never affect a claim to benefit.

If an individual benefit claim is affected, compensation will be considered under the normal rules of the Departmental Compensation Scheme. Details of the rules were provided in my Written Answer to hon. Member for Newbury (Mr. Rendel) on the 5 November 1998, Official Report, columns 647–48.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for maternity benefit from the self-employed are (a) outstanding and (b) have been paid late as a result of the failure of the Contributions Agency computer system. [64446]

Mr. Timms: The estimated number of applications for maternity benefit from the self-employed, which are outstanding for November 1998, is 830. This is 60 more than the estimated figure for November 1997. The number that have been paid late because of delays attributable to the NIRS2 system is not available as information for the reason for any delay in payment is not recorded.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the details relating to Mrs. Talat Robjant will be entered on the Contributions Agency computer system. [64445]

Mr. Timms: The Contributions Agency is able to use the new National Insurance Recording system (NIRS2) to answer all inquiries concerning information held on individual National Insurance Accounts. The NIRS2 facilities for registering National Insurance numbers and issuing National Insurance cards for both adults and juveniles are being piloted currently, and should be implemented nationally in the near future.

I will respond to the hon. Member with further information about this case, if he will write with further details.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many men who have made maintenance payments through the CSA have requested a reimbursement following a DNA test that proved they were not the biological father; and in how many of these cases the payments have been reimbursed; [64465]

(2) what plans his Department has to review the guidelines in respect of reimbursement for men who have made maintenance payments and subsequently been proved, following a DNA test, not to be the biological father; [64467]

(3) how many men who have made maintenance payments under the court order system have requested a reimbursement following a DNA test that proved they were not the biological father; and in how many of these cases the payments have been reimbursed. [64466]

Angela Eagle: Neither the Child Support Agency nor the Court Services Agency routinely collect statistics on the number of fathers who have requested or received a reimbursement of child maintenance following a DNA test that indicated they were not the father. However, the Child Support Agency estimates that there have been 74 cases where a child support assessment has been cancelled by the Agency because the non-resident parent has subsequently been determined not to be the father of the qualifying child.

The outcome of the consultation process on the Green Paper "Children First: a new approach to child support", together with our detailed proposals for reforming the Child Support System, will be announced in due course.

Terminally Ill People (Special Benefit Rules)

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will amend the advice given to doctors on when to make a report on form DS1500 so that they can take the initiative in informing patients or their representatives of the special benefit rules for the terminally ill. [64305]

Mr. Timms: Each pad of DS1500 forms already contains a set of guidance notes for the doctors who will complete the forms. This sets out the purpose of the form and the circumstances in which it should be used. In addition, a Bulletin was issued by the Department's Chief Medical Adviser in March 1997 to all general practitioners which explained the special rules for Disability Living Allowance for those people suffering from a terminal illness. This also explained the purpose of this form and the general practitioner's role in the process.

Consequently, we believe that sufficient guidance is already available to enable doctors to fulfil their part in this important benefit for a particularly vulnerable group of claimants. We have no reason to believe that the system is not working in the way in which it was intended.

Carers

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate how many carers would benefit and at what cost if the rules of invalid care allowance were changed to include carers who were providing a total of at least 35 hours care per week to one or more individuals who were in receipt of the relevant levels and types of benefit. [64410]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available. Invalid Care Allowance has no regard to the number of people being cared for save that at least one severely disabled person must benefit from a minimum of 35 hours care per week.

Council Tax Benefit

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) when he plans to make a statement on how many council tax benefit claimants have been affected by the introduction of the Council Tax Benefit Regulations; [64692]

(2) when he will publish his review of the introduction of the new Council Tax Benefit Regulations. [64693]

Angela Eagle: Council Tax Benefit was restricted to band E levels from 1 April 1998 for properties in bands F, G or H. The Government are committed to monitoring the effects of the restriction in partnership with local authorities. We are examining the most efficient way of collecting information as the rule beds in: all existing claimants at the point of change were unaffected by it. We are seeking to minimise the administrative burden on local authorities. To this end officials have discussed options with local authority staff. Subject to the co-operation of local authorities, we propose to commission research in 1999. This research will be published in due course.

Children (Household Profile)

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate (a) how many children are living in households which have below half average income and (b) how many children live in households headed by (i) a married couple, (ii) a cohabiting couple and (iii) a lone parent; and if he will break down the figures between (A) two working parents, (B) one working parent and (C) no working parent families. [64673]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the tables.

The estimated total numbers of children living in households below half average income for the financial year 1996–97 in Great Britain

Total	2.2	0.4	1.9

[1] The figures for co-habiting couples are not shown because their respective sample sizes are too small to provide robust figures at the required level of detail. However, approximately half of the children belonging to all such couples live in households with at least one working parent

Note:

All figures are estimates taken from the Households Below Average Income (HBAI) data set based on the Family Resources Survey (FRS)

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the total expenditure and the breakdown of expenditure in his Department since May 1997 on (a) public opinion research, (b) television, radio and newspaper advertising and (c) direct mail. [63918]

Mr. Timms: The information is in the table.

Total spend for year 1997–98

Business unit	Public opinion research	TV, radio and newspaper advertising	Direct mail
Benefits Agency	12,587	151,539	76,603

[1] The substantial increase in Research costs over 1997–98 can be attributed to Project Access (a review of Benefits Agency information, which included consultation and research exercises) and the costs of commissioning research prior to the launch of the new style leaflets and claim forms.

Married Woman's Pension

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list in respect of each financial year since 1990 (a) the level of the married woman's retirement pension, (b) the level of that pension if upratings had been rounded to the nearest one pence and (c) his estimate of the net effect on public funds in each financial year if upratings had been carried out as in (b). [64140]

Mr. Denham: Information is not available in form requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

It is not possible to provide an accurate estimate of means-tested benefit offsets. However, if all Basic State Pension rates were increased by 1p the magnitude of the change in expenditure on means-tested benefits would be around 28 per cent. of the increased expenditure on RP.

Year	Actual rate (£)	Rate if rounded to nearest 1p since 1990–1991 (£)	Gross RP cost of change in rounding convention (£ million) in 1998–1999 benefit rates
1990–91	28.20	28.20	0
1991–92	31.25	31.27	3
1992–93	32.55	32.55	0
1993–94	33.70	33.72	2
1994–95	34.50	34.53	4
1995–96	35.25	35.29	5
1996–97	36.60	36.67	8
1997–98	37.35	37.44	11

Notes:

1. Contributory benefits effects have been estimated by the Government Actuary's Department. Individuals who receive a combination of Category A and B pension are included in this estimate.

2. The above costings do not take into account any corresponding effects on linked benefits.

Pensions

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list in respect of each financial year since 1990 (a) the level of the basic retirement pension, (b) the level of that pension if upratings had been rounded to the nearest one pence and (c) his estimate of the net effect on public funds in each financial year if upratings had been carried out as in (b). [64141]

Mr. Denham: Information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

It is not possible to provide an accurate estimate of means-tested benefit offsets for separate categories of pension. However, if all Basic State Pension rates were increased by 1p, the magnitude of the change in expenditure on means-tested benefits would be around 28 per cent. of the increased expenditure on Retirement Pension.

Year	Actual rate (£)	Rate if rounded to nearest 1p since 1990–91 (£)	Gross RP cost of change in rounding convention (£ million) in 1998–99 benefit rates
1990–91	46.90	46.90	0
1991–92	52.00	52.01	5
1992–93	54.15	54.14	−5
1993–94	56.10	56.09	−4
1994–95	57.60	57.60	0
1995–96	58.85	58.87	8
1996–97	61.15	61.17	8
1997–98	62.45	62.45	0

Notes:

1. Contributory benefits effects have been estimated by the Government Actuary's Department. Individuals who receive a combination of Category A and B pension are not included in this estimate.

2. Estimates are rounded to the nearest £1m. (+) denotes a cost and (−) denotes a saving.

3. These costings do not take into account any corresponding effects on linked benefits.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) the (i) task forces, (ii) review panels and (iii) advisory groups his Department has, (b) the remit of each and (c) the members of each together with their principal employment and their level of remuneration. [62815]

Mr. Denham: The information has been placed in the Library.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Relay Europe

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the resources available (a) from Her Majesty's Government and (b) from the European Communities to Relay Europe; what is the intended audience for its services and the scale of its activities; what contribution his Department makes to the subject matter distributed; if he will deposit in the Library a copy of the videos distributed; and if he will make a statement. [64126]

Mr. Fatchett: Relay Europe is a private sector organisation employed by the European Commission's Representation in the UK to organise conferences on its behalf, operate its mobile information centre and lend out audiovisual material produced by the Commission to the general public on demand. HMG make no direct financial contribution to Relay Europe. It does not carry any material produced by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the total expenditure and the breakdown of expenditure in his Department since May 1997 on (a) public opinion research, (b) television, radio and newspaper advertising and (c) direct mail. [63922]

Mr. Fatchett: Since May 1997 the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has spent, from centrally held funds: (a) £52,623.67 on public opinion research in Pakistan, the Eastern Caribbean and on British attitudes towards the EU; (b) £464,628.08 on advertising in newspapers and specialist publications for recruitment campaigns; and (c) nothing on direct mail. This gives a total expenditure on these activities of £517,215.75. It would involve disproportionate costs to establish what individual FCO posts may have spent on these activities from their devolved budgets.

Kuwaiti Missing Persons

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate how many Kuwaiti (a) missing persons and (b) prisoners of war remain in Iraq following the Gulf War; and if he will make a statement on progress on their return, or the return of their remains where appropriate, listing the action taken by (i) Her Majesty's Government and (ii) other Governments. [64399]

Mr. Fatchett: Under UN Security Council resolution 687 Iraq is obliged to facilitate the repatriation of the 600 or more Kuwaitis missing since the Gulf War. The UK attends meetings of the Technical Sub-Committee in Kuwait and of the Tripartite Commission in Geneva, chaired by the International Committee of the Red Cross, with the aim of resolving these cases. Iraq, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, the US, and France are also represented. Progress in these meetings has been hampered by continued Iraqi obstruction. To date, Iraq has only provided sufficient information to close three of the outstanding files.

Argentina

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes have been made to arrangements for the control of exports of arms and military equipment to Argentina. [64966]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Since 3 April 1982 the UK has maintained a national arms embargo on Argentina. It has been the policy of the UK to deny all applications for licences to export goods specified in Part III of Schedule I to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, commonly known as the Military List. We have decided to replace this embargo with new arrangements, with immediate effect.

Licences will only be granted for exports that we are satisfied would not, now or in the foreseeable future, put at risk the security of our Overseas Territories in the South Atlantic or our forces operating there. We will assess all applications for licences to export goods to Argentina on a case-by-case basis against our national export licensing criteria and those in the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports. This will also be the case with applications for advance approvals for promotion prior to formal application for an export licence.

Russia

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the optimum mechanisms for multi-lateral environment projects, with particular reference to Finnish-Norwegian-USA-UK help to the Murmansk Region and Kola peninsula areas of the USSR, in respect of stabilising and rectifying armamental legacies of the Cold War. [63109]

Mr. Fatchett: We are concerned about the environmental threat from the nuclear waste from nuclear powered vessels in North West Russia, and welcomes all initiatives which address the issue. The size of the problem is such that a multilateral approach offers the best chance of making an impact. The Government are working with international partners on tackling the problem, for example helping the Russian nuclear regulators with technical expertise to license waste storage casks. We also organised a seminar on 3 December to bring together all the interested parties, from Russia and other countries, from across Whitehall, and from British industry, to discuss the way forward.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to assist the UK nuclear industry to expand its bilateral funding to cover nuclear waste management and decommissioning in the Russian Federation. [63108]

Mr. Fatchett: We have already taken steps to promote what British industry can offer in nuclear waste management by holding a seminar on nuclear waste on 3 December, focusing on North-West Russia and the Urals. The seminar was attended by the relevant Russian authorities, other Whitehall Departments, representatives from the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the European Commission and international partners as well as a specialist cross-section of British industry. It looked at how to take forward nuclear environmental clean-up, an area where the experience and expertise of the UK nuclear industry has much to offer.

General Pinochet

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on reports that the British Embassy in Madrid warned the Embassy of Chile in Madrid that Spain would be likely to apply for the extradition of General Pinochet if he travelled to the United Kingdom; when such warnings were given; and in what terms. [64322]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: No such warning was passed to the Embassy of Chile in Madrid.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the contacts which took place between his Department and the Embassy of Chile about the security of Senator Pinochet during his visit to Britain in the autumn. [64330]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: There were no contacts between this Department and the Chilean Embassy about the security of Senator Pinochet prior to the Senator's arrest on 16 October.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response his Department made to the request made in September to the British Embassy in Chile for Senator Pinochet to travel to the United Kingdom as an Ambassador by presidential decree on a special mission to the United Kingdom. [64332]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: When the Embassy in Santiago was told informally in early September about the possibility of a visit by Senator Pinochet, no mention was made of any presidential decree or special mission.

Chechnya

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which of the Britons killed in Chechnya on 8 December were or had been employed by the British Government. [64319]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Of the three Britons murdered in Chechnya, Mr. Rudolf Petschi had been employed by the British Government. Mr. Petschi served with the Royal Signals in the British Army from February 1976 to January 1998.

Kenya and Tanzania

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had with the Governments of Kenya and Tanzania on providing assistance to them following the recent bomb attacks. [64293]

Mr. Foulkes: I have been asked to reply.

Discussions with the Kenyan Government began immediately following the 7 August bomb explosion in Nairobi. This Department has provided £2.526 million in emergency assistance, including £1.5 million worth of information technology and communications equipment for the Kenya National Examinations Council and similar equipment worth £1 million for the Co-operative Bank, the head offices of both organisations having been devastated by the bomb. Other assistance included visits by plastic surgeons and structural engineers.

The bomb in Dar es Salaam resulted in much less loss of life, injuries and damage than Nairobi. The Prime Minister wrote to President Mkapa on 8 August offering assistance, but no request was received.

Schengen Agreement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the acquis of the Schengen agreement that has not been deposited in the Library. [64189]

Kate Hoey: I have been asked to reply.

The Schengen acquis will not be defined definitively until the Amsterdam Treaty enters into force, at which point the Council of Ministers will be invited to adopt two Decisions defining the acquis and allocating a European Union legal base to each Schengen measure. Draft versions of these Decisions, with Explanatory Memoranda, were submitted to the House and copied to the Library on 21 May 1998. Of course, the acquis will continue to grow as the Schengen Executive Committee will continue to adopt instruments right up to the entry into force of Amsterdam.

The Government have also placed in the Library copies of the 1985 Schengen Agreement, the 1990 Schengen Convention and the Accession Protocols and all the Decisions and Declarations of the Schengen Executive Committee covering the period up to and including June 1997 which are in our possession, except for six documents which are classified as "Confidential". Some of these documents are incomplete and there are others which we have not yet received: these are indicated in the list which accompanies the documents deposited in the Library. We are endeavouring to obtain the missing documents and hope to deposit a further set of texts up to and including measures adopted in the first half of 1998 in the Library in the New Year.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

DNA Testing (Paternity Cases)

Mr. Healey: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how many men who were designated the father and subject to a maintenance court order have been subsequently proven not be the father by DNA testing. [64408]

Mr. Hoon: This information is not collected.

Cabinet Office Expenditure

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what has been the total expenditure and the breakdown of expenditure in the Cabinet Office since May 1997 on (a) public opinion research, (b) television, radio and newspaper advertising, (c) direct mail and (d) publicity. [64185]

Mr. Hoon: To date the expenditure under these headings has been:

(a) nil

(b) £293,091.44, all of which related to judicial appointments and the recruitment of staff.

(c) nil

(d) £182,263, broken down as follows:

Domestic Violence leaflets/booklets/posters	62,646
"Who Decides?" Green Paper	32,292
Marriage Support Services Directory	23,157
You too could be a Magistrate—reprint	3,792
Working for Justice—guide to LCD	36,120
Civil justice Consultation Paper	17,396
Judicial Appointments application forms—reprint	6,860
Total	182,263

HOME DEPARTMENT

Criminal Trials

Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the Government's response to the recommendations of the Law Commission report No. 245: Evidence in Criminal Proceedings: Hearsay and Related Topics; and if he will make a statement. [64785]

Mr. Straw: The Government consider the Law Commission's report No. 245, published in June 1997, a thorough and comprehensive review of the law on hearsay evidence. It contains 50 recommendations and a draft bill which are intended to modernise and codify the law.

The Government have given careful consideration to the recommendations in the report, in consultation with the Law Commission. They have concluded that the proposals will simplify the law and enable more evidence to be deemed admissible, whilst maintaining proper safeguards to protect the interests of the defendant.

The Government have decided to accept all the recommendations in the report.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek powers to allow a judge discretion not to abandon criminal trials where a defendant's criminal record is revealed, prior to verdict, by a co-defendant or witness; and if he will make a statement. [63022]

Mr. Boateng: The law on previous misconduct, which includes the admissibility in criminal proceedings of a defendant's criminal record, is currently under consideration by the Law Commission. The Law Commission issued a consultation paper on this subject in July 1996 and we will await their final report, which is expected next year, before reaching a decision on this matter.

Terrorism Legislation

Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish his proposals for non-temporary UK-wide legislation against terrorism. [64784]

Mr. Straw: I have today published, jointly with the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, a consultation document containing proposals to replace the current temporary framework of legislation against terrorism with permanent United Kingdom-wide provisions.

The document sets out the Government's proposals for police powers and other measures which would apply throughout the United Kingdom to deal with the threat from all forms of terrorism, including those which might develop in the future. The proposals take proper account of the peace process and the security situation in Northern Ireland. They also introduce measures to combat domestic terrorism and strengthen our response to the continuing threat from international terrorism.

The proposals in the consultation document are designed to be both effective and proportionate in responding to terrorism whilst ensuring that individual rights are protected and that the United Kingdom's international commitments are fulfilled.

Views are invited on all of the proposals discussed in the document, and the consultation period will last until 16 March 1999. Following this, proposals will be drawn up for new counter-terrorist legislation, to be introduced at a suitable opportunity.

Immigration and Asylum

Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many comments he has received on the White Paper on immigration and asylum; and if he will publish them. [64783]

Mr. Straw: 334 comments have been received on the White Paper 'Fairer, Faster and Firmer—A Modern Approach to Immigration and Asylum'. A list of those who commented together with copies of their comments, with the exception of six whose authors requested that they should not be published, have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 8 December 1998, Official Report, columns 107–08, what plans he has to require courts to notify the Immigration and Nationality Directorate when someone subject to immigration control is convicted of an offence resulting in a sentence of (a) imprisonment of less than 12 months and (b) a community service order. [64688]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Asylum seekers who declare their application in-country may be eligible for support under the terms of the National Assistance Act 1948 or the Children Act 1989. In both cases, this support is provided by local authority social services departments. It is for the local authorities concerned to decide how best to discharge their responsibilities. Under current legislation, the Home Office has no role in those decisions.

My hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, North-East (Mr. Best) has written to me about this matter and I will be replying to him shortly.

Mutual Legal Assistance

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards the proposals discussed at the recent meeting in Brussels of the European Convention on Mutual Legal Assistance in respect of the interception of communications. [64470]

Mr. Straw: The Government's policy towards co-operation between member states of the European Union on interception of communications remains as reported to the House of Lords Select Committee on the European Communities and recorded in their Report Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters (14th Report, Session 1997–98). Justice and Home Affairs Ministers meeting in Brussels on 3 and 4 December addressed a number of questions relating to the latest text of the draft Convention. We have reached agreement on much of the interception provisions. We are now seeking to ensure that the text accommodates important features of our own interception law and policy as well as that of other member states. In particular, differences in national legislation should not have the effect that operations carried out in relation to the United Kingdom's security and intelligence agencies would fall within the scope of the Convention when it will clearly not apply in relation to their equivalents in other member states. The Government's position on the latest text is under consideration by the European Scrutiny Committees.

Charity Commission

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase the accountability of the Charity Commission. [64560]

Mr. Boateng: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 15 December 1998, Official Report, column 466.

Police Dog Training

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what animal welfare organisations have been asked to advise police forces in the United Kingdom as to the training procedures that should be followed in police dog training; and if he will make a statement. [64521]

Mr. Boateng: Guidance on the training of police dogs is contained in the Police Dog Training and Care Manual which was issued in 1996 by the Home Office Standing Advisory Committee on Police Dogs. The revision of the Manual is now the responsibility of the Association of Chief Police Officers' (ACPO) Police Dog Sub-Committee.

The Chairman of the ACPO Police Dog Sub-Committee, Mrs. Pauline Clare, has contacted Essex Police, the RSPCA, the National Canine Defence League, and Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary with a view to developing a scheme for inspection of force dog training centres by a team comprising of representatives of these organisations and the ACPO Sub-Committee. A pilot scheme is to be initiated within Essex involving inspection by two members of the Sub-Committee, a representative of the RSPCA, and a member of the Essex Police Authority. The ACPO Police Dog Sub-Committee will evaluate the pilot scheme in due course.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with police authorities in the United Kingdom on the training of police dogs, with particular reference to measures to ensure that no cruelty takes place during training; and if he will make a statement. [64527]

Mr. Boateng: My right hon. Friend has not discussed this matter with police authorities and has no plans to do so.

Guidance on the training of police dogs is contained in the Police Dog Training and Care Manual which specifically states that a dog handler should never resort to physical punishment in training the dog. Revision of the Manual is the responsibility of the Association of Chief Police Officers' Police Dog Sub-Committee.

Prisoners (Education Programmes)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect on prison inmates of the education programmes provided; and what estimate he has made of the re-offending rate of former inmates who have done well on the courses. [64478]

Mr. George Howarth: Information on the re-offending rate of former inmates who have done well on courses is not available.

A pilot study on the effectiveness of regimes was undertaken by the Prison Service in 1995–96. This showed that participation on educational/vocational courses reduced the rates of re-conviction provided that they were undertaken by offenders who had a need in that area. The study showed that education may lead to improved attitudes in respect of criminal lifestyle with the offender developing a new perspective on his or her behaviour.

Education and work programmes in prisons are increasingly being offered as an integrated package with priority given to improving basic skills. As specific basic educational standards are a pre-requisite to obtaining employment after release, these programmes are seen as potentially extremely valuable to offenders when they are seeking employment.

Prisons (Needle Exchanges)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his present policy on introducing needle exchanges in prisons. [64318]

Mr. George Howarth: We have no present plans to introduce a needle exchange scheme in prisons in England and Wales. The arguments in favour are counter-balanced by the risk of increasing the number of needles in circulation and undermining the need to deter and prevent drug misuse. The Prison Service, however, continues to monitor developments in the field, both at home and abroad.

Police Service

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if it is his policy to increase the strength of the police service; and if he will make a statement; [64405]

(2) if he will set out the strengths of each individual police force in England and Wales on (a) 1 May 1979, (b) 1 May 1997 and (c) the latest available date in 1998; and if he will make a statement; [64328]

(3) what arrangements he has made for collecting up-to-date figures on the strengths of individual police forces; at what frequency such information is required; and if he will make a statement; [64325]

(4) what assessment he has made of the impact of the financial settlement for the police on the strength of the police service; and if he will make a statement. [64327]

Mr. Boateng: Information about police personnel numbers for individual forces in England and Wales is collected twice a year, at the end of March and September. Copies of the collated information are usually placed in the Library. Additionally, Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary collects annually more detailed information on police personnel numbers and their deployment.

The Government will do all that they can to ensure that the police have adequate resources to play their key part in tackling crime and disorder. However, no responsible Government can give commitments about numbers of police officers. Under legislation passed by the previous Government, this is a matter for chief constables, within the resources made available to them. The additional resources to be provided by the Government, totalling up to £1,24 billion over the next three years, coupled with the two per cent. efficiency targets which have been set for police authorities, will help to release more resources for front line policing.

The table provides information on police numbers at 31 March 1979, 31 March 1997 and 30 September 1998. The figures for 30 September 1998 are provisional and subject to validation.

Asylum Seekers

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for political asylum have been made to date in 1998; how many were made in the same period in 1997; and if he will make a statement. [64326]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The numbers of applications for asylum from January to October 1998 was 36,625 as compared to 27,035 in the same period in 1997. The rate of applications has varied widely over recent years.

There was a temporary fall in the number of asylum seekers after the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993 and numbers then peaked again in 1995. It may be that we are seeing a similar pattern after the Asylum and Immigration Act.

The current legislative base is inadequate and the asylum system which this Government inherited has been described as shambolic. We set out our proposals for a firmer, faster and fairer system in our White Paper in July. Legislation will be forthcoming shortly to implement these proposals.

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps he has taken to ensure that all those applicants for political asylum given indefinite leave to remain in this country are genuine political refugees; and if he will make a statement; [64324]

(2) in what circumstances applicants for political asylum who are judged not to be genuine may be given indefinite leave to remain in the country; and if he will make a statement. [64323]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: A person who applies for asylum may, even if unsuccessful, qualify for leave to enter or remain on other grounds either under the Immigration Rules or an exceptional compelling or compassionate basis, and Secretaries of State in successive Governments have dealt with cases accordingly. For example, in the first quarter of 1993, 57 per cent. of asylum applicants whose cases were decided were not granted asylum but were granted leave to enter or remain on exceptional grounds with an avenue to settlement in due course.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what standards he has specified for the accommodation of asylum seekers; and if he will make a statement. [63934]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Home Office is not currently responsible for accommodating asylum seekers and, therefore, has made no specification for their accommodation. Asylum seekers who are able to support themselves or those who qualify for income support and housing benefit can choose their own accommodation. Others may qualify for support provided by local authority social services departments under the terms of the National Assistance Act 1948 or the Children Act 1989.

The White Paper "Fairer, faster and firmer—a modern approach to immigration and asylum" (Cm 4018) set out proposals for a new asylum seekers support scheme. This scheme (which will require statutory underpinning), will be included in the forthcoming Immigration and Asylum Bill. It is not expected to become operational until April 2000. A project team has been set up to take forward the proposals. They will be developing specifications for the support arrangements, including accommodation, but no firm proposals have yet been developed.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many citizens of the former Yugoslavia have sought political asylum in the UK in the last three months; how many applications have been accepted; and what were the equivalent figures for each of the last three years. [64257]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested is given in the table.

Applications[1] received for asylum in the United Kingdom, excluding dependants, and initial decisions on applications, August to October 1995, 1996, 1997 and 1998 for nationals of the former Yugoslavia

[3] Provisional figures

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were granted political asylum in the years (a) 1970 to 1979, (b) 1980 to 1989 and (c) 1990 to date. [64235]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In the period January 1990 to October 1998, a total of 17,780 persons were recognised as refugees and granted asylum in the United Kingdom under the criteria set out in the 1951 United National Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, and the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees. This figure excludes dependants and subsequent decisions following appeal or further representations.

Figures on the numbers of persons granted asylum in the United Kingdom are only separately identifiable from 1984 onward. Between January 1984 and December 1989, 4,480 persons were granted asylum in the United Kingdom.

I regret that corresponding data for 1970 to 1983 are not available. However, data on recognised refugees accepted for settlement in 1974 to 1987 after four years residence in the United Kingdom show 2,600 such persons in 1974 to 1983 and 3,000 in 1984 to 1987.

Prisons (Bullying)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reported cases of bullying of prison inmates by fellow inmates there have been in England and Wales in each of the last three years. [64122]

Mr. George Howarth: The number of reported cases of bullying of prisoners by other prisoners is not recorded centrally. Establishments are not specifically required to maintain statistics on the number of cases identified, nor to report them to Prison Service headquarters. However, the Prison Service intends to make it a requirement for establishments to monitor the number of prisoners identified as being bullies on a monthly basis in the coming.

Mr. Barry Horne

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice he received in respect of Mr. Barry Horne before Mr. Horne was transferred from Full Sutton Prison to York District Hospital on 24 November. [64448]

Mr. George Howarth: Mr. Horne was transferred to York District Hospital on 24 November on clinical grounds following an assessment of his medical condition by a consultant from that hospital.

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further advice he received about Mr. Barry Horne's medical condition prior to his readmission to York District Hospital on 13 December. [64458]

Mr. George Howarth: The decision to return Mr. Horne to York District Hospital was taken on clinical grounds by the senior medical officer at Full Sutton prison in consultation with consultants at the hospital, following Mr. Horne's decision to resume eating and to accept medical treatment.

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what costs have been incurred by his Department as a result of the hunger strike recently undertaken by Mr. Barry Horne. [64450]

Mr. George Howarth: The direct costs to the Prison Service of Mr. Horne's recent hunger strike have been estimated to be approximately £1,000 for the hire of agency nurses while he was held in Prison.

Whilst Mr. Horne was located in hospital, the Prison Service provided three escort staff. However, there is no additional cost related to these staff, as additional hours accrued by them during this time will be taken off during less busy periods in the future.

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the reasons for the transfer of Mr. Barry Horne back to Full Sutton Prison from York District Hospital on 10 December. [64459]

Mr. George Howarth: Mr. Horne was returned to Full Sutton Prison following a review of his condition by medical staff at York District Hospital. The review concluded that in view of his continued refusal of food and medical treatment, and his stable condition, there was no clinical need for him to remain at the hospital as he could be equally well cared for in the health care centre at Full Sutton Prison.

Juries

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his policy with regard to the use of juries in criminal trials. [63016]

Mr. Boateng: We have published two consultation papers this year about jury trials. The first paper, on use of juries in serious fraud trials, invited views on the principle of whether the system is likely to operate better and with a greater degree of public confidence if, in a small number of complex fraud trials, a traditional jury were to be replaced by another method of determining the facts. The consultation paper on determining the mode of trial considered whether defendants should be able to choose to be tried by a jury in cases which magistrates have indicated that they would be content to hear. We are currently considering the responses to these two consultation exercises.

General Pinochet

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the cost to public funds to date incurred in connection with the detention of Senator Pinochet; and if he will itemise those costs. [64264]

Mr. Straw: I refer the hon. Member to a reply I gave to the hon. Member for Poole, (Mr. Syms) on 9 November 1998, Official Report, column 47.

Crime (Staffordshire)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received about the level of crime in Staffordshire. [64505]

Mr. Boateng: In addition to the two questions by my hon. Friend about crime in Staffordshire which I replied to on 16 November 1998, Official Report, columns 388–89, and 19 November 1998, Official Report, column 734, I have received a number of representations from members of the public.

In the 12 months to March 1998, police in Staffordshire recorded 89,820 offences. This represents a decrease of 3.1 per cent. (2,866 offences) over the previous 12 months.

Immigration Detainees

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people, at the most recent convenient date, were detained in (a) prisons and (b) immigration detention centres under Immigration Act, powers alone; and, of these, how many were detained (i) on arrival and (ii) after enforcement action. [64514]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Helicopter Flights

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ban flights by police helicopters in London between the hours of 11 pm and 6 am [64540]

Mr. Boateng: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave her on 19 November 1998, Official Report, column 735.

Police Grant

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the real terms change in funding from central Government funds for each police force in the next financial year; what was the real terms change in funding from central Government funds for each police force between 1997–98 and 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [63674]

Mr. Boateng: My right hon. Friend announced on 2 December 1998, Official Report, columns 194–97, the revenue funding proposals for each police authority for 1999–2000. The table shows the real terms changes between these and comparative funding allocations in 1998–99, and between 1998–99 and 1997–98. In actual terms, the national increase in Total Standard Spending on the police is 2.67 per cent. or £186 million over 1998–99.

In addition, the Government have announced the abolition of crude and universal capping of local authority spending from April 1999. This will provide some flexibility at local level to enable police authorities to increase their spending power. Nevertheless, police authorities are expected to set budgets which are prudent and reasonable, and which do not impose an excessive increase in council tax next year.

[2] Figure for the City includes Police SSA, Grant and SSA Reduction Grant, but excludes other SSAs (eg Capital Financing) and Central Support Reduction Grant. These are allocated to the Common Council of the City of London as a whole in respect of all its functions.

[3] Figure for the Metropolitan Police does not include funding allocated to the Receiver under the Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services SSA for school crossing patrols, Magistrates' Courts and the Probation Service. It does include its Special Payment.

Prisons (Drugs)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drug free units there are in England and Wales; if he will list the prisons in which they operate; and if he will make a statement. [63670]

Mr. George Howarth: As part of the implementation of its Drug Strategy, the Prison Service is planning the expansion of provision of voluntary testing units from April 1999 onwards. Included in the programme of work is a specification for voluntary testing units and an analysis of the existing provision. The information requested will be available towards the end of this financial year.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of reported drug use there were in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales (a) in each of the last 12 months and (b) in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [63685]

Mr. George Howarth: Provisional information for 1998 showing the number of drugs offences by prisoners proved at prison adjudication are given in the table. In addition, 831 prison visitors were arrested for drug related incidents at a prison in England and Wales between January and September 1998. Figures for prison visitors arrested for drug offences for the last 5 years are shown in the table.

Information regarding the number of drugs offences proved at prison adjudication are published in "Prison statistics England and Wales" (table 8.5 of the 1997 edition, cm 4017) and before 1997 in successive volumes of "Statistics of offences against prison discipline and punishments England and Wales" (tables 8 and 9 for 1994–96 and tables 11 and 12 for 1992–93). Copies of these publications are in the Library.

Feltham Young Offenders Institution

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people have been transferred from Feltham Young Offenders Institution needing psychiatric help as defined under the Mental Health Act 1983 in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [63676]

(2) what is the average length of time taken for transfers to take place from Feltham Young Offenders Institution of individuals needing psychiatric help as defined under the Mental Health Act 1983; and if he will make a statement. [63783]

Mr. George Howarth: The following transfers from Feltham Young Offenders Institution to psychiatric hospital under sections 47 and 48 of the Mental Health Act 1983 took place in each of the years in question covering the period 1 April to 31 March:

	Number
1993–94	7
1994–95	16
1995–96	36
1996–97	30
1997–98	31

The time taken to deal with transfers is not available in the form requested. Each case is dealt with according to the conditions of the patient and the availability of a suitable hospital bed.

Police Manpower

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there were in each police force on (i) the last day for which figures are available, (ii) 31 March 1998, (iii) 30 September 1997, (iv) 31 March 1997 and (v) 31 March 1992; if he will give the figures in total and per head of population; and if he will make a statement. [63672]

Mr. Boateng: The latest available information is set out in the tables. Police strength figures as at 30 September 1998 are provisional and have yet to be validated.

The population figures are those provided by the Office for National Statistics. Information on the numbers of population per police officer is based on the population figures as at mid-June preceding the date of the police strength figures. For 30 September, the population figures used are those for mid 1997; mid 1998 figures will not be available until next year.

Young Offenders (Psychiatric Assistance)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the length of delays for transferring individuals from young offenders institutions who have been assessed as requiring psychiatric assistance; and if he will make a statement. [63675]

Mr. George Howarth: I am not aware of any representations. Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons has, in his Inspection Reports, drawn attention to problems about the availability of hospital places for prisoners needing that level of psychiatric care. The Government's plans for addressing these problems are set out in the Department of Health White Paper "Modernising Mental Health Services—Safe, fair and supportive".

Prisoner Programmes

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the level of purposeful activity per week undertaken by prisoners, broken down into (a) education, (b) work, (c) training and (d) rehabilitation programmes in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [63671]

Mr. George Howarth: Information on the average weekly time spent by purposeful activity in each of the last five years is given in the table.

Average hours purposeful activity per prisoner per week

	Work	Education and Training
1998–99 to date	12.9	3.9
1997–98	13.3	4.1
1996–97	13.5	4.3
1995–96	14.3	4.9
1994–95	14.5	5.2

Note:
Work is defined as time spent in support to works and maintenance staff, workshops, farms, gardens, kitchens and other domestic work. Information on Education and Training activities are combined. The year to October information for 1998–99 is provisional and subject to validation by Prisons. The Prison Service does not record separately time spent engaged in rehabilitation programmes.

Police Budgets (Pensions)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of each police force budget has been spent on pensions in each of the last three years; what estimate he has made of the average proportion of police budgets which will be spent on pensions in each of the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [63673]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested in respect of years 1996–97 to 1998–99 is set out in the table. Information on police authority budgets and pension costs for the next three years is not available. Police authority budgets are not set until the beginning of each year following the revenue settlement announced by the Government. Pension costs will in part be influenced by retirements in each preceding year.

Sexual Offences

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been in the United Kingdom for sexual offences committed against children by United Kingdom nationals in countries overseas in the past three years; and if he will make a statement. [64120]

Mr. Boateng: Part II of the Sex Offenders Act 1997 provides the courts with jurisdiction to deal in this country with British citizens who commit certain sexual offences against children abroad. This Act came into effect in September last year. There have been no prosecutions under the Act. However, it was always expected that the Act would be used only as a last resort where a country will not prosecute an alleged offender or where the United Kingdom cannot extradite that person. Prosecutions under Part II of the Act will always be difficult because of the problems of obtaining evidence from abroad to present to a court in this country in relation to offences committed abroad.

The Government are committed to dealing with the evil of the commercial sexual exploitation of children. This requires more than having appropriate legislation in place. As part of the Government's comprehensive strategy, the United Kingdom is fully participating in international action to deal with the problem and has shared intelligence and expertise and the training skills of our police with other Governments. These measures demonstrate our commitment to tackling this problem seriously.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many official visits (a) he and (b) the Ministers in his Department, have made to Buckinghamshire since 2 May 1997; and if he will list them. [64127]

Mr. Straw: The information is as follows:

Minister	Date	Destination	Reason for official visit
Home Secretary	3 September 1997	Aylesbury	Official visit to Thames Valley Police

CS Sprays

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department collates statistics on the number of times each police force has used CS sprays in public since January 1996. [63930]

Mr. Boateng: The information is not held centrally.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many studies have been performed into solvents as potential alternatives to CS sprays; which agency or organisation carried out each study; and when each study was completed. [63928]

Mr. Boateng: A study was commissioned from the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, an agency of the Minister of Defence (DERA CBDE) by the Home Office Police Scientific Development Branch (PSDB) to compare the toxicology of Methyl Iso-butyl Ketone (MIBK) with other solvents. This study was completed in 1996.

A literature review was commissioned from DERA CBDE by PSDB to consider potential suitable alternative solvents to MIBK. This study was completed in 1997.

PSDB have a programme to identify possible alternative solvents. This work is currently in progress.

Conspiracy Convictions

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have been (a) arrested, (b) charged and (c) convicted of conspiracy in the UK to commit offences abroad. [64203]

Mr. Boateng: Information on the number of people arrested and charged by type of offence is not collected centrally.

Section 5 of the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998—Conspiracy to commit offences outside the United Kingdom—came into effect on 4 September 1998, and information on convictions from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database will begin to become available in the Spring of 1999.

Specified Organisation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions (a) the opinion of a senior police officer has been given in court as evidence of a person's membership of a specified organisation and (b) a court has been asked to draw an inference from the failure of a person suspected of belonging to a specified organisation to mention a relevant fact; how many persons have been (i) charged and (ii) convicted of belonging to a specified organisation since September 1998; and on how many occasions a court has ordered forfeiture of property following conviction for belonging to a specified organisation. [64202]

Mr. Boateng: Our records indicate that since the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998 came into force on 4 September, there have been no such cases in England and Wales.

Fire Service (Pensions)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make an announcement on the future of pensions for the Fire Service; and if he will make a statement. [64083]

Mr. George Howarth: Following the review of the fire pension scheme, I expect to publish proposals early in the New Year.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road (Policing)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the liability of MEL in respect of the policing costs arising from the Birmingham Northern Relief Road; and if he will make a statement. [63910]

Mr. Boateng: We would normally expect the cost of policing operations such as the construction of the Birmingham Northern Relief Road to be met by forces from within their existing budgets. Nevertheless, we are considering bids for extra funding from the three forces concerned in respect of their estimated additional costs.

I understand from the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions that there is no liability on MEL to meet the policing costs of constructing and operating the Birmingham Northern Relief Road.

Age of Consent

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many letters he has received since 1 May 1997 (a) in favour of and (b) opposed to lowering the age of consent for homosexual acts to 16 years; and how many replies have been sent in a standard form. [64279]

Mr. Boateng: Since 1 May 1997, the Home Office has received approximately 20,000 letters about lowering the homosexual age of consent to 16. Around 3,500 of these were letters to the Prime Minister.

No detailed records are kept of correspondents' views on this issue. However, the majority of those received following the failure of the amendment to lower the homosexual age of consent in the summer were in support of lowering the age of consent. The large majority of those received in the run up to the Queen's Speech in November were against lowering the age of consent.

In view of the large volume of correspondence on this one issue and in order to ensure that replies to the public are sent out as quickly as possible, it has been necessary to use a comprehensive response which makes clear the Government's position on this matter.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what has been the cost to (i) Devon County Council and (ii) Plymouth City Council of maintaining illegal immigrants from Plymouth Ferry Port in each of the last three years; [64258]

(2) what has been the cost to (a) Hampshire County Council and (b) Portsmouth City Council of maintaining illegal immigrants from Portsmouth Ferry Port in each of the last three years. [64259]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: This information is not available to the Home Office. The hon. Member should approach the local authorities.

Illegal immigrants who do not claim asylum and who have no special needs are not eligible for support from public funds. Asylum seekers and other illegal immigrants (who are given temporary leave to enter) who are not otherwise detained and who are able to support themselves are free to live within the United Kingdom in a place of their own choosing. Asylum seekers who register their application for asylum at their port of entry may be eligible for Income Support and Housing Benefit and can then find their own accommodation. Asylum seekers who do not qualify for benefits but who may be supported under the terms of the National Assistance Act 1948 or the Children Act 1989 are supported by local authorities under the terms of that legislation. The Home Office currently has no direct role in providing support and is consequently not aware of the information sought. The Government plan a fundamental reform of the asylum and immigration laws to remove cash benefits and more strictly control where asylum seekers live.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many citizens of Slovakia are currently being detained in the UK as illegal immigrants; and what were the equivalent figures for each of the last three years. [64256]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many illegal immigrants at Dover Ferry Port have been refused entry and removed from the UK within seven days of arrival in each of the last 12 months. [64253]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information on the numbers of persons removed or departing voluntarily within 7 days of being issued with a notice of illegal entry by the South East Ports Surveillance Team at Dover, between 1 July 1997 and 30 June 1998 is: 38 persons in July 1997; 38 in August 1997; 19 in September 1997; 23 in October 1997; 11 in November 1997; 23 in December 1997; 8 in January 1998; 5 in February 1998; 13 in March 1998; 12 in April 1998; 6 in May 1998; and 7 in June 1998. The data are provisional.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many illegal immigrants at Harwich Ferry Port have been granted political asylum in each of the last 12 months. [64252]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information is that no more than two persons who had been issued with notice of illegal entry by immigration officials at Harwich were granted asylum in the 12 months from 1 July 1997 to 30 June 1998. The data are provisional.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many illegal immigrants at (a) Newhaven, (b) Plymouth, (c) Poole and (d) Portsmouth ferry ports have been granted political asylum in each of the last 12 months. [64237]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 16 December 1998]: The available information is that no persons issued with notice of illegal entry at Newhaven, Plymouth, Poole or Portsmouth were granted asylum in the 12 months from 1 July 1997 to 30 June 1998.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many illegal immigrants who arrived at Poole Ferry Port are currently being detained; and what were the equivalent figures for each of the last six months. [64254]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information is that, as at 15 December 1998, no more than two persons who had been served with a notice of illegal entry by immigration officials at Poole were detained solely under Immigration Act powers. Information relating to the previous six months could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Prisoners (Hunger Strikes)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have embarked on a hunger strike in each year since 1987; and how many (a) died and (b) gave up but suffered permanent damage to their health. [64261]

Mr. George Howarth: Definitions and methods of recording this type of incidents have changed over time, and the Prison Service has employed the broader definition of "food refusal" since 1989. Information on incidence of food refusal prior to 1989 is not held centrally. The number of reported incidents of food refusal for each calendar year since 1989 is given in the table. It should be noted that the figures may include a number of incidents concerning the same prisoner. Three prisoners have died as a result of food refusal during this period.

Information on prisoners who ceased refusing food, but then suffered permanent damage to their health could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Food refusals in prison custody: 1989–1998[1]

Year	Number of reported incidents
1989	60
1990	78
1991	90
1992	145
1993	220
1994	306
1995	225
1996	193
1997	222
1998	198[1]

[1] Figures as at 14 December 1998

Note:
To be recorded as a food refusal the period of refusal must exceed one day.

Police (Deaf People)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if his Department will issue guidance to police forces on the importance of recording on video interviews with criminal suspects whose first or preferred language is British Sign Language; [64229]

(2) what plans he has to issue guidance about improving communication between deaf people and the police following the research report by the Home Office Police Research Group, Police and Deaf People: A Lack Of Communication. [64230]

Mr. Boateng: The report "Police and Deaf People: A Lack of Communication" was written by a police officer and published under the Police Research Award Scheme (PRAS) run by the Home Office. All PRAS publications carry a disclaimer that the recommendations are the views of the author and not necessarily those of the Home Office nor of the author's force. The report has been distributed to all United Kingdom police forces. It is for individual chief officers to decide whether the recommendations should be taken up.

It is open to chief officers to implement the recommendation in the report to video record interviews with deaf suspects where they have video recording equipment and where the suspect consents to this.

The Codes of Practice issued under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, which regulate the conduct of police interviews with suspects, contain a number of safeguards for suspects who are deaf. These include the requirement for an interpreter and for a contemporaneous written note of the interview to be made as well as an audio tape recording.

Home Office seminars are due to take place in Spring 1999 for key police personnel about the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, including dealing with people with hearing difficulties.

TREASURY

Public Services

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will publish public service agreements concerning the modernisation, accountability and reform of public services; and if he will make a statement. [64968]

Mr. Byers: We are today publishing a White Paper, "Public Services for the Future: Modernisation, Reform, Accountability" (Cm 4181).

National Savings

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about National Savings. [64790]

Ms Hewitt: National Savings has been carrying out a wide ranging programme to modernise the organisation against the background of a fast moving and highly competitive retail savings market. This has included the evaluation of a service contract in the form of a public private partnership for operational services delivery. After detailed consideration and discussion with those involved I can announce that I have accepted the recommendation of the National Savings Management Board and given it the authority to sign a contract with Siemens Business Services. The contract will be awarded for 15 years (with a break of 10 years) and there are considerable safeguards to ensure it will serve the public interest, including rigorous standards for customer service.

This contract between National Savings and Siemens Business Services is a milestone in the Government's policy of public private partnership. It will create a new Public Service Partnership, bringing together the strengths of the two organisations to deliver real benefits to all the stakeholders involved. The public interest will be served through better service to National Savings customers, savings to the taxpayer and wider opportunities for staff. And Siemens Business Services will benefit by taking on first-rate staff who will help them build their business in the growing field of business service.

Key features of the deal are the introduction of private sector capital and expertise which will help National Savings modernise its systems and processes, and so provide more choice to customers; a commitment by Siemens Business Services to a continual programme of customer improvements; a reduction in National Savings ongoing running costs. To offset the reduction in National Savings' operational jobs stemming from the Agency's ongoing programme of investment in new technology Siemens Business Services plans to introduce new work to each of the National Savings' sites in Blackpool, Durham and Glasgow. The outlook therefore is for a materially greater number of jobs than would have been the case without the appointment of a private sector partner. Amongst the safeguards we have negotiated are a significant commitment to job creation, with an undertaking in any event to maintain a National Savings presence in each of the three locations for at least the next five years.

National Savings staff, most of whom are employed in operational services, are being told of my decision today. The operational staff will transfer employment to Siemens Business Services on 1 April 1999. Under TUPE, staff terms and conditions of employment are guaranteed and cannot be changed without negotiation between Siemens Business Services and the staff through their appointed Trade Unions.

National Savings' products will continue to be guaranteed by the Government who remain responsible for key decisions, including setting interest rates and terms and conditions of new products. National Savings remain in control over all key processes relating to the management of its market leading business—including policy, product design and delivering and pricing. The Chief Executive of the National Savings Executive Agency, who is also the Director of National Savings, will remain fully accountable to Ministers and to Parliament for National Savings.

This contract is in keeping with the Government's policy for public private partnerships and for modernising public services so they serve the interests of all stakeholders. This Public Service Partnership offers significant benefits to National Savings' customers and staff, and to the taxpayer, as well as to the local economies concerned.

Film Industry (Tax Relief)

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the tax relief measures for film makers introduced in 1997; what plans he has for changes to these measures; and if he will make a statement. [64451]

Dawn Primarolo: We are continuing to assess the effectiveness of the tax measures introduced in 1997, but first indications are that it is working well. It would of course be improper for me to anticipate what may or may not be in my right hon. Friend the Chancellor's Budget.

International Debt

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made on agreeing international debt relief since the G8 summit in Birmingham last May. [62751]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 16 December 1998]: At the Annual Meetings of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, the Chancellor secured agreement on his efforts to maintain momentum towards meeting his Mauritius Mandate targets. Specifically it was agreed: to extend the Highly Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative from September 1998 to the end of 2000; to allow IMF post conflict assistance programmes to count towards a country's track record under the HIPC initiative; to move forward quickly on further proposals which recognise the special needs of post conflict countries, especially those with arrears to the International Financial Institutions; and to hold a wide-ranging review of the HIPC initiative in 1999.

The United Kingdom has recently been at the forefront of international efforts to help maintain the debt service burdens of those countries devastated by Hurricane Mitch. Following UK proposals, the International Financial Institutions have recently set up a trust fund for assistance to meet the multi-lateral debt service obligations of Nicaragua and Honduras. Last week the Paris Club of official bilateral creditors agreed Honduras and Nicaragua should not have to make payments to their bilateral creditors over the next three years.

Euro-Preparations Committee

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the full remit of the new Euro-Preparations Committee; and if he will make a statement. [63556]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 15 December 1998]: The remit will be to act as a channel for the exchange of information and to develop cross-party awareness of the continuing preparations for the Euro.

Taxation

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his oral statement of 9 December 1998, Official Report, column 396, if he will make a statement on his definition of a harmful tax measure. [64024]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 December 1998]: The Code of Conduct, which was adopted by the Council of Finance Ministers on 1 December 1997, sets out the criteria against which potentially harmful tax measures should be assessed. The Code of Conduct was published in the Official Journal of the European Communities on 6 January 1998. This journal is available from the House of Commons Library.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which elements of his proposed working families tax credit he was advised required primary legislation. [62952]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 8 December 1998]: All the elements of the WFTC will require some primary legislation but, as with Family Credit currently, detailed rules will mainly be included in secondary legislation. In those cases the primary legislation will give the Treasury or the Inland Revenue the power to make the regulations.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate how many families with earnings above £20,000 will be eligible for an element of the Working Families Tax Credit. [63512]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 14 December 1998]: A reliable estimate of the number of families with earnings above £20,000 who will be eligible for the Working Families Tax Credit is not available.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the maximum earnings level at which the total amount payable in Working Families Tax Credit would exceed the total amount payable in income tax and employee and employer national insurance contributions for each of the following family types (a) married couples with a (A) one child at secondary school, (B) one child at secondary school and one child at primary school and (C) two children at secondary school and one child at primary school and (b) a lone parent with (1) one child at secondary school, (2) one child at secondary school and one child at primary school and (3) two children at secondary school and one child at primary school assuming (i) no childcare expenditure and (ii) childcare expenditure at the average level for those with childcare expenditure. [63416]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 14 December 1998]: Any family with children with someone working full-time will not have any net income tax to pay on earnings under £220 a week.

Figures for a single earner working at least 30 hours who is paying national insurance contributions at the contracted-out rate and with no childcare expenditure are given in the table. The figures apply to both couples and lone parents.

	Maximum weekly earnings at which the total amount of Working Families Tax Credit exceeds income tax and employee and employer national insurance contributions for 1999–2000 (£)
(A) 1 child aged 11–15	195
(B) 1 child aged 11–15 and 1 child aged under 11	214
(C) 2 children aged 11–15 and 1 child aged under 11	241

Note:
Estimates of the average expenditure on childcare are not available, and hence it is not possible to give equivalent figures assuming average expenditure on childcare.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the (a) number and (b) proportion of recipients of Working Families Tax Credit who will have expenditures on registered childcare, and the average expenditure among those with such expenditures. [63417]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The latest estimate of the cost of the childcare tax credit in the Working Families Tax Credit is £200 million in 2000–01, the first full year of the tax credit. This estimate is based on assumptions of the likely take-up of the childcare tax credit and it is not possible to provide reliable estimates of the numbers who will have expenditures on registered charities.

European Economy

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Carmarthen, East and Dinefwr (Mr. Williams) on 10 December 1998, Official Report, column 298, on the European economy, if he will place a copy of the Government's progress reports on product and capital markets in the Library. [64334]

Ms Hewitt: A copy of the first UK Progress Report on Product, Services and Capital Markets has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

ECOFIN (Tax Harmonisation)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Clydesdale (Mr. Hood) of 10 December 1997, Official Report, column 297, on ECOFIN, if he will place copies of (a) the Code of Conduct Group first interim report to ECOFIN, (b) the EU Commission's first combined first annual report on the implementation of the Code of Conduct for Business Taxation and fiscal state aid, (c) the progress report for the EU Commission on work concerning the taxation of income from savings and a common system of taxation from interest and royalty payments between associated companies and (d) the draft mandate for a study on company taxation, in the Library. [64335]

Dawn Primarolo: The Commission document containing the First Annual Report on the implementation of the Code of Conduct for Business Taxation and Fiscal State Aid and the Progress report on the work concerning the taxation of income from savings and a common system of taxation for interest and royalty payments between associated companies, was formally deposited in Parliament on 4 December 1998.

The Code of Conduct Group's first interim report to ECOFIN is confidential. The draft mandate has been withdrawn.

European Code of Conduct Group

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) when he plans to provide a substantive answer to the question from the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton on proposals from the Code of Conduct Group (Ref. 62330); [64336]

(2) if he will define harmful tax competition in the context of the EU. [63513]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 14 December 1998]: The Code of Conduct, which was adopted by the Council of Finance Ministers on 1 December 1997, sets out the criteria against which potentially harmful tax measures should be assessed. The Code of Conduct was published in the Official Journal of the European Communities on 6 January 1998. This journal is available from the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many current proposals are being considered by the Code of Conduct Group to tackle harmful tax competition; and if he will list them. [62342]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 7 December 1998]: The Code of Conduct is required to assess measures referred to it by Member States. The UK Government have five measures listed: International Headquarters Companies; special tax measures for the film industry; enterprise zones; 100 per cent. first year capital allowances for SMEs in Northern Ireland; and rollover relief for balancing charges arising on the disposal of ships. This does not imply that the measures are actually harmful under the terms of the Code. Discussions on these and the other measures are proceeding. International Holding Companies are due to be abolished in April next year following decisions made. The Government are confident that the other four UK measures are not actually harmful within the meaning of the Code and are robustly making that case. The Government are not at liberty to give details of other Member States' listed measures as the work of the Group is confidential according to Council Conclusions which all Member States agreed in March 1998.

Third-world Debt

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many CAFOD Fair Deal on Third World Debt Postcards he has received. [63373]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 15 December 1998]: The Chancellor of the Exchequer has received approximately 18,000 CAFOD Fair Deal on Third World Postcards this calendar year.

Productivity Gap

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the seminars and the dates on which they were held on bridging the productivity gap referred to on page 12 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy report 1998. [63840]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 17 December 1998]: Eight seminars have been held on the following themes:

Thursday 14 May—Overview seminar

Thursday 11 June—Entrepreneurship

Thursday 25 June—Case study of the automotive industry

Thursday 23 July—Innovation and technology

Tuesday 28 July—Management

Wednesday 16 September—Case study of the software industry

Tuesday 22 September—Skills

Tuesday 20 October—Finance for investment

Correspondence

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Paymaster General intends to reply to the letter of 20 July from the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan regarding his constituent Mr. Hutchison. [63649]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 14 December 1998]: A reply to the hon. Member's letter has been issued.

Tax Havens

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list current proposals from the Code of Conduct Group to tackle harmful tax competition from tax haven jurisdictions; and if he will list the jurisdictions concerned. [62330]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 7 December 1998]: Under the Code Member States have committed themselves to promoting the principles of the Code in third countries and in territories to which the treaty does not apply. Member States with dependent or associated territories will do so, within the framework of their constitutional arrangements.

Charities

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of the proposal for a common EU withholding tax on the UK charities sector. [62335]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 7 December 1998]: The draft EC directive on taxation of savings would only affect charities if they borrow from individual investors overseas. It would not apply to interest paid to a charity.

EU Withholding Tax

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the financial services other than Eurobonds which will be affected by the current proposal for a common EU withholding tax. [62333]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 7 December 1998]: The draft EC directive on taxation of savings would apply to cross-border payments of interest to individuals in the EC.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the current proposals in the EU on the withholding tax make provision for exemptions for financial centres, with particular reference to (a) Luxembourg and (b) Dublin. [62516]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 7 December 1998]: There is no provision in the draft Directive on taxation of savings for any such exemption.

Tax Records

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the implementation milestones with their dates for the introduction of the online tax records information system; and to what extent these have been achieved to date; [64418]

(2) how much is planned to be spent up to 1 April 1999 on the online tax records and information system and its related computer installation; and how much has been planned for the next three year period. [64416]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue currently has no plans to introduce an 'online tax records information system'.

Departmental Staff (Retirement)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is the policy of the Inland Revenue to enforce retirement of its staff at age 60 years. [64414]

Dawn Primarolo: Since 1993 the normal retirement age for everyone in the Inland Revenue has been 60 and this applies to both men and women. The Department's policy is that a decision to retain someone to work beyond 60 would be based on a business need, not on any personal consideration. So, only where there is an exceptional operational need, for example when a particular skill cannot quickly be replaced, is an exception allowed.

Pensions

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to make the lump sum element of a pension taxable. [64251]

Ms Hewitt: The Government's policy on pensions is set out in the Green Paper "A New Contract for Welfare: partnership in pensions" published on 15 December 1998. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Collective Investment Schemes

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to publish the draft provisions on collective investment schemes to be included in the Financial Services and Markets Bill; and what opportunity there will be for interested parties to comment on the proposed regulations. [64291]

Ms Hewitt: There will be an opportunity for interested parties to comment when the relevant provisions have been drafted.

Public Engagements (Ministers)

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the public engagements undertaken since 1 October by (a) him, (b) the Chief Secretary, (c) the Paymaster General, (d) the Financial Secretary and (e) the Economic Secretary. [63239]

Ms Hewitt: Treasury Ministers have undertaken numerous public engagements since 1 October.

Third World Debt

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the debt burden of each of the 10 poorest countries in the world. [63338]

Ms Hewitt: World Bank data in its 1998–99 World Development Report show the following external debt burdens for the 10 poorest countries:

$ billion

Country	External debt
Mozambique	5.8
Ethiopia	10.0
Democratic Republic Congo	12.8
Burundi	1.1
Sierra Leone	1.1
Niger	1.5
Tanzania	7.4
Rwanda	1.0
Nepal	2.4
Malawi	2.3

The accuracy of these data should be treated with caution due to the poor data collection and reporting mechanisms of many poor countries.

Euro Preparations Unit

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the minutes of meetings of the Euro Preparations Unit since 27 January 1998. [64187]

Ms Hewitt: The Standing Committee on EMU preparations met for the first time on 27 January 1998. Minutes of its meetings are routinely placed in the House Library.

Human Rights

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the compatibility of the disciplinary provisions contained in the proposed Financial Services and Markets Bill with the European Convention on Human Rights in the form in which the Convention will be incorporated into the United Kingdom law under the Human Rights Act 1998, with particular reference to Article 6 of the Convention. [64086]

Ms Hewitt: It is the Government's intention that the Financial Services and Markets Bill will be compatible with the Convention rights.

New Cars (EU)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each country in the EU the percentage tax or taxes paid on the price of a new car by the citizens of (a) that country and (b) other countries. [64201]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not held.

EU Budget

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each country in the European Union for each of the last 10 years and the current year (i) their net contribution, (ii) their net receipts from the EU Budget, (iii) what percentage these sums represented of the GDP of each nation in each year and (iv) what each sum in each case was in pounds sterling per capita of the country's population. [64194]

Ms Hewitt: The requested information is shown in the tables.

Table 1—Net contributions by Member States 1988–97 (million European currency units)

[1] See note below on Belgium and Luxembourg net contribution.

Note:

A negative figure indicates that the Member State is a net recipient.

The table above has been compiled from the annual reports of the European Court of Auditors. These reports do not attribute all EC spending between Member States, and so do not provide a full picture of net contributions. In particular the effects of administration spending are understated. Before 1995 the Court took account of part of administration spending. Since that date their reports have adopted a revised format which excludes administration spending completely. This change means that the figures for 1995–97 are not wholly comparable with those for 1988–94.

Most EC administration spending is disbursed in Belgium or Luxembourg. The figures above for those countries must therefore be treated with considerable caution (and are shown in italics). Figures for 1992–97 only have been published by the Commission in their report on the Operation of the Own Resources System (ref 11666/98). These figures which do not take account of all administration spending, show that, for instance, in 1997 the net receipts from the EC Budget on Belgium and Luxembourg were 1,080 mecus and 725 mecus respectively.

Net Contributions as in Table 1.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest estimate of the total EU budget for the current year; and what percentage of it he estimates will be allocated to CAP expenditure. [63104]

Ms Hewitt: The EC budget for 1998 was set at 83.53 billion ecus, of which 40.44 billion ecus, or 48.4 per cent. was allocated for CAP expenditure. Latest estimates suggest that the final outturn for the overall budget will be very close to budget, although expenditure on the CAP may be some 1 billion ecus below plans. CAP expenditure would therefore account for around 47 per cent. of all expenditure.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his policy to seek to increase co-ordination of budgetary and economic policies within EMU in order to promote growth and high employment; and if he will make a statement. [61067]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 30 November 1998]: High levels of growth and employment depend on macroeconomic stability and reform of capital, labour and product markets. The Stability and Growth Pact and Articles 103 and 104c of the Maastricht Treaty provide the basis for co-ordination and surveillance of budgetary and economic policies.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 322

SESSION 1998–99

7th December—17th December 1998

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index to the daily parts and weekly Hansard is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes, and cannot, therefore, be used in conjunction with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There will, however, be headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one will find not only Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc., under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Contributions by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Significant rulings and statements are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements'.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, res = resolution, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
